

Information about the Authors

Stan Amaladas is currently a faculty member with Baker College, Business Administration (DBA), Centre for Graduate Studies and is a lecturer at the Universities of Manitoba and Winnipeg. Professor Amaladas's research focuses on leadership studies and change with a theoretical interest in systems theory, postmodernism, social constructionism, and constructivism. His representative work includes two books and a co-edited volume on Peace Leadership with Dr. Sean Byrne. Dr. Amaladas was previously an Associate Professor and Chair of Student Engagement and Success for the School of Public Policy and Administration at Walden University, in Minneapolis. He was also Associate Professor/Acting Director for the School of Leadership Studies at Royal Roads University, in Victoria, British Columbia. Other positions held by Dr. Amaladas include the Content Expert for Leadership & Change Certificate Program, for Okanagan College and Leadership Development for Professional, Applied, and Continuing Education, University of Winnipeg. Prior to his academic career, Professor Amalada served as a Senior Learning Consultant with federal departments like the Canadian Centre for Management Development, the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, Canadian Heritage, Communications, and Canada School for Public Service.

Sean Byrne served as Director of the Arthur V. Mauro Centre for Peace and Justice (2003-2018) at St. Paul's College (SPC), University of Manitoba (UM) as well as Director of Canada's first Peace and Conflict Studies (PACS) Ph.D. program (2005-2014) and Chair and Vice-Chair of the Joint PACS M.A. Program (2009-2014) with the University of Winnipeg. In 2017, he received a UM outreach award as well as the Faculty of Graduate Studies award for excellence in graduate student mentoring. In 2018, he received the SPC memorial endowment fund award, as well as a UM Teaching Award Certificate. He also received teaching awards in 2001, 2002, and 1990. His research has been funded by SSHRC, USIP, and HRSDC. He has authored, coauthored and coedited twelve books and over 100 articles and book chapters. He also served as Chair of the Peace Studies Section of the International Studies Association for the term 2004–2006. He was Vice-Chair for the International Section of the Society for Professionals in Dispute Resolution for the term 1997–1999. He has consulted with Ireland's special advisor to the Taoiseach, and the Europe and Asian senior advisor on the US Senate Foreign Relations Committee about the Northern Ireland peace process. He is interested in critical and emancipatory peacebuilding, social justice, international peacebuilding, youth and women peacebuilders, and ethnic conflicts.

Mauricio Meschoulam is Associate Professor, International Relations Department, Universidad Iberoamericana, Mexico City. Dr. Mauricio specializes in terrorism and peacebuilding. He founded the Mexico Research Center for Peace (CIPMEX) which focuses on research-based policy recommendations regarding the topics of psychosocial effects caused by organized crime related violence, as well as peacebuilding. His most recent book in English is Organized Crime, Fear and Peacebuilding in Mexico (2019). He has also authored books and chapters about terrorism, the Middle East, and international relations in general. The co-authors of the investigation presented in this issue are researchers at the Mexico Research Center for Peace, based at Universidad Iberoamericana in Mexico.

Ireoluwatomi Oloke has received her Ph.D. from the Peace and Conflict Studies program at the University of Manitoba. She has coauthored an article in the Journal of Ethnic Studies.

David Toohey is a Designated Associate Professor at the Institute of Liberal Arts and Sciences at Nagoya University in Japan. His current research includes bordering, Latina/o identity and environmentalism in the U.S. Southwest and the use of the arts by political movements. He is the author of Borderlands Media: Cinema and Literature as Opposition to the Oppression of Immigrants (2012).