The truth only hurts when you lie to yourself. Bill Moyar?

Last Tuesday, open dorm petitions were in the student union lobby in an effort to get more signatures. Some people signed and we thank them. Some people didn't though. One major excuse was that they were either seniors or they live off campus. This seems very selfish to me. Did it ever occur to them that there are other students who live on campus and who will be here next year? Did it ever occur to them that they could stop thinking of just themselves and help the rest of us?

Another excuse was that they were not in favor of more freedoms in open dorms. There was more to this petition than just open dorms. It is for the freedom to live the way we want and to make up our own minds as to how we want to live. I believe that if a dorm wants open dorms it can have them without any red tape. If they don't want them, don't have them. The main objective of the petition is for us to be able to make our own mind. If we can get more freedom in open dorms, maybe we can get more freedom in other areas. Frankly, I'm tired of being treated as sheep by the administration. We deserve better than this! Don't let the administration make up your mind for you. Stand up for your right to make up your own mind and live the way you wish!

Mental health, where? Conservative estimates predict that one in ten persons will experience some kind of mental or emotional disorder in one's lifetime. Perhaps, you, a member of your family or almost certainly some of your friends and acquaintances will encounter emotional or behavioral difficulties. What does this prognosis say about the present system.

If it were your responsibility to find counseling for another, who would you turn to, a psychiatrist or a psychologist? Indeed, what is the difference between the two "professions"? Does it matter? More important yet which treatment approach (psychoanalytic, client-centered or behavior modification) will be the most beneficial to the consumer in developing coping behaviors?

It may be claimed that psychology is amoral (a questionable assumption), but can the same be said of the end to which it is put? Is not social psychology (thru advertising) conditioning us daily? All psychological approaches control to the extent that they are effective. The behavior psychologists are relatively forthright in admitting...

THEM?
AHEM!

MEANINGFUL AMBIGUITIES IN "NEXT, NEXT, NEXT SHORTEST POEM IN THE WORLD"

In the World is a relatively compact work of verse, contrasted to Dante's Inferno or Beowulf. Despite this poem's conciseness, author Richard Crispin has carefully managed to conceal some very meaningful ambiguities in this poem. This paper (due to lack of space) will deal only with one type of ambiguities: the extremely subtle, well-hidden type.

The average reader will readily respond to Crispin's poem except the obvious meaning that the author tried to convey. However, as every English teacher and poetry critic knows, an author's intended meaning is usually irrelevant to the reader. A great poetry critic once remarked, "We can't take poems at their surface level. They are too superficial that way. We must strive and search for those hidden ambiguities. Otherwise I'd be out of a well paying job. I might even have to work!"

So disregarding the superficial, obvious meaning of "Next, Next, Next, Shortest Poem in the World," the true poetry reader must ask himself, "Just what the hell did this guy mean, way down in his subconscious?" To find out, the reader must studiously analyze the poem. The best way to analyze a poem is usually line by line, beginning with line one, and proceeding to the end, although several brilliant critics have used the 'begin-at-the-end method' also known as the backwards approach in an attempt to find new meaning.

We will go by the standard method of poetic analysis, beginning with line one which reads, "Them?"

The word "Them" seems simple enough, being a paradigm of ambiguities. First of all, "Them" itself is ambiguous. We know it is plural, but how plural? Does it mean one couple, a boy and a girl, as the poem would obviously seem to suggest to most careless readers? Nonsense! That is too simple. "Them" must stand for something deep, something deep, such as the whole human race, or better yet, the Gods who control us (excluding a monotheistic viewpoint and reverting back to classical beliefs).

Written "Them?", the first line is open to the type of division that poetic critics are so fond of. An effective division is to take this line and break it up into two distinct parts, "The" and "Them?"

"The" is the English definite article, but what does "Them?" mean? Is it, of course, the thirteenth letter in the alphabet. Thirteen is supposed unlucky, and connotes superstition. From superstition we think next of fate, and how is fate destined? By the Gods, of course. This interpretation brings us back to the use of "Them?" to symbolize the Gods who control us, or fate (if one wishes to be atheistic).

The question mark can be thought of in its usual sense, giving the first line the meaning "What about the Gods? What about fate?" This interpretation seems valid enough, but we need more proof. Visually analyzing the question mark, we see a hook over a dot. That does the hook stand for? In this context, it would appear to stand for power and destructive ability. The dot may stand for anything round, such as the earth (which although not perfectly round, is more round than flat, square or triangular). The hook points out? We have a destructive, powerful force looming over the world. Taken with our previous interpretation, we begin to see what the poet is really driving at.

Moving on to the last line, we have "Ahem!" The word "ahem!" is an exclamatory sound used to attract attention. Literally then, we are being urged to pay attention to the Gods of superstition who are poised fatefully over the earth with a destructive power. Breathlessly, we search on for the true meaning of this poem.

We now divide the work into "A," "hem," and "!" "A" is the indefinite article meaning one, some, any or each. "Hem" has two meanings. Its first and most common meaning (therefore, the one we rule out) is the edge of a garment. The second meaning is an ejaculatory sound. An ejaculatory sound is a quickly uttered exclamatory sound. Along with our previous interpretations, we know that the God of superstition who fatefully and powerfully loom over us are going to quickly utter one sound that we should pay attention to.

Now, the moment of climax is close. What will they utter to us? The great philosophical message will we hear? We turn for our answer to the only part of the poem left, the exclamatory mark. That the hell could the Gods mean by that? All that an exclamatory mark connotes is surprise or emotion. This doesn't seem to cut it in our interpretation much, so we look at it visually. All we have is a dot. This symbol can stand for the world and something above it again. That would be too simple. And besides, we've already mentioned page 3... used that. So we ask ourselves, when do we use lines and dots? In mathematics, of course. The Gods have told us to use math to decipher their message to us.

We turn to the letters 1-h-e-m in the first line, and assign to them numbers in respect to the alphabet. T is the 20th letter, h is the 8th, e is the 5th, and m is the 13th. Similarly, to a-h-e-m, we assign 1-8-5-13. Now how do we have a math problem, with the numbers 20-8-5-13 directly over 1-8-5-13. What shall we do with these numbers? Since we suspect that we should perform some difficult operation (to avoid the obvious again).

Addition is the easiest mathematical operation. 20 plus 1 equals 21. 8 and 5 is 13. 10 and 13 is 26. We now have as an answer 21-16-10-26. This is the Gods' message to us in code. Once we break this code, we will know the secret of the universe, and the true meaning of this poem.

First of all, what does 21 stand for? Twenty-one is the age when boys become men, when they gain freedom. 21 must stand, therefore, for freedom. 16 connotes sweetness (as in sweet sixteen). We now have decoded half of the message, with the message reading "Freedom," "Sweet" so far. Now we go on to the last two numbers, 10 and 26. Either of these numbers seem to symbolize much, so we will break up these numbers into four separate numbers: 1, 0, 2, and 6.

1 could stand for won, but any fool can see that this is highly illogical. The more logical assumption is that 1 should let 1 stand for won (just because it sounds like won obviously doesn't mean that it symbolizes won; this, however, is a mistake common to novice poetry critics) but for one, the individual in our society. 0 could symbolize nothingness, but all critics agree that everything symbolizes something in a poem. 0 could represent the word "owe." "Freedom," "Sweet," "One," and "owe" are our four words so far. Now we take the 2 and the 6. The 2 simply stands for the word "to" in this context. We are left with the last symbol, 6. But does this symbolize the 6? We are momentarily stumped. Perhaps some have shown us that the best pattern to follow when we don't understand a part of a poem is to read it over and over until it makes sense. Six, six, six, six, six, six, six, six, six, six, six, six! We have it! A freudian slip has given us the meaning of our last symbol. We now have the message almost completely decoded. All that is left to do is to put the key words in order and supply any small connecting words.

"Freedom; sweet one owe to sex" is our rough decoded message. Add the filling words to make sense, we have the powerful and destructive Gods' message to Earth: "Freedom is sweet: one owes it to sex." We now fully realize the powerfully effective meaning of this poem that was previously buried under layers of ambiguities and superficiality. And we owe it all to the conventional method of poetic analysis and freedom of the press (and sex).

GOVERNMENT TO REVISE SUBVERSIVES LIST: HASN'T BEEN CHANGED SINCE 1955

WASHINGTON (LNS)—People sometimes may wonder what the Federal Subversive Activties Control Board does with its $450,000 a year budget. Fender no more.

The Justice Department is about to petition the board to update the Attorney General's blacklist of organizations which has been unchanged since 1955.

The list, which played a big role during the McCarthy era is still being used by the Army to determine if someone is ineligible to serve in the Army because of political affiliations.

The old list included for example, the Abraham Lincoln Brigade—a group of U.S. Volunteers that went to fight against the Fascists in the Spanish Civil War in 1936.

Rent to students because of:
1) unpreparedness on the part of the student tenants,
2) breaking of lease by tenant,
3) and just an overall unfavorable impression of student tenants.

Recommendations by the committee include that when you go for your interview, try to create a favorable impression (you're in a position to make or break this off-campus housing program and the community reaction to Madison students as tenants).
1) dress neatly
2) speak politely
3) ask about things, don't just assume!
4) before just lighting up a cigarette, ask if it is alright.

Generally, apply rules of good etiquette. You might even go out of your way a little...

Once placed in an apartment, room, etc., the student is only required to pay a $2 service fee.

Bill made a point of informing me that the school cannot get involved with the finding of off-campus housing for students because of legal and financial hassles. What the college will do is have a "Housing Contract" sent out to all students to see which ones plan to live in the dorms in '72-'73 and will be required to pay the room and board fees. This in effect will be a lease, a contract between the student and Madison College.

The deadline for this contract will be May 7. Bill emphasized that once this contract is made, no student can live off-campus and expect to get all his room and board fees refunded.

If you would like to find out additional information you can call the Off-Campus Housing Committee in their office at #6444 and #6445, or visit them in Johnston 37.

Off-Campus Housing

In the '72-'73 school year those students over 21 and/or juniors or seniors may live off-campus, but the "housing situation is very tight," says Bill Bassett, chairman of the entirely student run and controlled Off-Campus Housing Committee.

The committee has as its function to act only as a referral agency to students desiring housing, other than that which the school provides. Any student can use this service by going to Johnston 37 (office hours 12-4 and 6-9, Monday thru Friday) and registering. The committee then gives the student a listing of perhaps 5 local landlords that will rent to students. "From them on it's up to the student," Bill says. "We operate on a first come - first served basis." He cautioned this reporter, however, that many variables enter into the situation before a student gets placed in satisfactory housing.

For example: The Committee does not control who gets the housing; this is between the student and the landlord.

Bill pointed out that often a landlord will be reluctant to (cont. column 2)
How should a vacation be used? It seems that not many professors can give you the correct answer. As soon as the prof. looks at the schedule and sees a vacation, he will tell the students that during the vacation they will have to read these two books, or they will have to do a critique on that book. Whatever it is that the prof. wants the students to do, it is always too much.

The reason for having vacations in the schedule is to give the student a little rest from the constant grind of school work. Any professor that gives work to be done during a vacation is out of his tree. If the student has a huge paper hanging over his head while he should be resting, he's not going to get the paper done or the rest that he needs.

Some professors maintain that the student will have plenty of time, but the student is, so to speak, in a race to see if he can get enough rest before time runs out.

Any prof. with the habit of making students use their time on something "constructive" should be shot.

The conflict between different approaches to the liberty of man and mind or between different views of human dignity and the right of the individual is continuous. The dividing line goes within ourselves, within our own peoples and also with in other nations. It does not coincide with any political or geographical boundaries. The ultimate fight is one between the human and the sub-human. We are on dangerous ground if we believe that any individual, any nation or any ideology has a monopoly on rightness, liberty and human dignity.

Last Monday, March 20, the Supreme Court ruled in an 8-1 decision that college students seeking to register and vote in campus communities must fight their legal battles as individuals rather than to seek a legal remedy in a class action. This means that each student wishing to vote where they attend school must file suit separately. No ruling can be made which covers all students.

Essentially, the effect of this ruling will probably discourage many students who live away from home from voting. Not only must a student live in a locality for a specified length of time, but he must prove that he is a legitimate resident. It isn't clear exactly what "legitimate resident" means so it is feasible that localities could prevent students from voting with a minimum justification. It is interesting to note that only students must fulfill this requirement; other citizens must only show that they have lived in the locality for a certain length of time.

WITCH HUNTERS FUNDED AGAIN

The House Internal Security Committee has been granted more than $500,000 to continue its antidemocratic activities. Led by Southern Democrats, 302 representatives voted for the appropriation and 102 opposed it. The "no" vote was the largest yet in the effort to put HISC out of business. Representative Robert F. Orinman (D-Mass.) and other opponents of the committee centered their fire on the more than 750,000 dossiers kept by the committee on people who exercise their constitutional right to dissent from government policy.

Phi Mu Sorority is sponsoring a hike for HOPE. This means we need your feet to help raise money for the hospital ship the S.S. Hope. This ship travels to countries around the world giving medical aid, but more important training people to care for themselves by instructing doctors, nurses, etc. It takes about $7,000,000 a year to keep the ship in operation. Last year Phi Mu's in the nation gave approximately $75,000 to help support the ship. Phi Mu at Madison would like to do its part, but WE NEED YOUR HELP!!!!

Our feet alone are too few in number and would wear out before the 20 mile hike is ended. The hike will take place on Saturday, April 15th leaving the quad at 8:00 A.M. In order to be a part of the hike, sign up in the P.O. lobby from 9-5 during Hope Week, April 10-15. You may sign up as a participant, then you need a sponsor. Try to find a friend to pledge a certain amount of money per mile as your sponsor. When you sign up, you will receive a card which will give you a map of the route as well as directions and a place to list your sponsors.

Hope Week itself will consist of interesting activities to let you know exactly what the ship Hope does. This is the schedule for Hope Week.

April 10th, Monday- Skit and Slide presentations at 6:30 P.M. and 8:30 P.M. in Harrison (room to be announced)

April 12th, Wednesday- Speaker and movie, Doctor, Teacher, Friend at 7:00 P.M. in Anthony Seeger Auditorium

April 15th, Saturday- Hike for Hope (Put on your walking shoes!!)

Tuesday and Thursday nights, (April 11th and 13th), at 10:00 P.M. we are jogging to get in shape for the hike. COME JOG WITH US!!

ABOLISH DEATH PENALTY
In campaigning for reinstatement of the death penalty in California, Governor Ronald Reagan conceded there would be a "certain cruelty" in slaugthering the 107 prisoners who are on death row in that state. But, he said, "I think there is cruelty when you execute a chicken to have a Sunday dinner." In so glibly comparing human beings to chickens, Reagan exposed his own moral depravity and his contempt for the lives of poor working people, mostly Blacks, who have historically been the victims of capital punishment.

The Feb. 18 ruling of the California supreme court that the death penalty is unconstitutional was followed on the heels of a New Jersey supreme court decision Jan. 17, which voided that state's DEATH PENALTY. But hundreds of prisoners are still awaiting the decision of the U.S. Supreme Court to whether capital punishment violates the "cruel and unusual punishment" provision of the U.S. Constitution's Eighth Amendment.

Capital punishment is the most extreme form of repression used against poor, Black, and Chicano working people under the capitalist system of "justice" which always to justice for the rich. Of the 697 persons on death row as of Jan. 18, more than 50 percent are Black. The discriminatory use of the death penalty is even more obvious in the South. Of the 61 people who have been executed in Georgia, 58 were Black. Of the 455 people executed for "rape" in the South as a whole since statistics have been kept, 405 were Black. These figures do not include lynchings.

You don't find capitalists or bankers on death row—or even in prison. Yet they carry out murderous wars and live on profits stolen from working people. These are considered "legal" under this system. Capitalists' "justice," for example, doesn't put Ronald Reagan in jail for stealing from the public by paying no taxes last year. Nixon and former attorney general Mitchell won't be imprisoned for illegally dropping the billion-dollar ITT antitrust suit. Owners of war industries are not put on death row for living off war profits—for living off the systematic slaughter of the Indo-Chinese peoples and American GIs.

The entire legal system, prison system, and the institution of capital punishment are designed to terrorize, punish, or eliminate those who have been most victimized by this society, the most downtrodden and brutalized by the inequality and violence of capitalism.

The voiding of the death penalty in California must be defended against the attempts by Reagan and other reactionaries to reinstate it and to execute the death-row prisoners. And the decision in California should be extended so as to end the death penalty throughout the country.

ANOTHER BLOW STRUCK AT ANTI-ABORTION FORCERS

On March 1 a three-judge federal court ruled that the 122 year old New Jersey abortion law is "vague" and violates a woman's "constitutional right of privacy...to determine for herself whether to bear a child." The decision stemmed from two suits against the New Jersey women, and the Jersey League for Peace and Freedom, and the Princeton YWCA.

The New Jersey decision follows a series of court decisions, most recently in Vermont, Fla., and Virginia, where the courts have ruled all or parts of the states' abortion laws unconstitutional. Just prior to the New Jersey decision, the New York State Court of Appeals upheld that state's liberalized law in the face of a challenge by anti-abortion proponent Robert Byrn.

These new victories set further precedents for ridding every state of its oppressive abortion laws. Legal fights against these laws will be part of the focus of Abortion Action Week, May 1-6, called by the Women's National Action Coalition (WOMACC).
