SGA Open Meeting Discusses Travel Map, Directory, Other Projects

Student Government held an open joint meeting on March 9. At this, the second such meeting this session, reports from committee chairmen working on several new projects were given and discussed. Specific proposals that are under consideration are housing for big weekend dates, a planned Travel Map and Campus Directory, the organization of a campus chapter of Mortar Board, and the initiation of a "reading period" before exams. Approved at the meeting was the election of Judicial dorm representatives which will go into effect next year.

It was reported by the committee on housing that Dean Garber has written letters to Harrisonburg residents inquiring as to the possibility of accommodations for out-of-town visitors on big weekends. The results of these inquiries, however, were not yet known at the meeting date.

Both the Travel Map and the Campus Directory, a directory map of the campus for visitors, are still in the planning stages. The committee reported problems encountered in location and construction materials.

Thursday, there will be a meeting of the Student Organizations Activities Committee to approve the installation of a Mortar Board Chapter at Madison. Mortar Board is a Senior Women's national honor society based on scholarship but also serving as a service organization. Upon approval by the SOA Committee, the proposed organization will be presented to a faculty committee for ratification.

Much of the discussion during the meeting centered around the possibility of having "reading days" preceding the examination period. It was reported that, due to the fact that the school calendar has already been planned through 1968, initiation of a "reading period" (Continued on Page 3)

Music Department Presents Recital

Students of the music department of Madison College will present a recital on Tuesday at 8:00 p.m. in the auditorium of Anthony Seeger Campus School.

Featured at the piano will be: Lynn Shomo, Elena Maza, Dave Lingebach, Ruth Liljegren, JoAnne Dudley, J. M. Beale, Lois Hayter, and Judy Meister.

Performing on the strings will be: Mary Buckwalter, Wayne Taylor, and Diane Wasielewski. Vocal compositions will be sung by Linda Keff, soprano; Wayne Brown, tenor; and Dorothy Kalton, soprano.

Reed instruments will be played by: Jack Foster, Dennis Young, Nancy Walters, Fay Huffman, Andrea Dodson, and Sylvia Kessel.

Dorms Receive Greater Judicial Representation

The judicial council recently approved a plan for wider dorm representation for the coming years.

Each dorm that does not have a judicial representative at the beginning of the year will elect one representative to the council. The council members living in the dorms will be familiar with the life of the dormitory and will be easily accessible to the students living there.

The dorm council member will serve two purposes. First, it will be her duty to investigate any major problem in her dormitory, present the case to Judicial Council, and be present while the case is being considered. She will be free to join the discussion and make suggestions, but she will not be allowed to vote. Her second duty will be to explain all rules and answer all questions the girls in her dorm may have concerning them.

These elected representatives will undergo a training session in which Judicial members will explain and clarify all the rules in the handbook, instruct them in investigating procedures, and answer any questions the representatives may have.

Minor Officers Occupy Important New Roles

The new legislative vice-president of the Student Government Association is Marion Stallings, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Stallings of Hopewell, Va. Marion, an English major, is a member of Sigma Phi Lambda honor society, Phi Sigma Iota, national romance language Honor Society, Kappa Delta Pi national education honor society, and Alpha Sigma Tau social sorority.

The judicial vice-president of SGA is Susan Oakes, daughter of Mrs. Madeline B. Oakes of Danville, Va. Susan, a Latin and psychology major is vice president of Alpha Sigma Alpha social sorority. She is a member of Sigma Phi Lambda honor society and the Porpoise Club.

Sylvia Witt is the new secretary of the SGA. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Witt of Salem, Va., and she is a business education major. Sylvia is treasurer of Zeta Tau Alpha social fraternity, vice president of Pi Omega Pi, and a member of both Phi Beta Lambda and Sigma Phi Lambda.

Judy Williams, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Vernon B. Williams of Timberville, Va., was elected to the office of Treasurer of the SGA. Judy, a business education major, is the treasurer of the junior class, and a member of Alpha Sigma Tau social sorority.

Karen Bowman, daughter of Mrs. E. Clifford Bowman of Harrisonburg, is vice president of Honor Council. Karen, a home economics education major, is the president of the women day students club, a member of Phi Omicron Tau national home economics honor fraternity, and the Frances Sale Club. She is social vice president of Alpha Sigma Tau Social Sorority and has been a member of honor council for two years.

Julia Hogge, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas J. Hogge of Pogooson, Va., has been elected to the position of vice president of the YWCA. Julia is a mathematics major in Curriculum III. She has been a Y member for three years, a class representative, and a Panhellenic council member for two years. Elected as an outstanding member of her Junior class, Julia was president of the class. She has also participated on the extramural basketball team.

Sharon Addison, daughter of Mrs. Lauvenia Addison of Arcola, Va., is now chairman of the social committee. She is in curriculum III and is majoring in mathematics and psychology. Sharon is a member of the mathematics club, Zeta Tau Alpha social fraternity, and the Student Education Association. She is editor of the junior section of the Bluestone and a junior marshal.

Liz Ferris, business manager of the Bluestone, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph F. Warren of Springfield, Va. Liz has worked on the Bluestone as editor of patrons. She was class representative to the YWCA and has been on the recreation council. Liz is a member of Orchesis and has worked as a librarian.

Jeri Hazelwood is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter A. Hazelwood of Norfolk, Va. She is now associate editor of The Breeze. Jeri is an English major in curriculum III. She has worked on the Breeze staff for three years as reporter, managing editor, exchange editor, and headline writer. She (Continued on Page 4)

Freshmen Name Officers As Outstanding

Madison's Freshman Class has elected its outstanding freshmen. They are Barbie Beacham, Suzanne Hobson, and Barry Wilson.

Barbie Beacham, who holds the office of Freshman class president, is from Baltimore, Maryland, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Beacham. Aside from her duties as class president, Barbie's activities so far have included first team extramural hockey, dean's list, Sigma Phi Lambda, and being elected by the Freshmen to be their May Court Princess. A physical education major, Barbie's interests tend toward sports, especially hockey, lacrosse, and, just recently, skiing at Blue Knob in Pennsylvania. About Madison, Barbie comments, "The thing that impresses me the most is the kids." And about her class she says, "I think we have a really enthusiastic Freshman class and I'm looking forward to Class Day."

Suzanne Hobson, Freshman Sportsleader, is from Richmond, Virginia, and is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. R. Hobson. She is under the secondary education curriculum plan with a major in English. She has been her dormitory treasurer, campaign manager for Karen Bowman, chairman of the Freshman Class Christmas tree committee, a participant in basketball intramurals, and is presently a Stratford apprentice and a member of the Y. W. C. A. Suzanne's hobbies include reading, sports, almost any outdoor activity. She also enjoys summer traveling. Of the Freshman Class, Suzanne believes, "...that the Class of '69 has more spirit, more talent, and more potential than any other group I've ever seen. I'm very proud to be an officer. I wouldn't want to be in any other class—that's for sure!"

From Tarrytown, New York, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. LeRoy Wilson, Jr., Barry Wilson is the Vice President of the Freshman Class. Under the elementary education curriculum, Barry has not yet decided upon her particular concentration. She is presently a member of Sigma Phi Lambda, and the Y. W. C. A. and she has participated in the archery intramural program. Her hobbies include art, drama, hiking, camping, and studies in psychic phenomena. Thought of future plans brings hopes of travel to Barry. She is working this summer in order to raise money to go to Europe in 1967. In conclusion, this outstanding Freshman says, "I'm proud that my beanie has the number '69 on it. The Class of '69 has really proved that there is quality in numbers!"

Editor Says Faculty Opinions Concerning SGA Not Needed

Cooperation has finally come to Madison College. This stranger has been prompted to action by the Fine Arts Festival in the staging of the Unicorn. The modern dance club is receiving the help of both the music and home economics departments for this production. Such a pull of talents proves that there can be departmental cooperation, but this is not enough.

Madison has a student government whose function includes the development and enforcement of rules for the college community. This body is not a group apart from the student body but a very integral part of the student body. Government is elected by the students and therefore deserves the fullest cooperation of each member of the student body. Rules and restrictions made by student government correspond in no way to those passed from hierarchy to subjects. The members of student government must follow all regulations as closely as any non-council members. Also, these rules are subject to change according to suggestions from the student body. Class representatives to council are not elected just to fill empty chairs. Their purpose is to relay the opinions and criticisms of the students to the proper channels. They should be made to serve their purpose.

Madison also has a faculty whose opinion is held in high esteem by the student membership. But the opinions of faculty members should not enter into a judgment or condemnation of the student government.

Government was created by students and functions to serve only students. If the student body feels the need to criticize or revise student government then let it speak, but not in the words of faculty members.

Blum Talks Here

Dr. John Morton Blum, chairman of the history department at Yale University, will speak in Wilson Auditorium on Friday, at 2:00 P.M. His topic will be, "Home Front, 1938-1945: What Brave New World?"

Dr. Blum is the author of JOE TUMULTY AND THE WILSON ERA, THE REPUBLICAN ROOSEVELT, WOODROW WILSON AND THE POLITICS OF MORALITY, and several other novels.

Dr. Blum was born in New York City. He received his A.B., M.A., and Ph.D. from Harvard University, and was assistant professor and associate professor of history at Massachusetts Institute of Technology between 1948 and 1957. He is a trustee of Buckingham School, and is also active in the Andover Alumni Council, American Studies Association, the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, and the American Historical Association.

To Clarify

Last week the new automobile regulation concerning seniors was released. It has been brought to our attention that the wording is slightly confusing.

The rule permits seniors to have cars during their last eight weeks on campus. If Easter vacation ends in the last ten weeks of school, seniors are permitted to have their cars following this vacation. This would allow seniors to have cars on campus for the final ten weeks of the session.

College Exchange

Wednesday night I laughed at the antics of our professors as they freely gave of their time and talents to serve dinner, and I, along with my fellow students, gladly donated money which will go to the Easter Seal Fund.

Meanwhile, students at the College of William and Mary also donated to worthy causes. By paying a penny a minute for all time past midnight, coeds were allowed to take late permissions until 1:00 a.m. The money was collected by dormitory representatives, and will go to the World University Service, the American Hemophilia Foundation and Eastern State Hospital.

Students Are Rude, Selfish

Dear Editor,

Last Saturday night, I disappointedly came to the conclusion that Madison College has some of the rudest individuals to ever set foot on this earth. It appears quite obvious that they are also immature, inconsiderate, and aware of only their selfish wants and desires. This generality is in reference to the disrespect paid by Madison students to Jane Rollason and others who have taken their time and effort to entertain students before the campus movie. After five minutes of being surrounded by squirming individuals who kept complaining among the crowd that it was past time for the movie to begin, I had to leave just to control myself from standing up and damning every single adolescent in there.

I certainly don't enjoy being a part of the image undoubtedly displayed to outsiders who may have been present. If I were one of the girls who has given her time and effort to entertain Madison, it would only take an incident as portrayed last week to convince one never to appear again before a herd of inconsiderate juveniles. Madison, I think we owe some people an apology and future respect. Respectfully submitted,
An embarrassed student

Hite Translates Spanish Laws

Dear Editor,

"The system was based on hearings and on accusations. The latter had to be signed and were reviewed in order to remove false accusations. Once received and reviewed, the accusations led to the detention of the accused who was 'invited' to confess spontaneously, without counsel, without being informed of what the charges against him were or who the accusers were."

The above statement is a translation of a description of procedures used by the Tribunal of the Holy Inquisition of Spain in the 15th century.

The Breeze staff wishes to initiate dorm delivery of the newspaper. Since our circulation staff is too small for such a project, we are asking for volunteers from each dorm to see that this is done weekly. Anyone wishing to help should contact Ersie Dawson, Logan 3rd floor.

Letter To The Editor

Los Alumnos A Accion

Students rise to action—this seems the key phrase among students and faculty members who hope to immediately revolutionize Madison, by changing it from a tradition, conservative state school to a liberal, intellectual utopia. If this is the key to progress and improvement, I too wish to use this phrase, but in a slightly different manner. My call to student action is action in making your own decisions. You have a mind of your own—use it. Don't be swayed by high sounding phrases, think the situation through for yourself. This word of advice can apply to the overall campus situation; however, my call to action concerns the most recent, unfair and invalid criticism of our judicial process. But I feel, it is a little unfair when levied by professors (a few, not all) who fail to really understand our judicial system; who have never seen it work, and who are not really afected by it. It seems a little strange to me if our system is as unjust, as these criticisms seem to imply that the student body who is a part of the system, the students tried by this system, and those who are directly influenced by it have, to my knowledge, voiced no severe criticisms or accusations as to its unfairness.

I have served on student government, I know your officers for next year, and I think I can honestly say student government wishes, to have the student body's suggestions, criticisms, and help. They have repeatedly pleaded with you to contact your representatives with your comments. They have started open senate meetings seeking your ideas and criticisms. I feel that student government is willing to make changes, revisions, and re-evaluations of their processes if you, the student body, want this,

Ignorance, Apathy Infect Us

Dear Editor:

During the past few weeks, it has been strongly advocated that the general atmosphere of the Madison Campus is one of apathy, not only among students, but among faculty members as well. I have heard it stated that one can tell whether a campus is "alive" or not by what the students are talking about, "by the quality of the college newspaper, and by the college bulletin boards." Using this criteria, is Madison College "alive"?

A college campus is the one place in American society where there should be a vital interest in current events, on and off the campus. An essential part of one's education is an exchange of ideas and opinions about these events with his fellow students and professors. However, how can one discuss happenings when he has little or no knowledge of them? A part of the reason for the indifference on campus is that the students are uninformed. Likewise, the students are uninformed because they are apathetic.

Excuses have been made for this apathy and ignorance. Some people claim that they don't have enough time to keep up with current events. However, one does not have to spend hours reading about the important issues of the day; surely everyone can spare the time to read one good newspaper and listen to one good news broadcast each day. I have actually heard others say that they don't have access to good newspapers and broadcasts, although the college library has newspapers and the radio and television have continual news reports. In addition, professors express views on current issues at regular intervals. Still, a few students have expressed the idea that lethargy is like a contagious disease; and once they have been infected, they can find no cure. It seems to me, that despite the attitude of one's peers, he should have enough self-respect and sense of obligation to himself to want to be informed and interested. I submit, therefore, that there is no excuse for ignorance on the Madison Campus.

Being acquainted with the facts is the beginning of the fight against apathy. Yet, it is not sufficient to just be informed; one must think about his knowledge. He must develop some idea about his own position in reference to these issues. Such action is an essential part of maturing and assuming the role and responsibility of an adult, and is, I fear, seriously lacking among the students at Madison College.

It must be, then, that this indifference and ignorance prevents people from speaking out in defense of what they believe or in an attack on what they do not believe in, or perhaps the students are afraid to express themselves. If the latter is true, of what are the students afraid?

LITTLE MAN ON CAMPUS

College Women Give Views On Education, Sex, Family

by Dorothy Seymore

Editor's Note: This is the second in a series of three sections concerning the college woman and the world in general, the college woman and the world around her, the college woman and her views of herself. This second part concerns the college woman and her personal world. The topics are family, sex, religion, and education.

With her optimistic view of the world in which she lives, how does the college woman regard family ties, religion, and sex? What does she find as the most important thing in her life now?

In answer to this last question, most of those girls questioned, responded that their education was necessary to their future. Planning for the future, pleasing parents, and preparing for marriage all hinged on the completion of education. One girl stated that her education will enable her to make the most of her present potential. Another said, "Being happy is most important; to have pride in myself; to be loved and obtain an inner security is necessary to be happy."

Just how necessary is a college education to the American woman? Views ranged from the opinion that "the American woman doesn't need a college education," to the opinion of "it is vital." The pro's felt that a college education is necessary because "woman has a place in the world, and to keep it, she must compete with man. College is becoming just as much a necessity as a high school diploma." The con's, on the other hand, felt that "unless she plans a career, a woman does not need a college education to sit home with children."

The majority saw the career woman as a free and independent individual. The following are some typical responses: "I think a woman who wants a career before, or in place of marriage is a very strong minded person, and I admire her." "She should not have to be tied down with a family if she desires a career." However, on the other side of the question, a few views state: "We (women) are put here to be married and have a family."

The subject of pre-marital sex brought many diverse views and no conclusion could be drawn. Most frequently encountered, was the statement that "I don't agree with it, but I don't condemn anyone who does." Most feel it is a personal thing, not to be taken lightly, but with a great deal of thought. One person stated, "It depends on the couple; for some it could strengthen the relationship, it could ruin others." Another stated that "pre-marital sex is permissible. It is one of the many facets to contribute to a good relationship. However, the couple shouldn't depend on it to hold them together. Marriage is still sacred."

Most saw marriage as sacred and binding, but noted a drift toward more divorces. One stated that, "Marriage values have not changed, but people are twisting these values to suit their own situation. It depends on how you have been brought up, and the example set by your own parents." All emphasized the importance of love in any relationship.

How do the views and desires of parents fit into the college woman's outlook? "I respect my parents' views," states one girl, "but I believe I should make my own decisions, because as a young adult, the decisions I make will have a definite influence on my future." Almost everyone else followed this line of thinking, stating that they respected their parents and realized what they had done for them, but felt that they had their own lives to lead.

What about God? One student feels that "religion is psychologically necessary in every society. I don't care which deity people believe in, or rather, what they call him. I call him God and I know he exists." Religious faith was evident in most responses, although many also felt that "denomination is merely a distinction between different approaches to worship," and felt it unnecessary. One stated that, "I believe in God, but not in all aspects of my denomination." Another finds that her religious beliefs have dwindled almost to nothing. She says, "college life away from home tries your religion more than anything. You aren't protected by a family that says 'Go to church!'" "I am trying to see if I believe in some things. I am indifferent and am waiting for something to happen. When you are left to your own thoughts, you begin to see things in a different way."

Thoughtful Trio Pleases Students

by Judy Meyer

When David, della Rosa, and Brooks visited here, they hadn't heard of Madison and Madison hadn't heard of them. There was not a large turn-out for their performance, but those who came appeared quite pleased.

This singing group exuded a personal touch which few groups possess. Quite willingly, they conceded to pose for pictures and gave a preview performance in both the dining hall and Bluestone. When David misplaced his cufflinks, rather than make do on his own, he came out to ask the girls for hairpins. After the show, the audience was invited into their dressing room to talk with, and meet the young singers. Autographs were signed with ready compliance.

Stories read beforehand told that their music was different. The songs were drawn from many fields of music and each was sung with equal skill. It seemed as if they hit upon just the songs the audience had been wanting to hear. Yet, many new songs were also included. Hod David not only sings with the group, but also writes songs which they use.

Unlike many singers of today, these three really seemed to enjoy their work and sent an electric current through their receptive audience.

After the performance, when Hod David was asked how the group had united he explained that he and Skip Brooks had been singing together in a group when they heard Dianne. The boys knew that the three had to get together. They feel that there is a market for good music, although the record companies disagree. David, della Rosa and Brooks are now attempting to prove these companies wrong.

Fencing Team Crosses Foils In New Season

On March 12 Madison's fencing team faced its first defeat of the season as they crossed foils with a well-prepared Mary Washington team. Both teams lost.

On the brighter side; however, they may boast of two previous wins. In February, both teams soundly whipped Mary Baldwin. On March 2 the first team beat Hollins College, while the second team was also defeated.

Waynesboro will be the scene of another conflict as Madison faces the Blue Ridge Club on March 22.

The members of Madison's teams are Beth Alphin, first team captain, Sylvia Ottoway, manager, Bee Stockdale, Carolyn Larkins, second team captain, Owen Bruno, Ruth Barkman, and Kay Harrington.

Tennis Team Plans Active Spring

The tennis team has begun its training under the direction of Miss Patricia Flaughter. The team already has a busy season lined up, with the first match on April 5.

The schedule for the six matches planned for the season is:
April 5 Bridgewater College away
April 20 Mary Baldwin College away

April 23 Longwood College away
April 26 Roanoke College home
April 28 Lynchburg College home
May 3 Bridgewater College home

The tennis team is in the process of choosing its seven best players to represent Madison in its first match. Later in the season, two top players will be elected to participate in the Middle Atlantic Intercollegiate Tournament to be held at Mary Baldwin College.

SGA OPEN MEETING

would entail shortening the spring break for second semester and scheduling Saturday afternoon exams during the first semester exam period.

The election of a dorm representative to Judicial SGA will go into effect next fall. The function of this representative will be to assist in explaining regulations to her dormitory residents, and to be available both to Judicial Council and members of her dorm during investigations. She shall, however, have no voting privileges in Judicial Council.

Currently, the SGA is working on setting up a committee to handle the mechanics of elections, including setting up polls and keeping candidates informed of buzz session dates. Comprising such a committee would be representatives from each class. During the discussion of elections, it was stated that in order to run for office on a petition, a prospective candidate must obtain the written support of ten per cent of the student body.

The SGA announced that a new Student Government bulletin board will be installed in the P.O. following Minor Elections.

However, this must come from you.

My call to action is . . . to think rationally and make your own decisions. There have been accusations that student liberties are not being upheld, but the greatest infringement of liberty that I know of, is the infringement of the student's right to make up his own mind in decisions which directly affect him.
