Practice What You Preach

Why shouldn't there also be an absence record or check made on the faculty in assemblies? Their continual absences are noticeable and often embarrassing — with special reference to the sophomore class day assembly.

From any point in the audiencium the students were reminded that their behavior in assemblies reflects upon Madison. Faculty members who are equal in right and privilege of the school should therefore give a little more thought to their "assembly conduct." Their lack of attention is just as adversely reflective.

Assemblies are planned for students and faculty alike, therefore it is not only an obligation but also a courtesy to attend the students present. Again a reference to the same assembly, why was such a special assembly program avoided? It should go without saying that when an entire class has charge of the program, an all-out effort will be made to present an interesting and enjoyable forty-five minutes.

As there is no possible penalty for "over cutting" assemblies for the faculty there exists a hands-tied behind us status. Especially when the faculty doesn't mean we aren't thinking about it and wishing there something that could be done. A good dose of conscience is the only hope.

A Better Expression of Gratitude Among the Student Body

Many people on our campus deserve praise and thanks for the nice things they have done or are doing. Do you think these people need to be thanked and commended for the fine jobs they are doing? Such people as professors, custodians, the laundry staff, the dietitian's staff, and the Tea Room workers are included in this group. The article on Mr. Gibbons, several issues back, is one which illustrates my point. We need more of this. Why should a college employee have to say, "I have a thankless job!"
