EDITORIAL COMMENT

Thoughts On Madison Changes

The senior class gave a skit entitled "Madison, Madison, Madison" on one of the nights last week. Based on this, I would like to comment on the major objective of getting a liberal education. Madison College is a place where the philosophy here just as soon as enrollments in advanced classes justify offering one. Therefore, the good cannot be synthesized from the male or female positions, no matter how trumped up the rest of the students of yesterday, and even now must be living in the past. And I am sure President Miller is act and discover wisely. They hold the position to change what wise can you, the officers, be good and just leaders.

REVOLUTIONS

Philosophy Soon to Come

To The Editor:

I should like to commend President chuck and President Donald... On Friday, October 27th, I... was that the campus book-store would compete with the merchants downtown. How can we compete? They are not selling what we want and need—a place to browse, to peruse, to buy... There is no car, no frosh drinking and early curfew of today? What will the general consensus be in 1984 when people hear of the no car, no frosh drinking and early curfew of today? Will it be revolutionary to hear of a female running for class officer?

Madison College is going through a series of drastic changes. Will these seem archaic and old fashion five years from now?

We must constantly realize that times are changing. Rules and regulations, in sports and fashions, are constantly going through great innovations.

Through the senior class show, we saw bow rules were changed. These cases are not going to be solved, but just as two or three years after the need arose. With our new regime I am confident Madison will try to keep up with the times. I sincerely hope that the freshmen male students in presenting a unified body working together for the common good.

Your secretary has the most important position of all for students so apathetic toward their school that they will not... It is only impossible not to offer the wide range of courses necessary for a major in a field only which 55 students (during this semester) have registered.

Please believe me when I tell you these enrollments are the largest in recent years, that the administration has been extremely busy promoting the study of this important subject at Madison, and that just as philosophy is major in philosophically, I agree, and I am sure that there will be a major in philosophy, philosophy, and are taking Philosophy 330 (Ethics), and 46 are taking Introductory Philosophy. In the second semester of this year, a total of 70 students are planning to take three philosophy courses. They do not rule, they merely carry out the wishes of the majority. Hence they must interpret the needs of the class, and even more so to the administration. Rules have been made and regulations, just as music and fashions, are constantly going through great innovations.

I thought that these were the years that we could found the rest of the officers' ability to understand the weaker sex. Officers' ability to understand the weaker sex.

What is now the argument? Is the campus still to know and the officers to change what they are living in the past. And I am sure President Miller is act and discover wisely. They hold the position to change what can of the campus in this establishment of a book-store? Is it the Business Manager? Is it the Dean of Student Services? Is it the President of the college? Whoever you are, please answer.

Sincerely yours,

Louis G. Locke, Director
Division of Humanities

Bookstore, Needed Addition

Dear Editor,

On Friday, October 27th, I had an opportunity to visit the bookstore on the Mary Baldwin campus—Where is our bookstore? This question existed during my freshman year. At the beginning of my sophomore year, new professors in the English Department brought a new hope and a new flurry of activity that somewhere on this campus a corner could be found to support a bookstore. Somehow this flurry of activity died a quiet death. Well that now I am a senior, the question is still unanswered.

I shall not go into the value of a bookstore. I wish only to say that this situation makes me sad. Before I depart from this campus, I wish to put in my two cents worth in the hope that this movement can be regained.

In the past, I have heard several arguments concerning why we do not have a bookstore. The original argument was lack of space. But the days of the "old bookstore" are past. We now possess ample space in the dining room. Was it the campus book-store would compete with the merchants downtown. How can we compete? They are not selling what we want and need—a place to browse, to peruse, to buy paperback books. A final argument was that it would not support itself. But the bookstore at Mary Baldwin somehow has managed to pull in a profit. I can see no reason why it cannot be done here.

Conservation Is America's Big Problem

by K. Jones

Conservation: They dedicated a statue to Teddy Roosevelt every day. They were the President and a group of high officials, including the Secretary of War and a few things about Teddy and reading about those things they said makes one wonder if T. R. wouldn't resurrect himself if only someone could come up with the funds. It is characteristic of this great land of ours today.

Teddy, you see, was the first and greatest American conservationist. He cared about forests and animals and birds and all the other flora and fauna like so many other people did, but Teddy did something about it. He stopped a crooked bill, he did things like Teddy, you know, big stick and everything.

Crawl Slowly, Carry a Wet Noodle

Today it seems that we crawl slowly and carry a wet noodle if mean Teddy saved thousands of trees by having the U.S. buy them but what good are barren wastelands after the animals and trees you have killed the trees? And if we, the superior human beings can't even buy a couple of valuable tree to get emphysema or asthma or lung cancer, how can we expect the poor old bear (or brazen deer) to avoid such things?

Is it the duty of the government to do something about the neglect of the use of the nation's natural resources? Living in a capitalist society we can at least make a buck it is hardly probable that the president of a company who is installing costly equipment because he feels sorry for the fish that float to the top of the river downstream is responsible for it. You still believe in Santa Claus see what (self-sacrificing) this is? It is the government that are taking to protect America's lungs.

Governmental Power

Big government does not have the right to step on industry's toes, you say. Each citizen owes it to his group to put pressure on industry to watch it. Ah, I say, but what happens when you step on the government? If we give the government too much power, too much control won't that be bad? But it could be there's always an election in four years.

Conservation is an uneasy problem. It will not be easily solved. Government intervention is the right solution but in my opinion the most logical and probably the only one. Daniel Webster once said, "Woe to the country when a generation arises which shrinks from doing the rough work of the world." If we give in on our hands waiting to find a way to handle so serious a problem to the government, then the next generation will not only be unable to shrink from it, they will be engulfed by it.

Erroreneous Rumor Contradicted

By now, you have seen the STaA Press Release. I hope you have added your stamp of approval to the letter sent to the parents of the Virginia students. Please urge your parents to back us up.

Big weekends at various colleges are fast approaching and to avoid a lot of confusion, I wish all of you (date-lovers) would remember one thing. When you arrive, if you find you cannot stay at the place for which you signed up, please notify the College Competition Department acquired five new faculty members, and the speech and drama department acquired two.

Elizabeth C. Bennett

Elizabeth C. Bennett, a native of Virginia, is an assistant professor of English. She earned her A.B. degree from Oberlin College, and her M.A. degree from Radcliffe College. She has also done advanced graduate work at Columbia University, Teachers' College, Middlebury College, and Cornell University. Miss Bennett has taught English at Berea College, Hart- ridge Private School in New Jersey, and Wayne State University. She has also served as chairman of the English department at Kingswood School, Cranbrook in Michigan for a number of years. She is filling a new position here at Madison.

Margaret F. Gibson

Margaret F. Gibson, a native of Pennsylvania, is an instructor of English. After receiving her early education in Richmond, she earned a B.A. degree from Hollins College, and a M.A. degree from the University of Virginia. Gibson is filling a new position here at Madison.

Nancy L. Kay

Nancy L. Kay, a native of New Jersey, is an assistant professor of English. She earned a B.A. degree from Trinity College, a M.A. degree from the University of Pennsylvania, and a Master of Philosophy degree from the University of Toronto, in Canada. While in Toronto, she held a teaching fellowship in English. Kay was an English instructor at the Philadelphia College of Science for three months. She is replacing Mary R. Poindexter, who resigned.

ETS Sets Exam Date

The Educational Testing Service (ETS), of Princeton, N. J., has announced that college seniors preparing to teach school may take the National Teacher Examinations February 3, April 6, and July 6, 1968. The test will be given at nearly 500 locations throughout the United States, ETS said.

Results of the National Teacher Examinations are used by many large school districts as one of several factors in the selection of new teachers—and by several states for certification or licensing of teachers. Leaflets indicating which school systems and state departments of education which use the examination results are distributed to colleges by ETS.

On each full day of testing, prospective teachers may take the Common Examinations, which measure the professionalism and preparation, and general cultural background of teachers, or one or more of 33 Teaching Examinations which measure mastery of the subject they wish to teach. Prospective teachers should contact the school systems in which they seek employment, or their colleges, for specific advice on which examinations to take and in which dates they should be taken. Richard B. Price

Richard B. Price, a native of New York City, is an assistant professor of English. He attended Oberlin College, and earned a M.A. degree in creative writing from the John Hopkins University. He attended the University of Leeds, England, for one year, and while there taught a course in English. Price earned a M.A. degree in English literature from the University of Virginia, and served also as an English instructor at Eastern Kentucky University. He is replacing Lolin Robinson, who resigned.

Betty H. Jolly

Betty H. Jolly, a native of North Carolina, is an assistant professor of English. She earned a B.A. degree from the Tennessee Technological University. She has taught in the public schools of Henrico County, Virginia, and is presently teaching at the Harrisonburg High School. Jolly is taking over one of Dr. Callahan's, and Dr. Eugene R. Moulton, a native of Ohio, is a professor of speech and head of the Department of Speech and Drama. He attended Kent State University, and earned a B.A. degree, a M.A. degree, and a Ph.D. degree from Western Reserve University. He did post-doctoral study at Marquette University. Dr. Moulton taught speech at Carroll College in Wisconsin for two years, and for the past fifteen years has served as a professor and departmental chairman at the University of Redlands, in California. He has also been a communications consultant for Lockheed Propulsion Laboratories in California, a visiting professor at the University of California at Riverside, and a consultant for the California State Department of Education. Dr. Moulton is filling a new position here at Madison.

Edward D. Kenestrick

Edward D. Kenestrick, a native of Indiana, is an assistant professor of speech and drama. He earned a B.S. degree from Purdue University, and a M.A. degree from the University of North Carolina. He served as a drama teacher and director of dramatic productions at North Carolina College and North Carolina School of Arts. Mr. Kenestrick also served as acting chairman of the drama department at North Carolina College for five months. He has written and directed many plays, and this past summer directed the play "Ship of Paul Green's "The Lost Colony," at Manteo, North Carolina. Mr. Kenestrick is replacing Mr. Link, who resigned.

Dr. Horace Burt looks on as Cappy Meredith, as Irene, and George Phillips playing Harry Van, rehearse the Pulitzer Prize winning play by Robert E. Sherwood, "Idiot's Delight." This will be Latimer-Shaffer Theater's dramatic debut, and the new light and sound equipment should be a compliment to the already superb acting on the part of the Stratford Players.

The play will be shown November 16-18, with the final performance on Saturday night, November 18.

Magazine Offers Student Positions

A month next summer as a magazine editor, perhaps $500 plus your prize-winning story published in a national magazine, for a permanent job in fashion publishing may be yours when you enter Mademoiselle magazine's 1967-68 college competitions.

Mademoiselle annually sponsors five competitions open to college women. These are Fiction, Poetry, Art, Photography and the College Board Competition. The winners of the College Board Competition are named Guest Editors of Mademoiselle and are brought to New York by the magazine to spend the month of June as salaried employees helping to edit that month's issue. August college issue, this year, as a special travel and photography award, Mademoiselle Editors took a week's trip to Peru. In the past they have gone to such places as Eng- land, Spain, and Scandinavia. The College Board Competition winners have ability in writing, editing, layout, illustration, fashion, beauty, promotion, merchandising or advertising, as well as those who are able to spot campus trends, report college events, and submit original ideas.

Winners of the 1967-68 Art, Photography, Fiction and Poem competitions will have their work published as the August 1968 issue of Made- moselle as well as receive cash prizes. This year's winners, and honorable mentions in the Photography Competition. Small Reporter At Large

by Ann Elmore

What is your opinion of the peace demonstrations that have been taking place for the past few weeks? Considering that this has happened to other college campuses why don't it has happened to Madison? Do you think it ever will?

C. J. Morris, Sophomore, English

"Though I feel the demonstra tions themselves are rather wasteful, I do sympathize be cause I don't particularly agree with the war in Vietnam. As far as having demonstra tions of this sort, I don't think they will have any influence in ending the war. Most of the kids participating aren't worried about war or peace: it's just a popular thing to do. I'm not saying there aren't some sincere people, but a lot are just following the crowd. It hasn't happened here yet because Madison students are not very active in this type. I don't think it will happen in the near future because we just don't have the potential for a demonstra tion of this kind."

Steve Long, Graduate Stu dent, Biology

"I feel it's their perogative to oppose the war. If one day a movement is by demonstra tion, it's fine with me as long as they don't interfere with the working of the government such as the Pentagon incident. One way to oppose the war might be to organize a movement to defeat LBJ in 1968. If they are opposed then this is a way of showing it. This business of burning draft cards makes the operation of the war, from government standpoint, harder."

"It hasn't happened here be cause the girls are too lacka daisical to get involved with any thing other than their own little worlds. Because of the rising number of male students, there will be more outspoken opposition to the war in the future. The atmosphere on the academic level does not offer any in centive to do that."

Ann Hatlefield, Freshman, Elementary Education

"I think they are foolish because they are only stirring up trouble and they aren't getting their point across. I don't think it has happened at Madison because the students have more to do than to stir up trouble over something so senseless."

Andy Park; Graduate Student, Biology

"I think the students are too young and haven't had enough experience in the world to realize the importance of a war. I do believe that one day we will look back on it and wonder why we didn't do something about it."

"I think it's good that the people are willing to stand up for what they believe in whether or not it's right, it's a sincere gesture and sincerity is one of the things that will benefit our society. I think the majority of Madison students are just plain bored with anything, but the world that concerns them, and the war doesn't concern them so why should they worry? There are so many more important things that they should have courage enough to stand up for what they believe and the others are just following the trends."

MC Dukes Need Support

by John Heerlein

As mentioned previously in The Breeze, the men’s basketball team will begin its season on Wednesday, November 29 at 7:00 p.m. This is a home game and it is hopeful that a large part of the student body will turn out to support the team.

It is a known fact that the male students at Madison have doubled since last year. It seems there should be something to go along with this increase. That something is an old high school term referred to as “school spirit.”

Madison needs “school spirit” and there is no time better than the present to begin the process of developing it. Probably a majority of the students experienced a similar spirit in high school and this year should be no different. The students should feel the need to be a part of the college and to take pride in the college.

In talking with the captains of the team, Bob Hummer and Butch Rinker, both expressed a need for cheerleaders and all-around student backing which are basic elements in developing spirit in any institution. Apparently, the possibility of cheerleaders will become a reality this year but the other element will be left up to the students. Anyone who has coached or participated in an organized sport activity will tell you, ability and desire are essential parts of any game, but so is knowing that the team on which you are playing is being given the support of the student body which it represents.

In general, the student body will determine the future of Madison. Hopefully, they will encourage the basketball team with enough support to start a “new spirit” rolling this year. Get behind the team by encouraging and backing them 100%.

Model Assembly Deadline Nov. 8

The U.N. Model General Assembly will meet at the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, March 6-10.

Madison will sponsor 12 students. The cost will be approximately $100 per student. NOT $150 per student as previously printed.

ANY student, regardless of his major, is eligible, and underclassmen are urged to apply. Interested students should send their name, class, major, cumulative average, and box number to Mr. Paul Cline, Box G. The DEADLINE has been moved up to November 8. If you desire any additional information please contact Pat Merchant, Box 1894, or Logan Dorm, Room 305.

Mrs. Nancy O’Hare, Assistant Professor of Speech and Hearing Therapy, Director of the Speech and Hearing Center at Madison and Member of the Education Department, was elected Sec.-Treas. of the Speech Association of Virginia at the Fall meeting of that organization in Williamsburg, Virginia recently. The organization is composed of Speech Pathologists, Audiologists and Otolaryngologists from Virginia and neighboring states. Mrs. O’Hare is a Professional Member of that organization, Assistant Editor of the Journal of the Virginia Speech and Hearing Association and Certified Speech Pathologist of the American Speech and Hearing Association.

Mrs. Jean Liggett, a Madison College day student from Churchville, was awarded the Pi Omega Pi traveling trophy last week at the honor organizations monthly meeting.

The business major having the highest accumulative average at the beginning of each semester is awarded the trophy. Mr. William O. Walsh, sponsor of the Beta Nu Chapter of Pi Omega Pi here at Madison made the presentation.

Mrs. Liggett, a senior business education major, attended Lenoir Rhyne College, Hickory, North Carolina, before transferring to Madison.
