Congratulations A A!

Madison’s Athletic Association took a step last week end that made every Madison student from east to west very happy. We’re proud that they took such a leading role in being hostesses for “Sports Day.” No doubt the nine other Virginia colleges represented here felt that Madison was, and is, really interested in forming the suggested Virginia Athletic Federation of College Women.

Not only did the physical education students help to make the week-end a success but the student body played a big part as well. Those of you who gave up your rooms, dining hall (and even linen!) were making possible the success of a worthy cause. A. A. appreciated it, of course, but we should realize that it was really a privilege—a chance to prove to Madison that “The Red Cross gives.”

Yes, we’re putting ourselves on the back, but we deserve it, don’t you think? The Athletic Association gets the biggest hand and the location of congratulations, but the student body as a whole deserves a big “thank you,” and it can be proved of itself.

Give to the Red Cross

One of the most far-reaching organizations in the world, the Red Cross, is doing all in its power to give aid. It takes money to do this work, so let’s further the work of the Red Cross by giving our nickles and dimes and even a dollar or two when we can.

A volcanic “thank you” travels to Madison College from students in other parts of the country and world. The Red Cross is always ready to meet these tragedies however, and its extensive work. We’re so safe on our campus that we find it almost impossible to imagine that some people are destitute and starving in other countries.

Let’s do our part by giving to the Red Cross now so that they may be ready to help people in need whenever a tragedy occurs. Let’s give because we can.

Welcome Alumnae

All students at Madison heartily welcome alumnae and friends back to their Alma Mater this week-end. We hope it will prove once more a happy occasion, one full of happy remembrances of the “good old days when.”

Although there have been many changes and improvements made since our first classes graduated, the same spirit of friendliness and fellowship prevails, and it is this spirit which results in the close bond between our alumnae and present student body. You will be greeted at the door by club and other groups presenting the programs this week-end, along with the many students who are helping with dance decorations and other arrangements which are being done in the same manner as the 1948 homecoming.

The many girls who are moving from their dormitory rooms and sorority houses so that our alumnae guests will be comfortable are also doing a great deal to further the success of the weekend. The careful planning, cooperation and work of all of you make us confident that this homecoming will be the best yet.

To the alumnae returning we say—“we are very happy to have you back.”

Take heed and F. W.

NOTHING SO STRANGE by James Still

This is one of Mr. Hilton’s most thrilling novels. With its first backdrop in London, it reads around the world to the end. It will be one of the best novels of the season. The story is of a young doctor who is sent to America to see his mother. As the plot thickens, Jane becomes more and more involved in this literary work. The dearness and strange-ness of this story is tied together and carried along through the tender friendship of Jane’s love and the brave drama involved.

This is a modern story of modern people. It has in it, excitement, love, tragedy, and all the things that one would expect in a movie. The story is of a man who has been left to work on his own with his mother. The plot is well-developed and the story is a good one.

There’s nothing so exciting as to read a novel to the public. It’s exciting to see the reactions of the public to the story as it unfolds. The novel tells the story of a young girl who is left to work on her own with her mother. The plot is well-developed and the story is a good one.

The author of My Sister Eileen, a very sweet novel, has turned her hand to the lighter side of the picture and now gives the story of her grand- daughter to her readers.

This is a modern story of modern people. It has in it, excitement, love, tragedy, and all the things that one would expect in a movie.
