Barter Theatre Group To Present 'The Hasty Heart' Tonight At 8 PM

The Madison College entertainment committee has announced that the next lyceum program of the year will be the Barter Players' presentation of "The Hasty Heart" in Wilson auditorium tonight at 8:00. The State Theatre of Virginia is making its third appearance here this season with this modern comedy hit, starring a cast of eight men and a girl.

The play, skillfully combining broad comedy with human drama, was acclaimed by Broadway in 1945. The playwright takes advantage of the war as an instrument for cross-sectioning character types by conceiving a story showing a hospital ward's close association with both boisterous life and grim death.

Frederic Warriner plays the role of a young Scotsman who is tragic in his cynical and mistrustful attitude toward his wardmates who are aware of his inexorable death due to seemingly minor combat wounds and toward the nurse, Fern Bennett, who finds herself in love with him.

"The Hasty Heart," by John Patrick, will be under the direction of Don Hart with Emory Bass, Ray Boyle

FERN BENNETT who will play the role of Margaret in "The Hasty Heart"

Burroughs, Don Hart, Stuart Day, Ernest Borgnine and John Eaton in supporting roles. The play takes place in the interior of a hut which is being used as a convalescent ward in a temporary British General Hospital somewhere within the Burma-Assam front. It is presented in three acts.

Congratulations A A!

Madison's Athletic Association took a step last week-end that made every person on campus proud of them. We're proud that they took such a leading role in being hostesses for "Sports Day." No doubt the ten other Virginia colleges represented here felt that Madison was, and is, especially interested in forming the suggested Virginia Athletic Federation of College Women.

Not only did the physical education students help to make the week-end a success, but the student body played a big part as well. Those of us who gave up our rooms, dining hall (and even linen!) were making possible the success of a worthy cause. A. A. appreciated it, of course, but we should realize that it was really a privilege—a chance to prove to others why Madison is called "the friendly college."

Yes, we're patting ourselves on the back, but we deserve it, don't you think? The Athletic Association gets the biggest hand and the heartiest of congratulations, but the student body as a whole deserves a big "thank you," and it can be proud of itself.

—B. R.

Give To The Red Cross

One of the most far-reaching organizations in the world, the Red Cross, is opening its annual drive on campus Monday.

Those of us who were at summer school this past year, saw the quick and efficient service that the Red Cross gave in the terrifying explosion on Main Street. This is only one of the many services that the Red Cross gives. It provides shelter for the homeless, medical care for the sick, and food for the needy.

All of us agree that the Red Cross is a wonderful organization, but when it comes to giving money to it, a few of us need to be reminded of its extensive work. We're so safe on our campus that we find it almost impossible to imagine that some people are destitute and starving in other parts of the country and world.

The Red Cross is always ready to meet these tragedies however, and is doing all in its power to give aid. It takes money to do this work, so let's further the work of the Red Cross by giving our nickles and dimes generously and unselfishly.

—R. G.

We Receive Thanks

A volcanic "thank you" travels to Madison College from students in other lands who received benefits from the World Student Service fund. Those giving time, money, and clothes should be commended for their work. Praises go especially to the YWCA who sponsored the drive, to other campus organizations who contributed to the fund, and to students who made posters and made the Bunny Girl drive a success.

Only through such drives as this and through donations made by the entire student body, will the relations and friendships of this country with other nations improve and eventually result in a strong group of United Nations. We, who have seen no destruction of cities and of children who would have been the leaders of tomorrow, may help by saving a few pennies for students in other lands.

—F. W.

Avoid Sneezing!

This is a warning to you eager beavers who think that the first time the sun sends out a few timid rays, it means spring is here. March is a month of surprises and the gay young miss who enters class without her coat may find her skirt and blouse a trifle airy when she pushes her way through the snow drifts that have accumulated during the 50 minute period. Don't take a chance on "making like Spring" while Winter is still lurking in the corners. If you don't want to be just another "case of sniffles" in the infirmary, take that extra wrap. If you don't need it at the moment, carry it—and you'll probably be glad you did.

SHOWGOER

By Ollie Vee Walpole

"Panhandle" starring Red Cameron with Cathy Doves and Reed Hadley promises to be a real western thriller and will be shown on Sunday through Tuesday at the State Theater. Wednesday and Thursday will feature a Universal release, "Ride The Pink Horse," which brings back Robert Montgomery.

Metro Goldwyn Mayer presents Jeanette McDonald and Jose Iturbi in the technicolor film, "Three Daughters" at the Virginia Theatre on Sunday through Wednesday. McDonald's vocal talents combined with the pianistic skills of Iturbi make for an excellent combination which should rate high on any showgoer's list.

The outcome of a black market gang's flying escapades in Shanghai will prove the exciting climax of "Intrigue" when it appears Thursday and Friday at the Virginia. The black market leaders are George Raft and June Havoc, the boss lady of the crooked enterprise, with Tone Tully coming in to crack up the business.

Welcome Alumnae!

All students at Madison heartily welcome alumnae and friends back to their Alma Mater this week-end. We hope it will prove an enjoyable occasion, one full of happy remembrances of the "good old days when."

Although there have been many changes and improvements made since our first classes graduated, the same spirit of friendliness and fellowship prevails, and it is this spirit which results in the close bond between our alumnae and present student body.

The Glee club, orchestra, Granddaughters club and other groups presenting the programs this week-end, along with the many students who are helping with dance decorations and other arrangements are doing their best to make the 1948 homecoming a big success.

The many girls who are moving from their dormitory rooms and sorority houses so that our alumnae guests will be comfortable are also doing a great deal to further the success of the weekend. The careful planning, cooperation and work of all those concerned with the occasion make us confident that this homecoming will be the best yet.

To the alumnae returning we say—"we are very happy to have you back."

TAKE HEED AND READ

By Margaret Clark

NOTHING SO STRANGE by James Hilton

This is one of Mr. Hilton's swifter-moving stories. With its first background in London, it roams around the world ending up in a crash landing in a California airport.

It is the story of a fine young doctor who has attracted the attention of Jane and her mother. As the plot thickens, Jane becomes more in love with this eccentric young man who in turn becomes more and more enveloped in his work. The dearness and strangeness of this story are tied together and carried along throughout by the tender thread of Jane's love and the heavy drama involved.

This is a modern story of modern people. It has in it, excitement, love, drama, and all that anyone would expect of James Hilton. The author of Random Harvest and So Well Remembered has again touched the reader's weak spots by writing Nothing So Strange.

JENNY VILLIERS by J. B. Priestley.

There's nothing so exciting to any reader than to read a real honest-to-goodness spooky story once in a while. While Jenny Villiers is not exactly the type for a dose of ammonia, it does provide amusement, love and mystifying actions at the same time and usually in the same chapter.

Mr. Priestley has given to his readers a story of a young play writer, who has made the theatre his life for years. In the end he is disillusioned by the thought that the theatre is dead and will never live up to the old standards of the once prominent amusement center. So discouraged with life and his futile attempts at success, the young writer takes an overdose of sedatives in the haunted-like Green Room of an old theatre in England. While he sleeps, he dreams of the once famous Jenny Villiers and how she once spoke of the theatre. Thus inspired and saved by one of the new promising actresses, he begins anew with the rosy future facing him and his long lost beloved.

Jenny Villiers is a fascinating story, yet slightly thin in places; so endearing at times that the reader often wonders how so many kinds of chapters can really be written to make up the same book. To those readers who are avid followers of the theatre and to those who enjoy the lighter novels, Jenny Villiers should stand as a number one book to read.

THE LOUD RED PATRICK by Ruth McKenny

The author of My Sister Eileen, a very sweet novel, has turned her tune to the lighter side of the picture and has now given the story of her grandfather to her readers.

Told in a hilarious comedy style, grandpappy, a good old Irishman with an English wife and six lovely daughters, is a democrat in republican territory. His loves and hates, likes and dislikes and amusement at trivial things set the reader into a nearly hysterical state from laughter.

Such amusement is seldom found in books now. This light-hearted novel will, in places, give even the dearest "dead-pan" a grin or two. The Loud Red Patrick has the tender spots one hopes to find in a novel and the lightness that can only follow the pattern of a comedy's plot.

CABE'S COMMENTS

By Barbara Cabe

The last obstacle standing in the way of the onrushing tide of Communism in Czechoslovakia fell on Wednesday. It was Jan Masaryk, whose father was the first president of Czechoslovakia. The indomitable courage of the elder Masaryk made and kept his country a democracy for so long.

For some years, Jan Masaryk had served as Foreign Minister of Czechoslovakia. When the Communists took over two weeks ago, he was retained on the Cabinet. This was puzzling. Opinion on the question was divided. The Commies could have reasoned that he might possibly escape the country if he were ousted and be a guiding force in the organization of an opposition force which could present a great deal of resistance. Then again, in view of the fact that he was such a national hero, the Commies knew that the people would follow fairly willingly any plan or move endorsed by him. And by retaining him on the Cabinet, they hoped to force him to follow their terrorist regime and to persuade the people to do likewise. Then Czechoslovakia would have been even more of a pushover for Stalin's thugs than it was. But Masaryk did not fall in so well with the invaders! He remained firm as a defender of democracy while playing the dangerous game of double-talk with the Reds. It was too dangerous a game—he was a definite menace Red strength as long as he lived, so he plunged to his death. Whether it was actually suicide or murder (the latter is most probable, in fact is almost a certainty) still remains a question. Regardless of how he went, the main tragedy is that he is gone. For with the honored name of Masaryk went the last hope of liberty in a valiant country. And that same little country was freedom's hope in Europe.

Do You Date Men In College? Read!

By Rebecca Rogers

Every girl's dream is to be the center of attraction when visiting her college men at his Alma Mater. Junior Bazaar gives some good tips straight from the college man himself—and they include ideas submitted by University of Virginia men. We thought you'd appreciate the latest tips, so here they are.

To begin with, the college man expects a prompt answer to his invitation and if you accept, you'd better not change your mind. The smart girl leaves Madison with one bag—sans all the odds and ends we invariably take along—and arrives planning to give all her time to her own date and his friends. Forget the Madison girls, you'll see them soon enough. You're expected to like his friends, both male and female, and make a bit with them, but you must remember—you're his and because his frat brother is cuter is no excuse for your being more friendly to him than to the guy who is footing those bills, and after all, he did ask you.

You'd better know your sports (he'll be sure to take you to some athletic event) and know your clothes. The most urgent recommendation is "Don't overdress!" You'll be wise to avoid too daring extremes, but not so much in evening dresses—they're a different matter. Let them be feminine and as an informant puts it, "Don't wear something that buttons up to the eyes."

Be enthusiastic about everything, and don't complain over trifles. Also a few clean jokes are nice to have along, just in case they're needed. Remember, girls, keep laughing, and don't leave early for another date. You'll get caught!

'Balmy Breezes' Top 'Dummies' In Basketball

The "Balmy Breezes" defeated the Schoolma'am "Dummies" 23-19 in a nip-and-tuck battle Monday night. The two teams matched basket for basket until the final quarter when the Breezes pulled ahead on two baskets.

Betty Davis of the "Dummies" led scoring for the evening with 10 points. Other Schoolma'am forwards were Norma Hoke with 7 points and Edna King with two points. The "Dummy" guards were Slaughter, captain, Joyner, Shallcross and Gander.

Breezing goals in for the Breezes were Lois Stine and Margaret Chapman, captain, with eight points each, Jinx Miller with four points, Roberta Gravelly with two and Mickey Parrotta with one. Irene Munson also played forward. Guarding the "Dummies" were Becky Rogers, Frances Wilkins, Frances Connock, Rosemund Leonard, Nancy Ellis and Margaret Kenny.

Opening game ceremonies saw the "Dummy" team kissing their talisman, a battered Schoolma'am, for good luck, and the "Balmy Breezes" being led on the court by a trumpeter! Breezes served as towels for the players and chair covers for the spectators.

The enthusiastic gallery was led in Schoolma'am cheers by Jo Johnson and "Danny" Broome, while "Mike" Reid, Carey Luck and Charlotte Evans cavorted for the Breeze. Miss Covington, formerly of the Madison P. E. Dept. was given a "welcome" cheer.

Jo Hammond and Fran Hundley officiated at the game.

Madison Glee Club Presents Program

The Glee Club, under the direction of Miss Edna Schaffer, presented a musical recital in assembly, Wednesday. The program was opened with the audience joining the Glee Club in singing "Bring Oh Morn Thy Music."

The first part of the program was given to sacred songs, and the Glee Club sang, "Hear us Oh Father" by Bach and a Cawadea featuring Miss Edythe Schneider as the soloist. Janice Loar was the organist and Peggy Dinkle, piano accompanist.

In the second part of the program, which was devoted to music by contemporary American composers, Dorothy Wainwright, a pupil of Miss Elizabeth Harris, played "Romance" on the piano, and Emily Pierce sang, "Song of the Finch," a piece that was written and composed in Mr. Clifford Marshall's composing class. The Glee club also sang "The Night has a Thousand Eyes," "The Song of the Meadowlark," and the "Magic Hour" in which Gwyn Snapp sang a solo.

The program ended with an unusual arrangement of "All the Things you Are," under the direction of Wanda Lee Lewter, with Lois Stine, Virginia Hurdley, and Frances Hundley presenting the trio part.
