Libby laughingly explained that it was the first time she had ever doubled for a bunny and then laughingly wisecracked that she was planning to hop around and spread joy everywhere during her Easter vacation. It seems that her hometown of Lexington, Virginia, is in for quite a time of it.

"30" . . . . .

Editing the BREEZE during its twenty-fifth year of publication has been an experience which every editor would long cherish. The close friendships that were made, the co-operation and help given by many and the feeling of accomplishment are just a few of the many wonderful memories in the life of a college editor. The best feeling of all, however, has come when students were seen reading the Breeze, be it with a critical or complimentary attitude. Criticisms helped us grow and compliments gave us the enthusiasm to go on, and the knowledge that students at Madison appreciated our work was the only incentive we needed.

1947-'48 has brought us losses as well as gains. We suffered our greatest loss with the death of our advisor, Mr. Conrad Logan. We feel, however, that he has left with us many goals to work toward and many aims to be realized. These goals and aims will forever keep the Breeze growing.

The year has brought us many gains, too—our anniversary celebration, our gradual improvement in the eyes of the national judges, our entrance into athletic competition, and our united effort to improve our newspaper.

The most important hope of every editor, and the one uppermost in his mind at all times, is that the readers will enjoy the newspaper and feel that it is their paper, one they can proudly call 'their's'. It is this goal that we have worked toward on the Breeze and although we have not fully reached it, we hope that in a way, our readers have been proud of their paper.

Now that it is time to leave our work in the hands of our successors we can look back on our newspaper career with a bit of longing. It has been lots of work but we will always miss the fun we had, too. We see our mistakes as well as our accomplishments, but it is our sincere wish that the staffs of the future will benefit from our efforts. We of the '47-'48 staff will always look on the achievements and accomplishments of the future Breeze staffs with a special interest. To our successors we say "Good luck"; to our readers, "Farewell."

"30" . . . . .

It's Their Privilege

The third quarter of the Madison school year is here now and in years past it meant a lot to our freshmen—they could ride with dates for a few hours on Sunday afternoon; and only freshmen know what a wonderful privilege that was.

It seems that as we changed to the semester system several of their limited privileges were done away with. Perhaps riding was not meant to be abolished and consequently we'd like to remind those concerned that it's time for it to go into effect and that the freshmen want it.

This week-end means the first big dance for many of them—those that are new cotillion club members. They have asked dates and want to have a big week-end. Riding would make it almost perfect.

Because we're no longer college freshmen, because we can ride often, because we have many privileges they do not have is no reason we should either forget or overlook them. They are old enough, certainly, to be allowed to do such and if their parents agree, why shouldn't they? Let's help them.

B. R.

The Perfect Homecoming

We students of Madison can well be proud of another successful homecoming week-end; one which, we believe, brought happy memories to many former Madison Students.

For this success we gratefully acknowledge the cooperation of those girls who gave up their rooms and the waitresses who worked hours overtime to insure the enjoyment of our visitors. We, as well as the alumnae, enjoyed the entertainment furnished by the Glee club, the orchestra and the Lyceum committee.

We hope that in the years to come we too, as alumnae may be welcomed.

Work Toward International Understanding

The fact that students in college today should work toward bringing about a definite international understanding, was emphatically brought out at the Sweet Briar conference held last week-end for student delegates from Virginia colleges and universities.

Our position as students is a very important one. It is our duty to see that our student governments, Y. W. C. A.'s, various publications International Relations Clubs, and others do their best to encourage an understanding and feeling of good will toward peoples of other lands. Our curricula may have to be changed. We should learn to accept more social and personal responsibility, exchange ideas with the faculty members so as to broaden our own views, get acquainted with foreign students and learn about their customs and culture, and help others to understand our own culture and customs.

"International understanding is not learned in class. It is a quality of mind and spirit which enables one to feel at home in the world." It is this quality of mind and spirit which should be a part of every college graduate today if the world of tomorrow is to remain at peace.

Let's do our part toward gaining a further knowledge of our foreign neighbors and developing a friendly attitude toward them, so that our world may be one of peace and good will.

Boy Slaves To Buy White Orchid; "Urge To Kill" Dominates Readers

By Stu Williams

This is the story of an orchid, a boy who wished he were never born, and a girl who should not have been. It had all started when Jack, our luckless hero, had overheard several girls talking excitedly about a white orchid one of them had received at the last dance. Jack, trying to make ends meet on his G. I. bill income, felt if he could get Cynthia a white orchid for the one dance he had scooped and saved money for, she would realize what a sacrifice he was making for her. Doing without cigarettes, washing his own clothes, working after classes—it was a tremendous burden on him. And now, with the big dance only several weeks off he realized that he would have to work even harder to get funds to buy the orchid. In addition to his regular afternoon job in the grocery store, Jack found a temporary job setting up pins in a bowling alley.

Why?

As Jack sweated beneath the bright lights at the far end of the bowling alley, he smiled to himself. He was lucky to get a date with Cynthia, he figured. Why, she was one of the most popular girls in the school! She was always spending a weekend away at some university, and she came from a well-to-do family in suburban New York . . . why was she dating him anyway?

"Tomorrow night," he thought . . . Cynthia was dazzling . . . it was agony to behold her loveliness in a single glance. She had given him the most beautiful of her smiles when he triumphantly unwrapped the orchid. And such a perfect one! . . . soft white with a purple tinged throat which seemed to voice the pain and welling fatigue which was reflected in his anxious eyes. She took his arm, and they left for the gym where the dance had already started.

Eat It?

As they entered the dance floor who should spot him but Ronnie Dyke, whose fame for smoothness had become the chief topic of discussion in bull sessions in every girls college in the state. He came swaggering over.

"Well, if it ain't old Cynthia and Horatia Alger! Where'd you get the cute blossom, honey?"

"Ronnie, you devil . . . a little birdy brought it!"

"Well if I were you I'd eat the thing—rich in vitamins, or hadn't you heard?"

"Eat It? Do you dare me, honey? Dare Me?"

"Go ahead! Not a coward are you?" Jack stared dumbly as the white, purple throated orchid disappeared between her provocative ruby lips.

CABE'S COMMENTS

By Barbara Cabe

President Truman outlined three major issues in his speech on Wednesday. He seems to have a fairly substantial case for all of them. Almost everyone, even the Congressmen, agreed with him that the European Recovery Program should go into as immediate effect as is humanly possible (if not faster). However, election-conscious Congressmen hemmed and hawed in an effort to evade directly the UMT and Selective Service issues, although a number of farsighted Senators expressed themselves heartily in favor of those.

It seems only logical that if we do build up formidable armed forces, we will be held in greater respect by any possible enemy—and thus lessen any chances of war. It is quite improbable that Russia wants to attack us anyway. She would far rather let her doctrines seep into all the world and win over lands and territories by undermining present governmental foundations. The seepage of Communism, as far as Eastern and Central Europe is concerned; has become a tidal wave. That's why it would be a most difficult to stop its spread now, but if we wait any later, it will be in the category of the impossible. Several sources have remarked that even Joe Stalin (provided he wanted to) couldn't halt Communism's spread now—and if he couldn't that leaves us as the only possibility to stem the tide. We certainly can't do it without strong military forces—of course there are those who predict that the next war will be atomic or biological—perhaps they're right. But, contrary to hysterical American assumptions, there need be no "next war." War is not inevitable. If we maintain powerful forces, particularly Air Forces, which are capable of policing our interests, we will, by virtue of the prestige and respect thus accorded us, not be involved in a third World War.

The UN definitely needs a strong police force, but they are not so equipped yet. Somebody has to have the force to stand back of their decisions, as well as to back up our own democracy. Military strength does not mean that we are preparing for war—it means that we are backing up our decisions for peace.

Something To Chat About

By Frances Wilkins

To all of you chemistry minded students here's a word of advice:

Sing a song of sulfate,
A beaker full of lime,
Four and twenty test tubes
Breaking all the time.
When the top is lifted,
The fumes begin to reek,
Ain't that an awful mess
To have five times a week?

Everyone who saw "Gone with the Wind" may recall that during the siege in Atlanta only three things kept running: mainly, Belle's palace, Prissy's nose, and the laundry that kept Rhett's suit snow white.

The Physical Education students and faculty suggest you ask Fran Hundley who the walking woman is!

For subjects we've searched heath and heather,

But it makes no difference whether
We fall from your grace and leave out
a space—

We ain't gonna mention the weather.

Madison Group Attends Forum

The choreography group of the Modern Dance club consisting of eleven girls, their director, Miss Luellen Bowles, and pianist, Nancy Penn, attended the Arts Forum held at Woman's College in Greensboro, North Carolina on March 11, 12, 13.

The girls were as follows: Jo, Hammond, Lynn Black, Biddie Antrim, Jackie Kayser, Jo Hodgson, Elsie Chapman, Frances Garfinkle, Frances Keyser, Nancy Gibson, Betsy Johnson and Jane Lamberth.

Participate in Classes

Friday and Saturday mornings the group participated in the Modern Dance Master Classes in Composition Elements along with fourteen other southern colleges under the direction of Miss Martha Hill, founder of the Bennington School of Dance in New York.

Saturday afternoon each group presented a dance, the choreography of which was done by the individual groups. This was followed by a review and an evaluation of each dance by Miss Hill and a discussion by the students and directors.

Listen to Rest of Forum

Four of the groups were chosen to present their dances at the concert given by the Woman's College Dance Group Saturday night.

From this experience the dance group hopes to improve its programs and portray more meaning in its dancing.

The Modern Dance section was only one element of the Art's Forum which consisted of lectures and criticisms in paintings, architecture, writing, music, and dramatics. When the modern dance group were not in class, they had the opportunity of listening to all other sections of the Forum, which proved to be not only educational but enjoyable.

The Spotlight . .

By BERYL SNELLINGS

"Sportsmanship enters into all phases of life where individuals come into contact with other individuals or where groups of individuals come into contact with other groups of individuals. Sportsmanship applies not only to one individual dealing with other individuals, but it also applies to association within groups, and to the dealings of small and large groups with other groups. Our local, state and national politics often degenerate to a very low level due to lack of an appreciation and practice of sportsmanship. Our terrible international situation of today has come about very largely through a failure on the part of nations to practice sportsmanship in their dealings with one another. It is not possible for our nation to force the practice of sportsmanship on other nations, but we can certainly set a good example in that direction if we will make a determined effort to rid ourselves of prejudice and make certain that whatever stand we take is fair to other nations.

We most often think of sportsmanship as applying to school and college life and activities, particularly school and college athletics. This is a very important realm of sportsmanship, because the teaching and training is sportsmanship during school and college days should prepare young people to practice sportsmanship in their later and more important activities through life. High school and college athletic leaders often over-emphasize the value of winning at the expense of fair play or sportsmanship. An institution or individual gains the respect and admiration of others only through victories that are won in a manner that inspires admiration. Any success is a very hollow victory when it is won at the expense of self-respect or the respect of others."
