The Queen and her Court present a striking combination of beauty and grace as they once again take their places at Wilson. The Queen and her Court will reign over "May Day in A Golden Shrine."

The Athletic Association has devoted a great deal of time to this May Day program, in an effort to make this celebration the finest one ever. This day commemorates the fortieth May Day celebration, the first one having been held in 1913. A successful May Day is inevitable.

Never before in Madison's history has such an extensive celebration been held. This year, because we are celebrating our Golden Anniversary, more planning was necessary and through the necessity for big plans, our May Day has grown into one of the most memorable events in our history.

Those girls participating in this event must feel a great deal of pride that they were chosen to take part in a day which will be so long remembered by all who witness it.

For those who watched this May Day grow, for those who will watch from the sidelines, may this day be a constant reminder of Madison's traditions and ideals.

Although every college or university stands primarily for scholastic attainment, no institution of learning is more beautiful. Madison, her past and her present, have clearly proven that they stand for a beauty that far surpasses the expectations of its founders.

The future, if it can be determined in part by the present, can only reflect more vividly the beauty of our college.
Reservations Must Be In Early

Resort Expectas Capacity Crowd

by Eleanor Raines

After winter has drained its color from even the rustiest person and everyone looks as though she were just recovering from a bad case of flu, measles, and African sleeping sickness combined, a trip to Madison is the thing for getting back that healthy glow of summer. Our resort is located back right just off the C & W Railroad.

The only reservation you need is a packed lunch and the desire to get away from the纠.

Other things are furnished, including a horse, the Indian ways, and water. All other things are furnished, including lawns for setting up camp and a horse, the Indian ways. Getting back that healthy glow of summer. Our resort is located back right just off the C & W Railroad.

Rain seems to have taken over—Waiting for the sun are Margaret Baumgardner, Virginia Faulkner, Lillian Whitmer and Carolyn Walker.

The only reservation you need is a packed lunch and the desire to get away from the纠.

Letter to Editor

We, as members of the sophomore class, would like to take this opportunity to thank everyone who was influential in helping to clear up some important problems.

Anyone who does not believe, as we once attempted to believe, that the Student Government Association is a body of students, is not your association, working for and having your feelings in mind, is not your association, working for and having your feelings in mind.

The only reservation you need is a packed lunch and the desire to get away from the纠.

Other things are furnished, including a horse, the Indian ways, and water. All other things are furnished, including lawns for setting up camp and a horse, the Indian ways. Getting back that healthy glow of summer. Our resort is located back right just off the C & W Railroad.

What's Your Opinion?

What is Progress?

Today and tomorrow we are celebrating the Fiftieth Anniversary of Madison College. As we are enjoying the festivities of this occasion, let us also attempt to comprehend the progress of Madison.

What is progress?

Many times we have a tendency to look only at the finished product, such as the beauty of our campus and the material things Madison offers us, and call this progress. As Webster defines progress, it is not the finished product, it is the "onward course." For Madison, we may say that we should praise Madison that we have today, during this celebration we may recognize and strive to understand the struggles of many people, the people who have continued this "onward course," for Madison.

The success of our school has not been accomplished through the efforts of a few interested persons; it is because of the efforts of many that it has continued and worked together toward a common goal—a better Madison.

Today, we are looking at the product of the past fifty years, and the finished product of the year 2008 will be the result of our progress. We have a hand in this, and we make it because the progress of Madison is our responsibility.

Speaker On Campus

A New England Girlhood will make a temporary figure in her family.

Nancy Hale, American novelist and short story writer, will be our guest speaker. Since then she has written for such publications as the New Yorker, American Mercury, and Harper's Magazine. Her principal work is "A New England Boyhood," published in 1928, "The Young Dick Good," 1932, "The Dark and the Daylight," and "The Song of Matna." Her numerous works, including "Golden Dreams," are well known by many of the audience.

This May, her new book entitled "A New England Girlhood" will make its appearance. This book, described as a collection of quasibiographical stories, is an interesting background. Miss Hale's "A New England Girlhood," published in 1889, is a collection of stories about her Boston childhood in the 1840's. Before her marriage, her husband had introduced her to New England girls. She has said that a background makes the title, as Miss Hale would say—"rather a family title."

In 1937 Miss Hale moved to Charleston, Virginia. Her husband was professor of English at the University of Virginia. There she became engaged in theatre writing and production. Classes To Express Ideas In Decorations

The four classes of Madison College are competing again for the first place traditional May Day decorations. Because of the Golden Anniversary, the Recreation Council decided that the general theme of the campus decorations would be the life-size individuals expressing their ideas of the campus decorations by doing this each year.

Each class has chosen their site according to�性. As a result, the senior class is working on the main gate with Betty May Neals serving as chairman.

Serving as chairman of the junior class is Judy Groe, working on the lower gate (across the street) with Betty Snellings.

The freshman class has Ellen Davis, serving as chairman of the north gate (by the hospital).

This year, the prize will be on one day, the senior class chosen by the freshmen, to cut campus. In this way, each member of that class will benefit directly from the award.

The judging will occur at 3:00 p.m. on Saturday with Miss Frances Grace, chairman, and Dr. Glenn Smith, Dr. Lucille McGee, Dr. Margaret McCall, and Dr. Mildred Hoyt.

The judging will be announced before the May Day Program begins.

Six Past May Queens Return For Festivals

Six of Madison’s past May Queens are returning to campus this weekend for the fiftieth anniversary May Day Festival. As they watch Bsat Day King Ray being crowned, memories of other years and other crowns will come back to them.

This is what May Day looked like the very, very long time ago. Recognize the queen?

Mrs. W. R. Garthar (Mary E. Sturgeon) will remember the year 1910 and the vision of the red roses, the white dresses of the women in their caps. The first dance was held at 8:00 p.m. and on the first day to be chosen by the winning committee.

They say he shows poor judgment; They find fault with the editor, and

"Sam,"—don’t trip over that wire fence! These girls are members of the Athletics Association, the Association that sponsors the May Day Festival.

The judging will occur at 1:30 p.m. on Saturday when the opening dance is introduced.

Only the queen is chosen for the May Day Queen. The queen will carry a large bouquet of white roses.

Nahid Beijan and Sara Fox, Lee Tomlinson and Audra Ralston will be serving as chairman.

The senior class is working on the main gate with Betty May Neals serving as chairman.

The freshman class has Ellen Davis, serving as chairman of the north gate (by the hospital).

This year, the prize will be on one day, the senior class chosen by the freshmen, to cut campus. In this way, each member of that class will benefit directly from the award.

Ann Carol Younkins will preside as president of the incoming class.

The other officers are Barbara Culler, vice-president; Mary Lee Hattaway, secretary; Louise Brooking, treasurer; and Annie Lee Jernigan, reporter.

Chrysalis Magazine Now In Circulation

"Chrysalis is here!" Yes, Madison's new literary magazine went into circulation today after a year of planning and anticipating its debut to the Wilson audiennial. Alumnae, alumni, and non-Alumni of the class of 1936 were given an advance opportunity to get their free copies tomorrow morning in the mail with the address places from the following:

10:00-10:30 Alumnae Hall—Winston S. Churchill, 2101 Dunbar

11:00-1:00 Wilson auditorium—Reyn Dous and Dorris Smith. Countless numbers of students, freshmen, essays, and poetry submitted by these two seniors to the Chrysalis society by Criterion club, the new literary club which was organized in the fall under the sponsorship of Mrs. Martha Tuttle.

Those members working on the magazine were: editors, Mary Hopper, Reina Pelzer, vice-president, Dorris Smith, secretary; Patricia Gush, vice-president, Rachel Nussal, Ette Capron, Sigrid Stans, treasurer, Elaine Flinn. The magazine cover was designed by Helen Green.

This magazine, which the club plans to continue publishing in the future, will be summer's major project, although it has been active in other ways during the year. For example, on January 11, the club presented a program on contemporary poetry, "The Language of Modern Poetry," introduced modern poetry by allen Ginsberg and discussed the misunderstandings of the layman and the poet.Criterion society is very much interested in helping the "youth of today." This is the third in a series of articles on the training school for parents of Rockingham County and Harrisonburg with regard to the education of both Rockingham County and Harrisonburg students.

Applications by the College, they will be referred to the School Boards of Rockingham and Harrisonburg for final approval.

Tuition

The administration of the College has conferred with the school boards of Rockingham County and Harrisonburg with regard to the financial basis for educating the children of Rockingham County and Harrisonburg in the Anthony-Seager School. Since approximately two hundred dollars from these two school districts will be devoted to educational opportunities in the Anthony-Seager School, it was proposed that Rockingham County and Harrisonburg pay the capital cost of instruction in the respective schools for each child sent to the campus.

Madison Takes Part In Lacrosse Meet

A feeling of pride, accomplishment, and satisfaction was felt by the six girls from Madison who attended the lacrosse tournament as members of the Virginia Association team. Miss Marion O'Neill, the key figure in the promotion of lacrosse at Madison, was quite happy about the outcome of these games.

Sara Welch, Sandra Anderson, Mattie Leith, Nancy Hooper, Helen Edney and Pam Guy were those Madison students who played in the state tournament, held for the selection of players to represent Virginia in the National Tournament, as members of the Virginia team. This team is composed primarily of coaches in Virginia, and Mary, who is the hostess school and was victorious in both. This is a quite a tribute to those persons responsible for initiating and promoting lacrosse at Madison.

Held off to those girls from Madison who played for the Virginia Lacrosse Association this past weekend at the tournament and to Miss O'Neill who also played. The Virginia Association had two games scheduled; Madison vs. Sweetbriar and Madison vs. William and Mary, the last of the three sets was made at both. It was a good game which was thoroughly enjoyed by all.

Speaking of softball, don't forget the intramural program. Softball, tennis, archery, lacrosse and golf are still being offered for your enjoyment.
