Survey shows big drop in number of cheaters

By Tina Beaumont and Ross Richardson
staff writers

Academic cheating has declined sharply the past several years, according to surveys compiled by The Breeze.

Sixty percent of the students who responded to a survey distributed in January said they never have cheated here. A survey done by The Breeze in 1977 showed that 24 percent of those students never cheated.

Surveys were sent randomly to 600 students — 141 responded, but not to all questions.

Dr. Raymond Dingleline, Honor Advisory Board chairman, said the results were "very encouraging. It does bear out the belief that most students regard cheating as wrong. I would hope the efforts of concerned students leaders have been making an impact."

Kym Layne, Honor Council president, said, "I'm hoping this response shows students are taking academics more seriously. I feel we're getting better quality students (at JMU)."

Student Greg Dawson, Honor Council member, said he thought the problem was bigger than the survey indicates. "That's ridiculous. I don't think people are being honest with this survey. I think a lot more people cheat regularly. I don't think people know what cheating is."

"I think (the honor system) is making progress, but not nearly enough. Saying the honor system is marginally effective might be generous," Dawson said.

Students usually cheat to receive better grades, said 56 percent of the respondents. Thirty percent said people cheat because they didn't prepare for tests.

Lesbian accepts her college life

By Charles Taylor

► Second of three parts

It was toward the end of a summer that she accepted the tendency plaguing her since sixth grade. There was no traumatic jolt, no turbulent crisis — instead, a decided end to years of denying a powerful attraction to members of the same sex.

"I remember just waking up one morning feeling calmer and saying, 'Hey, everything's going to be OK.' I finally accepted the way I am."

Two years later, this JMU upperclassman lives an active homosexual life. She's happy and she's secure. But she hasn't forgotten the years of deciphering and denying the feelings she knew aren't customary.

"I never knew what they were and I never followed up on them," she says. "Then in high school it hit me, but I was really strong in my church affiliate so I said, 'That's wrong.' I would just ignore it."

Through high school, she dated men and once almost became engaged. "I've gone out with three or four guys in which you'd call it serious-type dating. I had one really good relationship in high school; in fact, that relationship is still very strong. The only thing he doesn't know about me is that I'm homosexual."

Despite the male relationships, Karen (not her real name) was not able to stifle her attraction to women. It was not until her freshman year that she had the opportunity to test her suspicions first hand — at a party.

"I kind of had an idea it was a woman's gay party and I was right," she says. In her midst were about 35 lesbians, including the group of female friends she'd been hanging around. That didn't make things easier, she recalls.

"I just stood there for a long time and I got drunk. Someone made a pass at me and that kind of scared me, got me thinking."

After the party, the thinking didn't stop. Karen began to link past with present, making decisions about the inklings she'd denied throughout high school. Step by step, she gave in to her tendency.

"It was distressing, it was frustrating," she says. "I would think I had come to grips with it and then I'd go to a party and find out I wasn't as together as I thought I was. I think I was trying more to understand why I had the feelings, to find out if it was right or wrong, come to terms with it and accept that, hey, I'm a homosexual."

The school year ended before her mind was settled, and she went home with a lot of time to consider the recent events in her life.

"I spent the summer just really thinking about myself and how I felt. There was the coming to grips with myself and how I felt as a Christian. I guess my main backup there is, how can God come down on you because you love another person, whether they be male or female?"

When she returned to JMU for her sophomore year, Karen was ready to face a homosexual lifestyle. She dated women she knew from her first parties, including some of the friends who had invited her. She also visited lesbian bars in Washington D.C., Baltimore, Roanoke and Richmond.

Through those experiences, she picked up on the subtleties of identifying other female homosexuals. She estimates 200 to 250 lesbians attend

JMU. That's lower than researcher Alfred Kinsey's theory that 7 percent of American women are homosexual. By his standards, about 315 JMU women would be gay.

In daily life here, most lesbians wear casual preppy fashions and often can be found at sporting events, Karen says. There, "you watch how they walk. Most of them will walk with confidence, some of them walk with the tough look, like, 'Don't bother me.'"

From that husky, athletic-type woman comes the stereotyped lesbian. But that's not a fair image, Karen says. "I'll be sitting with friends of mine at sporting events or anywhere and they'll say, 'Look at that big tough mama. She's got to be gay.' It's not true. I know some very feminine homosexuals who wear the high heels and the dresses all the time. Many you wouldn't suspect at all."

The diversity is a convenient shield for many lesbians, especially with the possible consequences of being discovered. Some parents have threatened to take their daughters out of school when they "found out," Karen says. "They say it's a disease, it's not an alternative lifestyle, that it's something society has created and it's bad."

Few people, including her roommate and parents, know of Karen's lifestyle. But she is confident she'll someday share the secret with her parents.

"I'd like to tell them because it's a part of me," she says. "I've been living this lifestyle for two years and I've grown into it, it's grown into me. I think my mother wouldn't understand, my father would try.

He'd be confused for a while, he would be angry at me, at my friends, at anyone who got me involved in the homosexual world. But I think he would try to understand."

She also has the opinions of society to deal with. "Open your Social Problems book, the first chapter, and you've got social deviance there," she says. "At the top of the list, you've got homosexuals, thieves, murderers. They put you on an equal basis with murderers. I don't feel like I'm hurting anybody physically or mentally. If I am, then that hurts me."

Despite such societal reaction, Karen contentedly searches for a long-term relationship, preferably with a woman, but possibly with a man. "To say no, I won't go out with a man or to pact that I'll never get married, I don't know. I guess you would consider it bisexual." But, she says, "For my future, I'd like to be in a stable relationship with a woman."

For now at least, she is comfortable in the role she's chosen. "It's something that I am, something I've accepted. It's always going to be there, even if I do fall in love with a man. Once you find out you're gay or you have gay tendencies, it's your choice if you're going to be gay or suppress those feelings. A lot of times people will suppress them and find that they're not very happy."

Is Karen happy? She pauses a moment, then smiles. "Yeah, overall," she says. "Right now I would say I'm happy."

"They are insecure," one student responded. "They have a lack of confidence in their own knowledge."

Another responded, "Some students draw a blank at test time although they know the material. They cheat to 'refresh their memory.'"

Parental pressure and laziness were other reasons cited.

Fifty-five percent said they would not report an honor code violation, 25 percent said they would, and 20 percent said it would depend on the circumstance.

Eleven percent of the respondents said it was not cheating to allow someone to copy from their exams. Signing a class roll list for someone should not be a violation, according to 43 percent, and 14 percent said turning in a commercially prepared term paper was not cheating. Only 7 percent said using a text or notes during an exam is not cheating.

JMU's Honor Code lists all of those as violations.

Sixteen percent of the respondents rated the Honor System very effective in deterring cheating. About 67 percent rated it marginally effective and 17 percent rated it ineffective.

Bill denying admission tabled

SGA remains neutral on draft punishment

By Donna Sawyers
SGA reporter

The SGA tabled a bill of opinion Tuesday opposing a Virginia House of Delegates' bill denying males who have not registered for the draft admission to state universities.

White Hall Senator Bob Houston said the SGA should remain neutral. Voicing an opinion would "place a radical black mark on JMU. The bill does not directly represent JMU students."

Frederikson Senator Beth Kesler proposed the bill. She said fines or imprisonment would be adequate punishment.

Also, a bill of opinion proposing the SGA support adding five units to Greek Row was tabled.

Greek Senator Mark Douglas raised the proposal.

One four-unit structure is planned. More housing is needed because two new Greek organizations might be started, he said.

► The SGA voted to give the rugby team $626 to pay league dues and tournament fees.

If the team advances to Mid-Atlantic competition, the SGA will fund it $584 for gas and lodging. If the team advances to national competition, it will be funded an additional $740.

Twenty-two players will attend each game.

► The SGA voted 25-8 to give $531 to the Order of Omega, a Greek honor society.

Six senators abstained.

► The SGA unanimously voted to give $500 to the Intersarsity Christian Fellowship to send its leaders to camp.

► The Finance Committee turned down a proposal requesting the SGA give $150 to the Golden Pearl Court to hold a luncheon honoring Black Emphasis Month.

Chandler Senator David Forbes raised the proposal at the Feb. 14 meeting.

Because the Golden Pearl Court is not a recognized student organization, it cannot be funded, said Sandra Adams, Finance Committee chairwoman. It is a subgroup of Omega Psi Phi, a recognized group.

Forbes then proposed that the SGA give $150 to Omega Psi Phi.

The proposal was sent to the Finance Committee.

► Helen MacNabb, Building and Grounds Committee chairwoman, said a light for the steps at Weaver Hall will be installed next week.

► The SGA unanimously voted to recognize Otis Dove for his 11 years of service as pool maintenance engineer of Savage Natatorium.

Ashby Senator Ken Beuley raised the proposal.

► Pauline McDowell now is Dingleline senator. Mary Ann Dodd moved from the dorm.

Dodd still will serve as Student Services Committee chairwoman.

► The Executive Council must approve all bills passed by the senate.

The Executive Council approved a bill giving the National Collegiate Association for Secretaries $530 to attend the national convention in Memphis, Tenn.

The Honor Council was given $930 from its reserve account to fund Honor Awareness Week and a banquet for Dr. Raymond Dingleline who is retiring this year.

Dingleline is the Honor Council adviser and history department head.

SGA file

The following proposals were raised at Tuesday's SGA meeting:

► Hoffman Senator Dan Caprio proposed that the SGA study the possibility of resurfacing the Warren Campus Center patio.

The proposal was sent to the Buildings and Grounds Committee.

► Commuter Senator Tim Craighead proposed that the SGA paint purple and gold paw prints on the sidewalk leading from the Interstate 81 underpass tunnel to the Convocation Center.

The proposal was sent to the B & G Committee.

The following bills were sent to the Finance Committee:

► Greek Senator Mark Douglas proposed that the SGA give $800 to Alpha Epsilon Rho to help pay for attending the National AERho convention April 4-8.

► Douglas also proposed the SGA give $500 to Psi Chi, the psychology honor society to sponsor a speech by Chris Sizemore, the subject of the book and movie The Three Faces of Eve.

► Douglas also proposed that the SGA give $750 to the Music Industry Association to pay for bus and studio rentals to go to Alpha Audio in Richmond.

► Commuter Senator Jeanne Siye proposed that the SGA give $535 to Phi Beta Lambda to attend the Virginia State PBL Convention.

► Commuter Senator Joni Shelton proposed that the SGA give $285.63 to cover the debts of the JMU Ski Club.

► Greek Senator Phil Holland proposed that JMU give $800 to Kappa Pi to repair, supply and furnish Zirkle House, the student art gallery.

► Commuter Senator Catharine Hagan proposed that the SGA give $320 to the Society for Collegiate Journalists.

► Gifford Senator Clive Hoffman proposed that the SGA give $504 to the Racquetball Club to attend a tournament.

► Howard Johnson Hall Senator Claudia Peters proposed that the SGA give $1470.65 to provide a cave rescue unit at JMU.

► Barbee proposed that the SGA give the Pre-Legal Society $420 to sponsor Legal Interest Week scheduled for April.

Retirement benefits might change

By Bill Goodykoontz
staff writer

The House of Delegates Wednesday voted 68-19 favoring a bill making retirement benefits uniform for state employees.

The Senate must approve the bill for it to become effective.

Retirement benefits for some state employees could be cut up to 7 percent if the bill passes, said Larry Roller, a JMU education professor.

Of the 1,280 JMU employment positions, 997 are paid for by state tax revenue.

In Virginia, state employees' retirement benefits are determined by computing the average salary from their three consecutive, highest-paying years and subtracting $1,200.

A "two-tiered" retirement system now is used. Employees hired before April 1, 1980 are part of one system, while those hired after that date are part of a second system.

Members of the second system must "index" the final average salary on which retirement benefits are based by deducting the percentage cost of living increase in retirement benefits.

As introduced by Delegate Owen Pickett (D-Virginia Beach), the bill would have extended indexing to all employees, but amendments successfully offered by Delegate Vivian Watts (D-Fairfax) would eliminate indexing entirely.

"We're going back on our word to the employees" who were in the system before 1980, she said.

Pickett said he tried to have the amendments eliminated when the bill gets to the Senate rather than on its final vote in the House.

Delegate A.R. Giesen (R-Waynesboro) said that while he was against the amendment, "I'm for the bill. It gives us a single unified system I think will be easier to administer."

Roller said, "The VEA (Virginia Educational Association) worked over 20 years for a good retirement system. Now that we've got it, they want to take it away."

Members of the first system weren't supposed to be affected, when the second system was adopted, Roller said. Their benefits were to remain the same.

Watts said extending indexing would save the system $8 million a year when there has been no "information that our system is in trouble."

But Delegate Ford Quillen (D-Scott), a member of the Appropriations Committee, noted that the state's contribution to the Virginia Supplemental Retirement System has risen from $144 million in 1981 to $220 million in this fiscal year.

Watts also said her amendment would increase the state's contribution to the retirement system by $440,000 to $500,000 a year. Gov. Charles Robb has said he would support the bill if it did not change the amount of the state's contribution.

Roller said, "They (legislators) aren't worried about state employees. They're worried about money."

Delegate Phoebe Orebaugh (R-Rockingham County), said, "At a time when we're trying to improve education, this is the wrong signal to send. Retirement benefits are being whittled away."

Roller said the bill seems attractive at first. It would change the "Rule of 90." Members of the old system could become qualified for full retirement benefits after working 30 years and reaching age 60. The bill would allow members to receive benefits when their experience and age add up to 90, regardless of the age.

This would affect "only about 1 or 2 percent (of state employees) at best," Roller said.

The amount of money computed into retirement benefits would also be affected, Roller said. Employees used to have 5 percent of their salary earmarked for retirement benefits, and the state would match that amount. This year the state agreed to pick up the employees' 5 percent. This increases employees' take-home pay.

The 5 percent still is computed into the employees' retirement benefit now, but the bill "would compute as if we weren't getting that 5 percent at all," Roller said. "That's going to reduce the three highest years of average salary from which the benefits are computed."

Vesting — the number of years an employee must work in the state to become eligible for any retirement benefits — also would change. Employees now have to work at least five years to receive benefits. The bill would increase the number of years to 10.

Orebaugh said the longer vesting time could scare away prospective teachers. "The shorter vestment period would be an incentive for people to stay in teaching even though the pay is poor."

University might provide study dorm

Students might be able to live in an honors dorm in two to three years.

The hall would provide students with a study environment plus cultural programming, said Jim Krivoski, director of residence life, at a Student Services Committee meeting Tuesday.

A faculty member would sponsor intellectual-type programming and parties for the students, he said. The hall might include a computer room.

The honors hall could not be used for two years because students are allowed to stay in rooms until they leave university-sponsored housing.

No hall has been chosen yet. No criteria has been established for student residents.

Also discussed at the meeting: ▶ An aerobic exercise room might be put in each of the residence areas next fall. A room would be put in the Bluestone, Village and Lake Complex areas.

The rooms might include aerobic exercise equipment, scales, jump ropes and machines to measure blood pressure and heart rates.

The Virginia General Assembly must approve the plan.

▶ A committee on Safety and Vandalism has been formed for residence halls. Committee chairman Dick Garber will prepare a model to make residence halls safer. The model will reward students for keeping vandalism low.

▶ Dr. Al Menard, associate dean of students, said a survey is being conducted asking about 250 non-returning students — who did not leave because of academic suspension or probation — why they left JMU. The survey lists 48 choices.

Each May the office surveys about 1,200 incoming freshmen. Every four years, about 5 percent are selected for a four-year study.

The first study group was selected four years ago. Personal growth and significant experiences are recorded in a file.

Commuters OK HoJo's parking

The Commuter Student Committee favors giving Howard Johnson's residents commuter parking tickets, but only if they park in J-lot.

J-lot is located beside the tennis courts on Duke's Drive.

The committee voted favoring the idea at its meeting Monday. Howard Johnson's SGA Senator Claudia Peters requested the vote to get commuter opinion.

She said the residents want the stickers because of inconvenient bus schedules and the distance between the motor lodge and campus.

She proposed a bill at the Jan. 17 SGA meeting to permit the students to get commuter parking stickers.

It was referred to the Student Services Committee. It will be discussed at the next Parking Advisory Committee meeting.

Other action at Monday's meeting:

▶ The possibility of changing Commuter Shooter Night at Calhoun's to Commuter Sponsor Night was discussed, but nothing was decided. At Commuter Sponsor Night, discount prices would be available to all students, not just commuters.

▶ Intramural volleyball sign-up sheets are available today in the commuter student lounge in Warren Campus Center. Men's, women's and co-recreational teams will be formed.

All interested commuters should sign up. Play begins March 12.

Fraternity charged with hazing

By Kim Gibson
police reporter

Campus police recently reported the following arrests:

Kappa Sigma fraternity was charged judicially with hazing after a student participating in an initiation was charged Feb. 15 with public drunkenness.

Student Donald Parr, 21, of Roanoke was charged with public drunkenness about 3 a.m. in parking lot J beside the tennis courts on Duke's Drive.

Parr was found in J-lot after participating in a Kappa Sigma initiation, police said.

Hazing is against Virginia law and university policy.

A judicial charge is made when university policy is broken. It is reviewed by university judicial officials.

► Two students were charged judicially with dangerous practices after they allegedly started a fire in the woods behind the Convocation Center, campus police said. The incident occurred Friday about 1:15 a.m.

Drunken driving

► Student Jon Delvitto, 23, of Springfield, Va., was arrested Feb. 16 and charged with drunken driving, police said.

Delvitto was arrested about 2 a.m. at the intersection of South Main Street and Port Republic Road.

► Non-student David Rowles, 20, of Sugar Grove, W.Va., was arrested Feb. 16 and charged with drunken driving, police said.

Rowles was arrested about 1:30 a.m. on South Main Street in front of JMU.

► Non-student Richard Evans, 19, of Harrisonburg was arrested Friday and charged with drunken driving, police said.

Evans was arrested about 11:15 p.m. near the intersection of Duke Drive West and Paul Street.

Campus police charged seven other individuals with public drunkenness.

► Student Jeffrey Duncan, 20, of Westpoint, Ct., was arrested Sunday about 12:20 a.m.

Duncan also was charged with destruction of state property after he allegedly threw a chair into Newman Lake.

► Student Walter Kudron, 22, of Westfield, N.J., was arrested Feb. 16 about 2 a.m. at the intersection of South Main Street and Port Republic Road.

► Non-student Kenneth Byrne, 18, of Herndon, Va., was arrested Saturday about 8 p.m. during the JMU-George Mason basketball game in the Convocation Center.

Byrne also was charged with resisting arrest.

► A male non-student from Harrisonburg was arrested Feb. 16 about 7:45 p.m. in P-lot across from Chandler Hall.

The male, a minor, also was charged with property damage after he allegedly climbed on a small car parked in P-lot. Police estimated $25 damage in scratches and dents on the car.

Police do not release the names of people younger than 18.

► Non-student Steven Marochello, 18, of Sugar Grove, W.Va., was arrested Feb. 16 about 1:30 a.m. on South Main Street in front of JMU.

► Non-student George Shaffer, 18, of Stanley, Va., was arrested Feb. 16 about 8:50 p.m. in Godwin Hall during the Stray Cats concert.

► Non-student James Mountain, 19, of Arlington, Va., was arrested Feb. 16 about 9:10 p.m. in Godwin Hall during the Stray Cats concert.

Breach of peace

► Non-student Dennis Maestri, 23, of Fairfax was arrested Saturday about 10 p.m. during the JMU-GMU basketball game.

Maestri allegedly was pushing, shouting and cursing at an unidentified person, police said.

Lost and found

► A wallet was stolen from the south gym in Godwin Hall sometime between 2:30 and 3:30 p.m. Sunday, police said.

The wallet was recovered Monday near Madison Memorial Library. $10 was missing.

'The Lion in Winter'

Production plays up talents of JMU actors

By Charles Taylor
features editor

Despite billing as a play with "comedic elegance," the JMU theater division's production of "The Lion in Winter" is not the brand of play that allows its audience to sit down, sit back and be mindlessly entertained.

Instead, it intertwines historical events with the dramatics inside the fictitious 10th-century household of King Henry II of England. Comedy is present and is successful in its context. But it's far from the domineering element.

The play, which opened Tuesday, runs through Sunday. Written by James Goldman, it is directed by JMU senior Wendy McNeny, the second student to direct a Latimer-Shaeffer production.

Deception and deceit are the plot fortes in "The Lion in Winter," as every character does his best to outdo equally scheming counterparts. Each triumphs, then fails time after time throughout the play. It's in watching each squirm his way out of conflict that the audience becomes entranced in the lives of the family.

But even with the script's complexity, it is neither plot nor dramatics that highlight the play. The two prevailing components are within JMU's personnel.

Scott McClelland as Henry II, King of England, and Annette Fama playing his wife, Eleanor, seem to effortlessly breathe life into the scheming, often vicious characters they play. McClelland's stage voice ably weaves emotion into each line, at one moment tense and outraged, at the next tender and relaxed. Fama complements the pair's scenes together with an expertise in subtle gestures. Her sharp glances and gentle touches are at times as potent as the force behind McClelland's voice.

Overall, each role was well cast. Charles Tucker demonstrated an ease with acting in the part of Richard Lionheart while Mike Mannarino added humor as Henry's skittish, wimpish son, John. The remaining four parts were, for the most part, consistent in quality.

Costumes were created by Sally Ann Kessler, a visiting graduate student from University of Virginia. Each shows the results of comprehensive research and an eye for detailed craftsmanship. Kessler should take special pride in outfits designed for Fama and Tucker.

The set design by Pam Schuelke Johnson also demonstrates attention to specifics. With or without a sharp knowledge of 10th century furnishings, it's obvious this set required an extensive background in historical style, not to mention many hours to complete furnishings for seven room scenes.

Henry II (Scott McClelland) attempts to quiet his mistress Alais (Frances Fortna) in one of many dramatic scenes in "The Lion in Winter."

"The Lion in Winter," written in the early 1960s, was also performed here in 1972. That production was directed by Mary Latimer Cordner, a former faculty member who is part of the theatre's namesake.

The 1984 version, even without that prestige, is worth putting on the weekend schedule. It offers enough varied elements successfully to satisfy any theatergoer in any number of ways. The production also instills pride for the talents of some of JMU's finer actors.

Tickets are $3 and $4 for the remaining shows. For box office information, call 433-6260. The curtain rises at 8 p.m. tonight through Saturday, and at 2 p.m. for a Sunday matinee.

At left, Eleanora the Queen (Annette Fama) tries on her crown in the privacy of her chamber. At right, she coaxes son Richard (Charles Tucker) into scheming with the King of France.

'Lion in Winter' director

McNeny finds niche out of spotlight

By Andrea Cope
staff writer

Sometimes it's just a matter of knowing what you're best at and how to go about getting it before success can be yours.

Wendy McNeny, the second student to direct a JMU mainstage theater production, found her place out of the spotlight.

"I'm a very bad actor," she said. "I don't have the talent for it. I can see other people — what's good and bad for them — but it's hard for me to do it myself."

The 22-year-old senior majoring in communication arts is the director of "The Lion in Winter," the theater division's first production of the semester.

At JMU, she has directed Wampler Experimental Theatre productions of "Out of Reach of Children," "Coming Attractions," "Line" and "Uncommon Women." During her freshman and sophomore years, she acted in "Golliwoppers," a children's theater production, and "Table Settings."

McNeny has designed lights and stage managed five plays. She also was stage manager for the 1983 summer dinner theater.

Standing 5 foot, 3 inches ("5 foot, 2-and-a-quarters when I'm in a slumpy mood"), with short, light brown hair, peachy complexion and freckles, McNeny doesn't look the part of the stereotypical flamboyant, omnipotent director in her Levi's and hooded sweat-shirt.

She said she has learned how important it is to know about all categories of theater. "I've tried to take classes in all areas and aspects of it," she said.

She describes herself as friendly and easy to talk to. "A lot if people get the wrong impression of the role of the director," she said. "A director is more like a tour guide who's there to bring out the best in people."

Scott McClelland, who plays Henry II, King of England in "The Lion in Winter," said of McNeny, "I like her because she doesn't say much. She doesn't tell you what to do, she just guides you."

Annette Fama, in the role of Eleanora, said, "This is the third show I've done with her. I love her. She can find the one thing I may be lacking and put her finger on the spot."

McNeny also enjoys working with the casts of the shows she has directed. "Most of the people I'm working with, I've worked with before," she said. "They trust me I guess. You have to have trust to make things work."

After graduation in May, McNeny plans to go to graduate school, but she's not sure where yet. She has applied to the University of Texas and Florida State University in Tallahassee. She is also being considered for a scholarship through the University and Regional Theater Association, which considers college graduates for scholarships and internships and helps place them with the university of their choice.

McNeny hopes to be a professional director in a metropolitan area someday. But, "I doubt I'll be in New York," she said. "It's so big. I don't like crowds."

Was she nervous about the opening night show Tuesday? "It'll probably hit me Tuesday night at 7:45. I don't have time to be nervous."

Wendy McNeny, director of JMU's "The Lion in Winter," says she doesn't like to act. Her behind-the-scenes activities, however, have made up for any regret. (Photo by Yo Nagaya)

FOCUS

In place of the prestigious Grammy awards, LP reviewer Duck Carter takes a look at some of the year's top music happenings. Here, he presents his own "Duckling Awards."

The "I Wish Michael Jackson Had Never Been Born Award" goes to Sting and the Police since their "Synchronicity" probably would have garnered all the trophies had it not been for M. J. and MTV.

The Waste of Space Award goes to Jackson Browne's "Lawyers In Love." If Browne wanted to do music that he thought was fun as he has said about this album, why didn't he just keep this crap to himself?

The Boy Can That Girl Sing Award is taken by Boy George O'Dowd bloomers, excuse me, hands down, even though Michael Jackson exhibits no male characteristics, either.

The "What Is That Girl Snorting?" Award is also no contest. You may not know Cyndi Lauper yet, but you will. Her album, aptly titled "She's So Unusual" and the single "Girls Just Wanna Have Fun" are doing well and with "wrestling" great Lou Albano managing, how could she go wrong?

Adios, I'm A Ghost Award goes, with much respect, to Pete Townsend who took Robert Plant's lead and left an aging band instead of milking the group's name.

"Chameleon of the Year" Award Who, besides David Bowie, could sing disco-pop-rock dressed like the Great Gatsby? What will he think of next?

"Enough is Enough" Award, the Mary Jane Girls are a blatant rip-off of Prince's sex-ploitation group Vanity Six. If Rick James and Prince are that competitive, why don't they just find an alley and beat each others brains out.

"Jack of All-Trades" for 1983 was definitely Phil Collins who must think he has a terminal illness because he does everything like it is his last chance.

Fifth-ranked ODU visits Friday

Win over Tech evens women's record

By Paul Bergeron
staff writer

With two upset wins at home already this week, JMU women's basketball team faces its biggest challenge of the year tomorrow night as it looks to extend the string to three when the Dukes face Old Dominion, ranked fifth in the nation.

JMU (12-12) began its week last Saturday afternoon with a 60-57 win over Charleston University, 18-7 and ranked 11th in the NAIA national poll.

Tuesday night the Dukes knocked off Virginia Tech (72-59) for the first time since the 1978-79 season.

Crisp execution and solid defense have been elements of the Dukes' game most responsible for their recent successes. "There is no doubt that if we play the way we have the past two nights we will beat ODU," said Georgia Deren, who has scored 15 points off the bench this week.

Coach Sheila Moorman was impressed with her team's Tuesday night showing. "It was our best effort in two years. We beat a very good team."

JMU led throughout the game as they were able to control the boards against a very physical VPI squad, and shut down the Gobbler's potent running attack.

Tech entered the game averaging more than 78 points a game, but Moorman's defensive strategy held them 19 points below the norm.

"We have played and defeated two straight high scoring teams in a row. I tell the team there is two ways of shutting down a high scoring team, play good defense and control the tempo. I think we were able to do that effectively," Moorman explained.

Reserve guard Mary Gilligan, whose minutes played have increased of late, was the offensive catalyst for JMU as she scored a career-high 18 points against her former team.

"We worked the ball around well outside against their zone defense and got good shots," Gilligan said. Gilligan was five of six from the floor and eight of nine from foul line.

Sue Manelski added 14 more backcourt points as she hit two of four field goals and made all 10 free throw attempts. On the year Manelski is hitting 88 percent of her free throws, sixth in the nation. As a team JMU shot 32 of 38 from the line Tuesday.

According to Moorman, JMU will be facing a team in a class by themselves tomorrow night at 7:30 p.m.

"We are just proud to be on the same floor with them," Moorman said. "This game will give us the experience of playing a team of their caliber. This will familiarize our players into what it feels like to play against one of the best in the nation."

Gilligan, a senior who has faced ODU three times, is ready for tomorrow's game. "We will be more experienced for them this time."

VMI deflates high-flying Dukes

By John Castaldi
assistant sports editor

All the Dukes can do now is get back up and brush themselves off.

But it could take a lot of brushing to remove the stains of last night's 62-60 overtime loss to the 8-18 VMI

ECAC South

Team	League record	Overall record
Richmond	7-1	17-7
William & Mary	4-3	11-12
Navy	5-4	21-7
George Mason	4-4	19-5
JMU	3-4	12-12
East Carolina	1-8	4-20

Saturday's games

William and Mary at George Mason
Richmond at JMU
Navy at Army

Keydets.

JMU went into the game riding the momentum of its overtime win against George Mason University Saturday night. That momentum is gone, and it couldn't have been lost at a worse time.

Saturday night the Dukes play host to the ECAC South-leading University of Richmond Spiders (7-1, 17-7).

JMU is playing for more than just salvaging some dignity in this rebuilding year. The Dukes are vying for position in the upcoming ECAC South Tournament to be held in the Convocation Center March 8-10.

The first- and second-place finishers in the ECAC South receive automatic byes in the first round of the tournament. The Spiders have sewn up the first-place bye, but Navy, William and Mary, George Mason, and JMU are all contenders for the second-place spot.

JMU's chances of winning the ECAC South Tournament could depend heavily on earning that second-place bye. As the loss to VMI last night shows, the Dukes are still too young and inconsistent to be expected to win three straight games (which is what they would have to do if they do not get a bye).

The Spider game is obviously the most important for the Dukes now. JMU dropped a 57-55 overtime decision to the Spiders in Richmond in January.

In that game, the Dukes and the flu combined to hold Richmond's John Newman to eight points, far below his 21.7 average.

It was Spider guard Kelvin Johnson's 22-point performance that buried the Dukes.

Campanelli's request

JMU basketball coach Lou Campanelli has expressed concern with the throwing of objects onto the court during games in the Convocation Center.

Although Campanelli said he approves of streamers being thrown onto the court following JMU's initial basket, objects being thrown onto the court thereafter could result in a technical foul being called against the Dukes.

The officials had to stop play eight times during the JMU-George Mason University game Saturday night.

"The enthusiasm is great," Campanelli said. "But I wish it would stop after the first time."

Tony Gentile

Winning important to team-leading sophomore

By Scott Tolley
assistant sports editor

Some people take losing graciously — JMU wrestler Tony Gentile isn't one of those people.

"I don't take too well to losing," Gentile said. "If you wrestle someone really tough it comes down to who doesn't want to lose the most. If you go out on the wrestling mat not to lose then that takes away from your wrestling ability. There's a difference between winning and not losing."

Losing on the wrestling mats is something that Gentile doesn't have to worry about too often.

Gentile, a 150-pound sophomore, is leading the team in wins (26-4) and winning percentage (.867), and is currently ranked seventh in the nation at 150 pounds by "Amateur Wrestling News."

The 5-foot-6 and a half inch Gentile can be called a "takedown artist" for the quick and aggressive style he displays on his feet.

"I'm a lot stronger on my feet than on top or bottom, because in high school that's what I was drilled to do. I was drilled to be better on my feet," Gentile said.

Gentile's college career has been a successful one, winning is not something he learned at JMU.

Growing up in Paulsboro, N.J., a town with a strong wrestling background, it was inevitable that Gentile would be a wrestler. With the help of his father who coached wrestling, he was introduced to the sport at an early age.

He started wrestling at the age of seven and by the time he reached high school he had developed his skills to the point where he was already an accomplished wrestler.

As a freshman at Paulsboro High School, Gentile had a record of 22-0 on the junior varsity. In four years of high school he compiled a record of 105-5.

"I did fairly well in high school," Gentile said modestly. "I think the team I came from had a really good coach. I learned a lot in high school because of a good coach."

His coach in high school was Bob Fredericks, a good friend of JMU wrestling coach Dick Besnier. This is one reason JMU found out about and became interested in Gentile.

"We were aware of Tony from his sophomore year on," Besnier said. "We were watching him and paying attention to him. It was obvious he was a skilled wrestler from an outstanding high school program."

"He has great quickness, good mat sense, and is hard-nosed. He's a quality young man and those are all the things we're looking for in a student-athlete."

Gentile brought his talents to JMU and established a name for himself right away.

As a freshman Gentile had a record of 21-8 and won the state title. An injury late in the season prevented him from competing in the regional tournament which qualifies a wrestler for nationals.

Although Gentile was unable to compete late in the season he still was voted third team freshman All-America.

"I felt a lot of pressure in high school," Gentile said. "It was getting to the point where it felt more like a job than a sport and then I got to Madison and it was great being the underdog again, being a freshman — it really got me enthused. Being an underdog motivates you . . . I think that was part of my being pretty successful my freshman year."

With the early success Gentile has achieved in his college career the possibility of All-America honors and a national title may be in his future.

"I'd like to be an All-America this year, but that's still up for grabs. I'm still young, but it's possible, anything is possible. But that is one of my goals before I get out of college, to be an All-America," Gentile said.

Besnier also is optimistic about Gentile's future. "Tony has the potential to be an All-America before he graduates — before he finishes his college career," he said.

"It may not happen this year — it might be a year away, it might be two years away, and then again it might happen this year. There's a lot of factors involved in being an All-America, some you can control, some of them you don't control. The thing is you have to be ready to take advantage of opportunities when they present themselves."

Tony doesn't see a national title in his future, but Besnier doesn't count the possibility out.

"Experience is a factor at the national level and that's something he needs to get more of," Besnier said.

"He definitely has potential to do that. That remains to be seen in the next year or so. I think you have to get to the nationals, you've got to compete, you've got to place before you worry about winning. But what the next two years hold remains to be seen."

JMU wrestlers shoot for regional titles

By Scott Tolley
assistant sports editor

The JMU wrestling team has finished its dual-meet season and now travels to George Mason University for the Eastern Regional Tournament this weekend.

The tournament includes both non-conference and conference teams whose league has no post-season tournament.

A total of 13 wrestlers will advance from the tournament into the national tournament. The regional tournament will produce 10 champions and coaches will choose three wild card wrestlers.

JMU wrestling coach Dick Besnier said, "Team scores are kept, and you'll have an eastern regional champion, but it's more of an individual-type thing."

"Seeding will have a great bearing on what happens," Besnier said. "Who you meet when and when you wrestle is a great factor on who places."

Besnier said that three JMU wrestlers should be seeded high in the tournament. Jeff "Peanut" Bowyer at 118, Tony Gentile at 150 and Phil Rice, who wrestled most of the year at 190, but will wrestle at 177, should all be seeded high.

Bowyer, a freshman, has been wrestling well as of late according to Besnier, and should be seeded number two in the tournament.

In JMU's two victories last week against American University (28-8) and George Washington (48-6) Bowyer picked up two wins to put his record at 21-12.

"Right now I'm starting to perform at my peak, and this is a good time to be wrestling well," Bowyer said. "If I wrestle up to me potential I can place."

Besnier said if the team wrestles the way they have been lately they should do well.

State gymnastic finals held here this weekend

JMU will be the site of both the men's and women's State Collegiate Gymnastics Championships this weekend.

The women's competition, which includes JMU, Longwood College, Radford University, Virginia Tech and William and Mary, will be held Saturday beginning at 1:30 p.m.

The women's event will include the balance beam, floor exercise, uneven parallel bars and vault.

Joining JMU in the men's competition will be Radford University, the University of Virginia, Virginia Tech and William and Mary.

The men's events include the floor exercise, horizontal bar, parallel bars, pommel horse, rings and vault and the competition will begin Sunday at 1:30 p.m.

The JMU men's team, led by sophomore Tim Ratliff, is having its finest season ever as the Dukes have broken the JMU scoring record three times this season.

Ratliff, JMU's record holder in the horizontal bar, parallel bars and the all-around, is a top contender for the state title in the horizontal bars.

Senior Jon Perry will be defending his 1982 state title in the floor exercise, and junior Tom Mannik, JMU record-holder in the pommel horse, will contend in that event.

The JMU women's team, which set a school scoring record earlier this month, will be led by senior Stephanie Mann, sophomore Tracy Hash and freshman Laura Peterson. Karen Polis and Leslie Karnitschnig are expected to miss the event due to injury.

Tickets for each day are $2 for adults and $1 for students. JMU students will be admitted with their IDs.

William and Mary is the defending state champion in both the men's and women's competition.

Cheating

JMU students today either cheat less than in 1977, or they lie more.

In a Breeze survey conducted in January, only 40 percent of JMU students who responded admitted cheating at least once. In 1977, 76 percent of students answering a similar survey said they had cheated.

Perhaps more importantly, of the 141 January respondents, less than half said they would report a cheater. And none has ever reported an honor violation. This problem hurts the honor system.

A couple of respondents suggested that "putting each student in his own cubicle naked" or hiring "storm troopers armed and willing to kill any suspected cheaters on sight" would help curb cheating. We think the problem can be resolved by placing more emphasis on student participation in the honor system. JMU's Honor Council has been working on increasing student awareness, but progress takes time.

The success of an honor system depends on student involvement. If a student witnesses an honor violation, he should report it. Otherwise, the system can't work.

And when only 16 percent of respondents rate the honor system as "very effective," some changes are in order. More students might report cheating if they thought penalties frequently were enforced.

It appears students respect honesty more than the honor system. Peer pressure is one reason cheating is unacceptable. With emphasis now placed on honor awareness, we hope the students will take the system seriously and understand their obligation to the honor code.

February: Dead grass and lousy holidays

T.S. Eliot wrote that "April is the cruellest month." Sorry T.S., but you were off by about two months.

I hate February. Even though it has only 28 days — 29 this leap year, which only makes it worse — it's still the longest, most boring, most soul-sapping month of the year.

By February, everything good about winter is gone (sorry skiers). Christmas and New Year's, the only good things in winter, are far past, and spring, ah spring, seems a million years away.

I have a theory that winter is actually a conspiracy by the manufacturers of cold medicine and chapstick to create a market, much like the way the Head and Shoulders people make you feel like a leper if you scratch your head.

Anyway, you've got to blame somebody, and big business is always an easy target. Or maybe I could blame it on big labor. Or how about the poor, they get blamed for everything these days.

However, I digress. February is the target of my wrath.

Look at the lousy holidays that February has to offer. Let's see, there's Groundhog Day. How do you celebrate Groundhog Day?

Have you ever heard of anyone actually having a Groundhog Day party? What would you do, open gifts and gather around the family table for roast groundhog and stuffing?

Then there's the presidents' birthdays. But all

But what about St. Valentine's Day, you ask? Well it's hard to get one's romantic ardor up when your sweetheart has chapped lips and a runny nose. And right before Valentine's day roses go at about 60 bucks a dozen. What was I just saying about a conspiracy?

At least this February has been unusually mild. This time last year, we were still digging out from a snowstorm. But don't be fooled, winter isn't over yet, and just when you least expect it — bam, a foot of white stuff on the ground.

Remember how pretty the snow looked in November? That was then, this is now.

I'm sorry, but I'm sick of winter. I'm sick of leafless trees, dead grass and I'm sick of the Winter Olympics.

All I want is one lousy day of 70 degree temperatures, so I can ride around with the windows rolled down. Is that asking too much?

March is only a week away. Speaking of March, I think I'll give up winter for Lent.

that they're good for is closing the banks and post office. I bet if Abe were alive today he would at least try to emancipate us from the fetters of February.

It's no coincidence that Yuri Andropov and Ethel Merman both kicked the bucket this month. They were just smarter than the rest of us.

Appalled Homosexuality article offensive

To the editor:

Like so many of my fellow students, I was appalled after reading Charles Taylor's article about homosexuality at JMU in the Feb. 20 issue of The Breeze. I feel Mr. Taylor has well overstepped his bounds as a member of the newspaper's staff in his latest article.

I am surprised to discover Mr. Taylor has achieved such an important position in our school publication without having developed the responsibility his job entails.

In support of the one individual about whom the article was written, Mr. Taylor has managed to enrage and offend nearly all of this university's remaining 9,000 students.

In his article, Taylor quoted his anonymous source, "Brian," as estimating the number of male homosexuals at JMU to be about 1,500. Mr. Taylor, I realize you aren't a math major, but grab your calculator and figure it out. That number represents about 37 percent of our male population!

Admittedly, Mr. Taylor cited reports which placed the number at a lower but still quite large total. However, later in the article he again referred to 1,500 as the accepted total. Certainly "Brian" would know better than I, but I must question Mr. Taylor's authority to use such unsubstantiated figures in a matter as serious as this one.

As college students, we are all quite aware every college in this country has a reputation of one sort or another. Some schools are known for their academics while others are known for their parties. Like it or not, these reputations do exist, and I shudder to think what might be said about JMU in the near future.

I should think that in a school as large as ours there are more important matters at hand than homosexuality on our campus, yet this is the first topic all year to which an entire series has been devoted. After all, it does make for better headlines than a tuition increase.

This series of articles appears when our school is just beginning to enjoy the fine reputation it deserves among intercollegiate circles, but with one fell swoop of third-rate journalism, Mr. Taylor has done considerable damage to each one of us, not to mention the institution as a whole.

As a proud member of the remaining 63 percent of our male population, I hardly await his future articles.

To the editor:

After reading Chris Merritt's letter concerning America and that God-awful communism, I found myself bursting with pride.

I am an American and very proud of the fact. His letter inspired much thinking about the world.

I thought about Vietnam and El Salvador, and it made me proud to be an American.

I thought of the war we are involved in with Nicaragua, and it made me proud to be an American.

I thought of the recent bombing of Beirut and the innocent civilians killed, and it made me proud to be an American.

America — the home of James Watt, Anita Bryant, Jesse Helms and Jerry Falwell — makes me proud.

Chris Merritt is correct when he says the United States does not need "shameless criticism." The facts can speak for themselves.

United Way says, 'Thanks, JMU'

To the editor:

Thank you JMU employees, faculty and students for time, effort and money given. Thank you for helping so many and for the smiles you have created.

The United Way of Harrisonburg and Rockingham County, Inc., collects and distributes money and volunteer help. It also helps people find organizations or services they may need.

The Big Brothers-Big Sisters provide companionship for children coming from one parent households. One-third of all match-ups are JMU students.

In the First Step program, which seeks to end domestic violence, 90 percent of the children's program is run by students. Because of you, these programs are much more successful.

Also, the more than $25,000 donated by JMU faculty and staff helps over a dozen local and non-profit organizations. Without you, 1984 would have been a very difficult year.

So thank you JMU employees, faculty and students. Your time and money are deeply appreciated.

Marines begin withdrawal

BEIRUT, Lebanon — The Marine withdrawal from Beirut officially got underway Tuesday as U.S. Navy helicopters took Marines from their base at Beirut's airport to warships in the Mediterranean.

Israeli jets, meanwhile, bombed and strafed positions in the Syrian-controlled mountains east of the capital.

Marine spokesman Maj. Dennis Brooks said he could not say how many of the 1,300 Marines were withdrawn Tuesday.

Brooks estimated it would take a week or two to evacuate the base at Beirut's airport.

The airport has been virtually surrounded by anti-government forces since last Wednesday. At that time Druse fighters drove to the coast south of the base, linking up with their Shiite allies and further undermining the Lebanese government.

"I'm ready to go. I've got women to meet and beers to drink," said Lance Cpl. Samuel Lee, 20, as he moved out.

Asked about the Marines' mission, he said, "We were just trying to restore the peace. It doesn't look like it happened."

Nicaragua elections set for November

MANAGUA, Nicaragua — The Sandinista government said Tuesday it will hold nationwide elections Nov. 4, three months earlier than expected.

But it insisted that Marxism would remain a part of "Sandinista democracy."

"We do not accept democracy that is ordered by the U.S. government," said Daniel Ortega, in an apparent reference to U.S. pressure for open elections.

Anti-Marcos forces hold demonstration

BACOLOD, Philippines — Thousands marched peacefully through this central Philippine provincial capital Tuesday calling for an end to President Ferdinand Marcos' rule and a boycott of the May parliamentary elections.

The protesters, numbering about 10,000, converged on a plaza for a three-hour rally.

No evidence of chemical weapons in Afghanistan

WASHINGTON — The United States said Tuesday it had no solid evidence that the Soviets used chemical weapons in Afghanistan in 1983.

The report also said that toxic chemicals killed fewer people in Cambodia and Laos than in 1982.

The State Department report contrasted sharply with previous U.S. assertions that more than 10,000 people have been killed by chemical weapons in Afghanistan, Laos and Cambodia, where rebel forces are opposing communist governments.

The report, which gave no reason for the apparent decline, was the latest in a series submitted to the United Nations in support of U.S. allegations of use of Soviet chemical weapons in foreign conflicts.

New disease baffles doctors

LYNCHBURG — A man comatose since November has become the second person to die of a disease that has baffled researchers since it infected five people in central Virginia late last year.

The disease causes symptoms similar to encephalitis, an inflammation of the brain. Its cause is unknown.

Doctors believe the disease is linked to the same organism that causes Rocky Mountain spotted fever and typhus, which is carried by some ticks.

Structural failure caused plane crash

CHARLOTTESVILLE — A failure in the main support structure caused a small plane to lose its right wing, sending it into the median of a highway and killing all four people aboard, federal investigators said Monday.

Investigators have not yet determined why the support structure came apart.

The plane smashed last Friday into a median on Interstate 64.

Double-secret probation possible for Amherst frats

AMHERST, Mass. — Nine Amherst College students began a four-day hunger strike Tuesday, hoping to prevent a ban of fraternities here.

— More than 200 students occupied the school president's office in a peaceful demonstration Monday, but they did not sway officials.

The school's Board of Trustees is expected to vote this weekend on the issue at a meeting in New York City.

Faculty members voted 90-29 last fall to urge abolition of the 160-year-old fraternity system.

The faculty said there has been little improvement since 1978 when an accrediting committee criticized the "appalling" and "sheer gross behavior" it encountered at several fraternity houses.

Court allows bankrupt businesses to cancel contracts

WASHINGTON — Failing businesses have broad leeway to cancel union contracts when they file for bankruptcy, the Supreme Court ruled Wednesday.

The court ruled that businesses do not have to prove to a bankruptcy judge that their survival would be at stake if they honor union agreements.

The ruling could have significant impact in major corporate reorganizations — such as Continental Airlines — which filed for bankruptcy last October.

Continental sought court approval to scrap its labor contracts and reorganize with a smaller payroll. The company said it could not afford the salaries it had been paying and still compete with airlines that have lower operating costs.

Mondale wins Iowa caucuses

DES MOINES, Iowa — Sen. Walter Mondale won the Iowa Democratic Caucuses Monday, getting more votes than all his competitors combined.

But the big story was who did and who didn't come in second.

Sen. Gary Hart came in second, giving his campaign new life.

Coming in third was former Sen. George McGovern, who surprised almost everyone with his showing.

The only big loser in Iowa was Sen. John Glenn, who finished fifth among eight candidates after being regarded as Mondale's principal rival.

Druse leader wants to visit the United States

WASHINGTON — Walid Jumblatt, whose Druse rebels are fighting to topple the U.S.-backed government of Lebanon, is seeking a visa to visit the United States.

Joe Reap, a State Department spokesman, said Tuesday that Jumblatt has applied for permission to visit the United States next month.

Reap said he did not know any details about Jumblatt's proposed visit.
