Cultures fuse together for diverse show

BY ANTHONY SUCCI

It was nearly 9 p.m. when John Andrew Golightly walked the stage dressed in a suit and tie. The clogging shoes, polished to a shiny black, made a soft sound as he stepped. The music by the student band played softly in the background. Golightly was the first of the four cloggers to perform. The whole evening was built around him.

His presence was felt immediately. Golightly launched into a clogging routine. The audience was mesmerized. They were drawn in by his energy and passion. The clogging shoes, heavy and cumbersome, were transformed into extensions of his body. He moved with a fluidity and grace that was both surprising and charming.

Golightly's performance was followed by that of another student. The audience was still captivated as the second clogger stepped onto the stage. This clogger was different from the first. His style was more intricate, his movements more delicate. The audience was left breathless as he finished his routine.

The third clogger was a woman. Her presence added a new dimension to the performance. She moved with a grace and elegance that was both captivating and mesmerizing. Her clogging shoes, once again, were transformed into extensions of her body. She moved with a fluidity and grace that was both surprising and charming.

The fourth and final clogger, a man, impressed the audience with his strength and agility. He moved with a confidence and ease that was both impressive and inspiring. The audience was left in awe as he finished his routine.

The evening ended with a performance by the student band. The music was lively and energetic. The audience was left feeling uplifted and invigorated. The evening had been a success, and the audience was grateful for the chance to witness such a spectacular performance.

Electrons are back again. Time to do the weekly column to avoid being asked about the meaning of life or the heat death of the universe. So, welcome back, dear friends and benefactors. I can only imagine the heat death of the universe is something that is spent in one of your coin-ops, talking about your physics homework with your roommates. I hope YOU are still alive in my thought, I thought of you when I was busy.

When mutual friends break up...

One of the most awkward parts of going through a breakup is the social interaction that comes with it. What do you say to your mutual friends? Do you avoid them? Do you bring it up? And how do you even break the news to them? There are no easy answers, but here are a few suggestions to help you navigate this tricky situation.

1. Be honest: It's important to be truthful with your friends about what happened. This will help them understand the situation and prevent misunderstandings.
2. Be supportive: Even though you may be feeling angry or hurt, try to remain supportive of your mutual friends. This will help them feel comfortable talking to you.
3. Avoid judgment: Don't judge your mutual friends for their actions. Everyone makes mistakes, and everyone has differentiating experiences.
4. Be patient: Breaking up can be a slow process, especially if there are feelings still lingering. Be patient with your mutual friends as they work through their emotions.

Remember, the most important thing is to be there for your mutual friends during this difficult time. They may need someone to listen to them or simply to be around. By being honest, supportive, and patient, you can help them through this challenging experience.
Men's and women's teams lose to Lancers on Saturday

BY ERIK LINDSAY

Tennis gets heated

Saturdays prove to be a tough day for JMU teams as the men's and women's tennis teams both fell to Longwood.

The men's team had a few chances to stop the Dukes but fell short. Longwood won the doubles and then won five straight singles matches, including both of JMU's No. 1s.

The women's team had a more successful day. They won two out of three doubles matches and four of six singles matches. JMU's No. 1, Lisa Zhang, won in straight sets while the No. 3 and No. 6 singles matches were won by Longwood.

"When you lose that crucial doubles point," JMU head coach Ken Ilmino said, "it's possible the match is lost, but you just have to keep going and keep fighting.

Exhibition game at L.A. Coliseum proves historic

World record set Saturday for attendance at a baseball game

LOS ANGELES — They closed left field. A Soldier, in vision of the gods, in his role as the real umpire. The crowd clicked its feet, sang "Sweet Caroline," and roared as Boston took the lead.

But as Paul Simon said no IUHO.

"If not now, when? If not us, who?"

The Olympics, of course, is China's stage from which to project world leadership, culture and a successful way of life. It is argued, is a more tool to that progress.

While no Olympics is ever solely about athletes -- the more mention of the Beijin, Mexico City and Munich quadrennials usually includes talk about political imagery -- athletes and international competition remain the heart of any Games. A boycott, in whatever form, diminishes and tarnishes that goal.

Certainly that was the aim and result of President Carter's boycott of the Moscow, Mexico City and Munich quadrennials concerning the Berlin, Paris and Los Angeles Games. Each, in its time, was heralded as the "first generation of Los Angeles fans," and the Los Angeles Times was forced to say, "The hack is gone now, and on Saturday left field ran a lilliputian 201 feet.

For the men, the Red Sox won, 7-4, powered by a three-run home run that carried Ken in Cash and a two-run shot from first baseman Kevin Kelleher. But for the Dodgers, James Jones homered over the foul line in left, and hapless Gwynn homered too.

When the Dodgers set up temporary shop in the Coliseum from M9-3, a track surrounded the baseball field, as bright and busy as any any in Paris or London.

The mound flashed with the Little League World Series, left field runs common.

DODGERS: Exhibition game a hit

The first few plays of their contest were not what Kelly Pullen expected for a 7-0 spread of the Dodgers.

Three-time All-American Tyler Hansbrough scored the next five points on a layup, a personal foul for Leon Powe, and an and-1 putback for Jermaine O'Neal. It was a bright spot for JMU.

Picturing UMU

The Prism Gallery displays sophomores' photography of what JMU means to them by COLLEEN MAVICKI, contributing writer

Students may have noticed the slide show of pictures that has been running on the Common Students' page of the JMU Web site, but are not aware of who takes those photographs or why they are there.

PhotographyUMU is an organization where we take pictures of JMU and Herrnhut and share our experiences," said Alex Consolani, a sophomore SNMP major from Yorkville, VA.

The PhotographyUMU project outlined the opening display on JMU's second floor, located on the lowest level of The Festival Conference and Student Center. The project is an attempt to bring together both their interests and their photography skills. Fresh Denver, the Director of Institutional Research and the man who runs the project, said he heard of the idea eight years ago at a conference. He was impressed with the program and wanted to bring one to JMU years ago when he was able to obtain equipment from the Division of Student Affairs and then proceed with Planning.

"Visually all the data we collect about students are quantifiable, but there is a lot that these numbers can't tell," Denver said. "One of the reasons we made this an opportunity for the students to take pictures was to help us understand who the students are and how the campus is perceived, which is a lot that those numbers can't tell us."

While some of the students participated in the project to get credits for their photography classes, they were more interested in both their interests and their photography skills.

Be Your Own Pet releases second album, focuses on silly topics and catchy lyrics

BY ALEX ALLENCOE, contributing writer

Be Your Own Pet has always been about having fun and doing what you want, as attitude that hasn't changed on their newest album Get Awkward. The band, a collection of tagging, early twenty-somethings, know how to rock a party.

"Captivated by fetching lead singer, Jamie Paulin, the band's garage-psyche sound took the songs with their soft, melodic début album in stride, with its band of back-up musicians doing a solid job of backing up the singer on every song," reported Andrew "Jem" Schon, a sophomore communications major.

"Be Your Own Pet has always been about having fun and doing what you want, as attitude that hasn't changed on their newest album Get Awkward," said Andrew "Jem" Schon, a sophomore communications major.

"The acts are very profound, and (he) [Miles Keller] said. "One of the reasons why we did this piece is because we feel like it's a powerful piece of music with professional dance moves."

"Be Your Own Pet's greatest strengths in its ability to put its own spin on common, everyday themes. Take the song "Becky," with its upbeat lyrics, and place it on high school life, but Be Your Own Pet manages to ring almost any type of music and almost any type of attitude," said Alex Consolani, a sophomore SNMP major from Yorkville, VA.

The band's garage-punk guitar along with Paulin's soft, melodic sound makes the songs even more enjoyable. The only downside to the album is the lack of variety in the songs.

"I am a Bendel, Texas native. You are a maverick. We are choosing each other and taking the road less traveled._ The album quickly gained pure criticism from critics and became one of the year's most entertaining albums."

Now a single years older, Be Your Own Pet thankfully hasn't any of its youthful enthusiasm. They got Get Awkward they still fall into that teenage angst and quality, bringing it with while writing and making sure electric guitar takes center stage. This year the band has been a bit lower key, with and as Justin said in the opening song "Paper Bag," "Next year we'll be 21. I look out world I want to live free."

"Take note: you've been warned. Be Your Own Pet is on the move."

'Superhero Movie' contributes to downhill trend of pointless parodies

Spoof film fails to find humor, uses tired, stupid jokes

BY JUSTIN THURMOND, contributing writer

Although everyone has an opinion on what is funny and what is not, everyone agrees to laugh. They say it's the best medicine, whether it's a simple joke, dirty comedy, dumb comedy or "Superhero Movie," it focuses on parody. However, the parody comedy has been beat to death by bad jokes and the same old not-so-amusing humor. Yet these efforts never just keep coming.

"Do you remember the movie "Hot Shots?"" Does the movie "Airplane?" ring a bell? Or maybe it's " Naked Gun that you used to love as a kid."

These movies optimize the parody comedy, re-

It had no originality, but it was not as bad as "Superhero Movie." This movie was so bad, it still had some good jokes. However, "Scary Movie" and "Date Movie" were released. Neither did they help in rebuilding the downhill trend for parodies, 2007 didn't deliver.

early, which is what really caught my eye at first," Wilhelms said. "Then I read the rest of the e-mail and I'm glad I responded." Wilhelms believed that the project has made him more willing to explore JMU.

"It has been an evolving process," said Definity. "We started with their freshman year and students wanted to continue with it so now we are going to be able to follow the same group of students until they graduate." It is expected that the students will participate to make and keep memories through the Picture JMU project. The picture?, on display vary from roommates, to road trips, to the enormous amount of activities, to high points, to low points, to memorable moments.

The pictures will be on display in the Prism Gallery until May. The pictures can also be viewed on the JMU Web site.

Stop 'to reflect on soldiers' lives

"Stop-Loss" is of the latter variety, a meaningful, albeit chaotic, image of the soldiers' tragedy and the country's moral verdict. An unabashed left-leaning, anti-war film, "Stop-Loss" stars Joseph Gordon-Levitt as Brandon King, a young American soldier who found himself as a walk-on at the movie industry in Los Angeles. King was expected to return home from a five-week trip with some of the most accomplished military personnel in the country, but he found himself instead in the middle of a war-torn country.

"Stop-Loss" is not just a war movie, but a film about the human condition. It is a story of the soldiers who were forced to serve past their original commitments to fight, and the consequences of their actions. It is a story of the soldiers who were left to fight alone, and the impact that had on them and their families.

The film has been criticized for its graphic and unnecessarily violent scenes, but it is also praised for its emotional depth and its exploration of the human psyche. "Stop-Loss" is a film that forces soldiers to question their actions and their impact on others, and it is a film that forces audiences to reflect on the consequences of war.
