On Wednesday, Tamara Young won a new chance. After an impressive shooting at the Pre-Draft Camp on Friday and Saturday, the senior forward was chosen near the top of the list by the Atlanta Dream in the 2008 WNBA Draft.

The first round of the draft was held at the Mohegan Sun in Uncasville, Conn., on Friday. In the second round, the Dream selected Young as the eighth overall pick.

Young, who is from Wilmington, N.C., said she was surprised to be chosen by the Dream.

"I never expected this," Young said. "I'm just going to go out there and play hard and do my best for the team."

The Dream, which is located in Atlanta, has been looking for a forward to fill the void left by the graduation of guard稠 阿什顿·劳德

Because I Said So | GLENSTON, contributing writer

PRESIDENTIAL election years have been on my mind as I listened to the TV news and read the latest campaign update of who said what, who was bat- tling in the polls and so on. But college has been a huge value-added in my life as I have now realized that this country's media is devoid of constructive political dialogue. I believe that we viewers wouldn't understand real issues if they blew in the face.

We know that our candidates are vapid. Dr. Biden and Obama are not very bright and McCain is simply a man with lots of money. Realistically speaking, they have been running at the highest level, as they are, but they are not in the mix of running for the White House. As Senator Biden has made the case in his few appearances so far, he is not the right one for the job.

If states with similar demographics in 2000 voted for the same candidates, they would have chosen a new state candidate in 2000. The candidates really mean nothing because they are having too much fun with their charade. All candidates have the same platform.

In this current era of the social media, the media fails to cover candidates on the issues, instead of the incredible lies these candidates have written in their campaign blogs. The media should be more critical and hold these candidates accountable for their lies.

We are seeing a profound lack of transparency in how this country is truly being run. It is sad to see how our society is deteriorating when we have many problems to deal with. People need to wake up and realize that our country is in real crisis. The media should be more critical of how our country is being run.

It is sad to see how the media is not covering candidates on the issues. It is a shame that we have a country where people are not even aware of the issues that need to be covered. The media should be more critical and hold these candidates accountable for their lies.

Blackwater a Swamp of Unaccountability

LUBBOCK, Texas — Last week, the U.S. State Department apparently unsealed the private security firm Blackwater Worldwide’s contract to protect diplomats in Iraq despite a number of incidents that have thrown into question the policies regarding private security firms and the objectives of the Iraqi government and the United States.

Blackwater Worldwide (formerly Blackwater prise to provide security services for Paul Bre-

and Blackwater has earned more than a billion dollars from the U.S. government since 2001, according to a congressional report.

However, problems have arisen regarding the behavior and direction of such mercenaries as well as rising costs of accountability. According to a senior Republican aide, the U.S. government has spotted a series of incidents involving private contractors in Iraq, and Blackwater security forces were among the teams sent to investigate.

More recently, Blackwater security forces opened fire in Baghdad and killed 17 civilians, including women and children. The New York Times has noted that the attacks have raised new quesions about the role of such mercenary firms in the Iraqi war.

The use of necessary forces has been decided for centuries. In The Prince, Niccolo Machiavelli states that mercenaries are given better equipment, but America’s military establishment, by and large, has held fast to the standards we could expect from such an institution.

Beattie cover band, Vapower, a regular at popular Florence venue, the BeBop Music Club

BY JILL WHEELER

FLORENCE, Italy - Upon entering to Florence, Italy for the summer, it seemed obvious that such a culturally rich city and region of the world, art would be blending with a multitude of gallerists and music would be filling the air. While it is true that art is abundant in the crowded streets of little Florence, it seems music is just as widely emphasized. The BeBop Music Club offers music lovers hope and a stimulating artistic environment in a city surprisingly void of live bands and a substantial musical community. However, Tuesday nights with the Beattie cover band Vapower offer a stimulating alternative to the typical pubs and monotonous dancehalls littered throughout the city.

The BeBop Music Club is a unique venue in Florence as it boasts an impressive history and an integrating live music schedule, hoarding every night of the week. The club was originally a wine bar in the early 1980s. It became BeBop in 1993 when it transformed into a more family-friendly, volcanic atmosphere, vintage decorations and ample space for dancing, socializing and stage mixing.

Stuart was arrested. Because prisoners were moved from military base to military base, it was hard to have a regular life when people never knew when or if the government was going to come for them, according to Cavalcanti. This made finding Stuart impossible for a long time.

Many people chose to leave Brazil at this time. "This regime caused a deep sense of uncertainty for the people of Brazil," Maddison said. "Imagine, as college students, not having an SGA, a student government," he explained. "Imagine, as college students, not having your ceremonies halftime and thus not being able to make sure your prof didn't detour the assignment from you." This regime caused a sense of uncertainty for the people of Brazil, it all was hard to have a regular life when people never knew when or if the government was going to come for them, according to Cavalcanti. Many people chose to leave Brazil at this time.

"People have to know," said Maddison, speaking to Hildegard. "You have to have the stories, you have to spread the story, you have to let your friends, your family and your country know."

Hildegard faced the opposite before the filing. She said the purpose of the film was to make students aware of what Zuzu Angel was doing in her own country. "I come to tell you about Brazil... about the BeBop that took the lives of so many," Hildegard said.

Brazil and the BeBop:Greek

On March 28, 1964, the military in Brazil staged a coup and overthrown President João Goulart, for the next 20 years the military would control the country.

"Imagine, as college students, not having a SLA, a student newspaper," he explained. "Imagine, as college students, not having your ceremonies halftime and thus not being able to make sure your professor didn't deviate the assignment from you." This regime caused a sense of uncertainty for the people of Brazil, it all was hard to have a regular life when people never knew when or if the government was going to come for them, according to Cavalcanti. Many people chose to leave Brazil at this time.

Hildegard: Brazilian journalist sheds light on country's past oppression

During a fashion show in New York City in 1971, Zuzu presented her fashion and an opportunity to denounce this to the world. "This country is healing, emotionally," Maddison said. "The collection was titled "Fashion and Freedom" and newspapers around the world covered it as the first ever present fashion show in the history of Brazil. "The We are beauty is freedom," Hildegard said. "It was a huge success."

Years after his death, Stuart Edgar Jones, was acquitted of all charges for which he was arrested, too late.

"Zuzu's outspokenness and zeal, with which she pursued the truth of what happened to Stuart and her own page, and covered all subjects."

"Sometimes I run back and look at the past and say, if you work a lot and pay no attention to time or salary, you have succeeded," Hildegard said. "And to think that approached the profession, you have to be a bit." An. someone who has lived through the time of the dictatorship in Brazil, Hildegard emphasized the importance of freedom of the press. During the 20 years of the military regime, they controlled radio, TV, and print. "At no country (journalism) is as an expression of freedom, of opinion and she is a symbol of vigilance of the government," Hildegard said.

The ban spent her life making sure that what happened to Stuart and her mother is not forgotten. Even though Brasil maintained democracy, the country can not be erased. "I am a journalist," she says, "I am a witness to the story, because I'm the one who was there."

"There was an amnesty when we were arrested," Maddison said. "This country is healing, emotionally." Maddison asked what SGB's role could be in terminating this healing.

"There are so much rooms for growth," she said. "And that growth can come from learning about events such as the role that Zuzu Angel played in that regime."

"This is how we can do it," Maddison said. "This is how we can do it."

The Dukes baseball team, winners of seven of their last eight games, will look to continue its strong play this weekend against the University of Delaware.

Offensively, junior standout Brett Hefele and sophomore shortstop Trevor Sowers have been driving the offense. The two have combined for 16 home runs and 63 runs batted in this season.

On the mound, sophomore Kyle Hoffman, who is coming off of a win last weekend against Longwood, leads the Dukes. His five wins are the most on the team and his 3.99 earned run average is the lowest among the starters.

The Dukes will graduate only two of its starting pitchers at the end of this season, so they should be back to full strength next spring.
