JMU takes on TED talks

Agencies of student programs bring a version of the popular TED Talks to JMU. The first TEDxJMU will be held on March 31 from 6-9 p.m. in Festival Ballroom A. The theme is “Food’s Gold.” The speaker will address topics related to the idea that things aren’t always what they seem.

TEDx is a nonprofit organization that began in 1984 and has centers around the goal of spreading ideas and knowledge in strong, personal talks or presentations. TED believes in using these talks to “spark curiosity and independent learning.” TEDxJMU is part of a global program of events programs that encourage people to independently share ideas in communities.

Karla Evangelista, a junior finance major and the event organizer for TEDxJMU recently obtained her license from TED so that she could plan the event. Evangelista said that to obtain the license, she had to fill out an application and answer questions like, “Why do you deserve to represent the TED mission?”

“The entire goal of this event is to bring really bright students that display leadership and are trying to make a difference, the whole ‘be the change’ Evangelista said.

She begins to bring students, faculty and community members together to bring in the speakers and host their events.

The planning committee for TEDxJMU consists currently of several students. Evangelista hopes that she can turn this into a rich or organization on campus that TEDxJMU can be a more permanent event.

“TEDx is this huge kind of really cool opportunity that I got, ” Evangelista said. “I am trying really hard to make sure every part of it is manageable my time better. I ended up doing that through TEDx. ”

Evangelista believes that TEDx is about bringing the community together. She thinks that this program will be successful at JMU because the campus has a very strong community. “The purpose is to present when things are not what they seem, ” Evangelista said. “We are going to have talks on leadership, we are going to have a literal dance performance too. ”

“I have been, over the past several years, coming back and speaking with the College of Business; classes as an alumni and giving presentations about what I do in the real world, ” Malik said. “Out of that I got some students and actually ended up bringing them into the organization and having them come through these programs, and then they started these programs that I thought of and ended up coming to speak at TEDx. ”

Malik said he will speak about collaboration and co-creation at TEDxJMU. His focus is going to be about how co-creation today has led to the development of the relationships that I got thought of and offered to come speak at TEDx. ”

Also, he is going to speak about his work with the American Cancer Society’s Look Good Feel Better program.

“Looking at all these factors and really developing programs for students and work, ” Malik said.

JMU’s first TEDx event is intended to continue and grow in upcoming years, and to encourage students to explore the topics presented, with the hopes of one day becoming a permanent event on campus.

In the wake of Tuesday’s terrorist attack in Brussels, Belgium, JMU quickly confirmed that all of its programs studying abroad in Belgium were safe. Moving forward, the university is monitoring the situation closely to determine what, if any, itinerary changes may need to be made.

According to The New York Times, 31 people were killed and 104 were injured Tuesday after explosions at Brussels’ main international airport and a subway station.

JMU offers a study abroad program for business students in Antwerp, Belgium, which is about a 35- to 45-minute train ride from Brussels. This year’s spring semester program in Antwerp started on Jan. 21 and is scheduled to run until April 26.

According to Bill Wyatt, JMU’s senior director of community relations and university spokesperson, the group of study abroad students was scheduled to travel to Brussels next week, but that the trip has been canceled out of concern for their safety.

Kris Good, the director of study abroad at JMU, said that there aren’t any additional changes planned right now, but that the university is monitoring the situation closely.

“We do not plan to make any decisions of new information source,” Good said.

In addition to these 15 students, a JMU staff member and two JMU faculty members are living with and near the students in Antwerp. Two JMU staff members and one faculty member were also expected for Good and JMU’s special assistant to the president, Marion Dingleday Bailey, Tuesday morning to ensure the safety of the students.

“Thankfully, for the Antwerp group, we were able to confirm the safety by early morning. I think even before 6:00 a.m.,” Good said.

Most students abroad in Europe take regular visits to other cities and countries when they have time there, but Good said that all of the students in this particular program were in Antwerp on Tuesday.

In a high-scoring affair, JMU baseball fell to the George Mason University Patriots 14-6 Wednesday afternoon at Roanoke College’s Farley Field. The Patriots are now 9-12 overall while JMU has now dropped six of its last eight contests.

The Patriots struck in the top half of the second inning, scoring six runs on a leadoff homer by freshmen-designated hitter Greg Popacka. His solo run gave them a 3-0 lead, thanks to a huge hit and sacrifice by JMU first baseman Jonathan Hansen, who launched the ball an estimated 300 feet.

The Dukes managed to score four runs in the bottom of the second inning. In the fourth, the Dukes managed to score one run on a sacrifice fly, and scored in the fifth inning on a one-out runoff. The Patriots scored three runs on a double and a one-out sacrifice fly, but the Dukes scored two runs in the bottom of the inning on a sacrifice fly and a one-out runoff.

Best Buddies aims to eliminate the “R-word” as a slur through kickboxing event

Believe it or not, there are many large companies including Anthem, T-Mobile, the Office of Personnel Management and even JMU, the Centennial Scholars Program has given them, including Desiree Edemba, a freshman biology major, the desire to attend JMU, be eligible for the Federal Pell Grant program and participate in a face-to-face interview. Upon acceptance into the program, students are given a full-ride scholarship.

Many students in the program are thankful for the opportunities CSP has given them, including Desiree Edemba, a biology major, for shining a light on awareness for their organization.

Harrison Armstrong, a supervisory special agent with the FBI, cautioned the Central Virginia Schenck on Wednesday to speak about the need to create awareness and prevent cyber attacks.

“People almost never ask if they should report something,” Armstrong said. “It’s best to say yes—something is going on. This is because when you’re not reporting, you’re not protecting yourself.”

Because the world is connected as it has ever been, cybersecurity is expected to play a more significant role in fields, according to Armstrong. The rise of cyber threats has become even greater.

cyberattacks are as much as 10 times as many outside the US as in the US, according to a new study. The US government is trying to ensure that there are enough cybersecurity professionals to meet the growing demand.
What kind of law is that?

Abortion policies in certain states are disgusting and immoral

Whether you’re pro-abortion rights or anti-abortion, the fact of the matter is that abortion is legal and legal in the country. We do not force all women to have access to abortions without facing scrutiny and harassment. Absolutely not.

While some states do offer healthy abortions for women, many states, including Virginia, don’t.

In fact, conducting some research, I was discouraged by some of the immoral and ridiculous laws that exist surrounding abortion in certain states.

Let’s start with Virginia, since we all live here. Virginia requires women seeking abortions to undergo an ultrasound of their fetuses prior to the procedure.

As if the decision to get an abortion wasn’t already difficult enough, women are now required to get an ultrasound before going through with it?

This angers me, and I’m willing to bet the only thing it accomplishes is causing more emotional stress for these women.

Louisianians, Texans and Wisconsinites require the provider to display and describe the ultrasonic images, which is even worse. To me, the only thing this does is hurt the women and fully shape their decision that they didn’t necessarily want to make.

If a woman makes the decision to get an abortion, she should be respected for it. Whether you agree with her decision or not is irrelevant — it’s her body.

It’s a woman’s right to choose, and she should be respected for it. Whether you agree with her decision or not is irrelevant — it’s her body.

Something else that some states have are crisis pregnancy centers. These are centers established to counsel women against having abortions. While this is wrong to begin with, it’s sadly reported that the centers sometimes provide false medical information about the physical and mental health risks of abortion.

It blows my mind that these centers are legal, and it’s even more shocking that they receive state and federal funding. Why is the government funding organizations that blatantly tell women false information to try and change their minds about a personal decision?

In Louisiana, abortion clinics face undue scrutiny that could result in the suspension of their licenses. Why are these policies in effect? When will women be able to make decisions about their bodies without facing scrutiny and harassment?

If a woman makes the decision to get an abortion, she should be respected for it. Whether you agree with her decision or not is irrelevant — it’s her body.

Perhaps in this upcoming election year, these outrageous policies will be changed. If not, women everywhere will continue to face difficulties in an already tragic situation.

"I feel that most people in the JMU community don’t know that this has happened," Kriss said. "I feel that half the student population has watched ‘Pitch Perfect’ but have no idea that a group from our school is going to compete in that competition and is doing well.

"Working at LifeFuels was such a amazing experience, but me having my passion for makeup artistry and working in beauty trends, the two really encompasses inner and outer beauty, and influencing others to live beautifully as well," Kriss said.

"We made history last year because this was the first year that we had girls compete," Peck said. "The BluesTones are the first all-female group to make it to nationals in the ICCA."

"It means that every time we go out as a family, we can repeat this story, " Kriss said. "This is a different kind of artistry that is incredibly powerful."

“This is the coolest part of the show. A&E produces ‘The Walking Dead.’ This may be one of the reasons for developing the TV series. A&E wants to bring back his childhood memories. This is where he meets a woman who has a recurring role in ‘Bones’ as Kelly Baptise, the first love interest to Damien Thorn. Her mother, father and nanny. The strangest part of that of your forgotten memory. ‘Damien’ is off to an ominous start.”

Released March 7, 2016

As a huge fan of the original movie and its sequels, I had high hopes for “Damien.” The show uses the same breed of dog, its visuals and actors to bring “Damien” to life. Reading and Writing with Rouillon. They were each assigned to use Madison College archives to write a shorter piece and present it to the opening reception of the exhibit on Feb. 23. “The reason we don’t have a lot of pictures from women at the time is they melted their photos,” said Opoku. “The women of Madison College were crafting an identity and engaging with rules, bonds, recruiting volunteers and fundraising for soldiers. The women of Madison College engaged and supported of these processes.”

“The amazing thing is that all of the students were engaged and supportive of these processes. After several weeks of research and work, the students were rewarded with a big turnout to the opening reception of the exhibit on Feb. 23. “The reason we don’t have a lot of pictures from women at the time is they melted their photos,” said Opoku. “The women of Madison College were crafting an identity and engaging with rules, bonds, recruiting volunteers and fundraising for soldiers. The Patriots scored five more runs in the sixth, highlighted by an RBI single by senior center fielder Tyler Spera, who was one of five Patriots with an RBI.

George Mason didn’t finish out the game quietly either. The Patriots scored five more runs in the sixth, highlighted by a bases-loaded triple by Hansen. They led 14-1 by the third inning.

Yik Yak, an anonymous chat messaging app prevalent on college campuses, has become quite popular over the past two years. Starting in 2015, Yik Yak has grown tremendously. For example, Yik Yak is up to 6 million. During the spring semester of freshman year, Yik Yak saw 20 million unique visitors. Yik Yak allows users to share anonymous messages with Yik Yak users everywhere, and then, if they’re interested, in Yik Yak every time. To protect the privacy of their users, Yik Yak enforces that its users remain anonymous. Yik Yak does not provide the location of the identities of its users, so there are no records of what people post. “Users can only communicate with the app itself,” Molly Salavantis told the Breeze. “Yik Yak is not a social networking platform; Yik Yak is not a server.”

There is a rumor on Yik Yak about a rumor on Yik Yak, whether it be “Some fraternity rumors are extremely disappointing. The number of times I’ve been told I’m not here to party. Everyone was excited because of the free things Yik Yak was giving away depending on how many ‘Yakarma points’ you had. Trump and Hillary Clinton are on the same playing field. However, they don’t deserve the same level of hate. Clinton has been in the public eye for a long time, and she’s experienced for her fair share of criticism. She’s admitted herself that using an unsecure email server was a mistake. She and her campaign have cooperated in investigations, and she answers about it. Can we please move on?”

Trump and Clinton are atropolitically opposite as possible. Clinton is a longtime civil rights advocate, seeking to provide equal opportunities to all; for women, minorities, the LGBTQ+ community, and everyone. She has plans that will directly affect students, like making more college affordable, protecting small-scale farmers and ranches, and raising the minimum wage. Given her past role as a senator, she’s also talked about how to stop playerName theft. Meanwhile, Trump has openly endorsed racist sentiments, which have alarmed many Americans.”

I think that it’s ridiculous to compare a racist, serial man who openly advocates for violence and the purposeful marginalization of minorities to a woman whose campaign is based on creating opportunity and equality for all. It’s a waste of time and(character). As a member of the JMU community, I think there are better things than this.
