The lobby of James Madison University's East Campus Library was bustling with excitement as a foreign dignitary spoke to the university community and students crossed into the lobby to gather. Various distinguished guests, including Ronen Sen, ambassador of India to the United States, came for the dedication of the statue of Mahatma Gandhi.

The statue is the first of Gandhi in Virginia. The ceremony was very traditional in nature and provided insight into the life and legacy of Gandhi. The statue was a gift from India to James Madison University in recognition of the Mahatma Gandhi Center.

Through education and research, the Center aims to make understanding Gandhi's mission a priority to the campus community and students.

Some students seem to believe that the statue will give people a new perspective on Gandhian achievements. They believe the statue will bring the message of nonviolence to the forefront.

There are 28 days until the future of our country will be decided by a new national leader for the next four years. For the next four years, I urge you to vote. I urge you to vote for a candidate whose campaign’s core issues have been thoroughly discussed on a national level. This is the most important election in our history, and if we don’t vote, then we could be condemning ourselves to a leader who’s capable of doing unimaginable wrongs.

The purpose of this piece isn’t to tell you how to vote. It’s to teach you how to vote. More crucial than the future of the country is how you choose. I’m not talking about who you’re voting for, I’m talking about who you’re voting against. For the past two weeks, I’ve been voting against Senator John McCain.

When I was registering voters last weekend, I asked one particular student who he was voting for and why. His answer was “McCain… because my dad told me that’s who I should vote for.”

It’s time we learn from our parents’ mistakes. We should not just vote with our parents, but for them. Parents have no business making our decisions until we’re at least 18. Otherwise, what’s the point of making sure you are financially independent until you’re 18? People need to take responsibility for themselves. Parents should not vote for you in this election, you should vote for your parents.

Even members of PETA, like Anna Davaasambuu, have talked about how ridiculous some of their ideas are, including, “The milk we drink is cow’s milk.” Well sure, of kids who learn at an early age that the main ingredient in ice cream is milk. It’s time to take responsibility. We’re all adults now, it’s time to vote responsibly. If you believe that the milk we drink is cow’s milk, please vote for someone else.

So to sum up: be informed, go to vote, and let’s hope you will finally get a date with the girl he has talked to before every class for the last six years. From the student who is writing your “quotables.”

Senior Prom for Young at Heart

350 people relive the past and create new memories at ‘50s prom

By BRETT WILSON

Senior citizens from 15 senior centers around Harrisonburg rocked around the clock in the Festival Ballroom Wednesday. They danced, ate and reminisced with childhood memories at ‘50s prom immensely and was already anticipating next year’s prom.

Meet the Faces Behind the Pink Ribbons

By RACHEL CHEMERYNSKI

The color pink is everywhere this month. But the pink obsession isn’t merely a fashion statement. Pink stands for love, peace and hope. It is a color that represents a cause: breast cancer.

On a crisp, sunny Saturday morning, large groups of mothers, daughters, JMU students and young boys and pink puffy poodle skirts could be spotted mingling and twirling on the dance floor with the seniors. Of the 350 people that attended the prom, there were two that stood out. Lisa Lucas, 87, and Anna Clark-Lucas, 71, gently kissed and held each other closely on the dance floor. The happy couple met last year at the Page County Senior Center in Luray and were married only six weeks ago. Mrs. Lucas explained that falling in love was something that took her by surprise.

“He said he wanted to be my sweetheart, and I told him I’d be his friend,” Clark-Lucas said. “We got engaged in June… and I said to Lion ‘When did you need thatodont count in on me?’”

Both of the Lucases were widowed, but claimed that their love for one another was one of the greatest things to happen to them in their lifetimes.

“Surely as I loved my first husband, this is something God put together. Especially my dad, he took a big role and was there for the seniors and also took a few spins on the dance floor. Parker enters attending events such as this because he likes interacting with people and showing kindness.

“It is nice to share and give them a few moments of happiness,” Parker said as he stepped up to hug an elderly son.

A prom long past and selections were by a random raffle. Sandra Eaton proudly donned her tiara as prom king Lawrence Jones donned her animal the dance floor. It was Jones with Johnson’s 80th birthday paper, a JMU nursing instructor, enjoyed using the excitement in the seniors as they were dancing and dancing.

“Many of these seniors never experienced their proms because they grew up during the Depression… it is a chance for them to relive this experience,” Krauss said.

Clark-Lucas said that she enjoyed this year’s prom immensely and was already anticipating next year’s prom.

“We always have a good time together,” Lucas said. “Every day is a special blessing.”

Dukes get first shutout since 2005 opener

By WES SHAW

The Dukes did it barely, but they did it.

The Dukes took a 7-0 lead with 13:12 remaining in the second quarter and never let Hofstra return the favor. The Pride was held scoreless in the second half after a touchdown reception at the start of the fourth quarter.

In the first half, Hofstra played about as well as it could have against JMU. The Pride gained 167 total yards on their 16 possessions in the first half and committed three turnovers.

In the second half, JMU's defense dominated Hofstra all game long, posting its first shutout against a Division I opponent since a 17-0 win over Villanova in 2004.

The gap in talent was greatest at the line, where JMU's front four was virtually unstoppable. The defensive line was able to get to Hofstra quarterback Cory Chris Dickson repeatedly at will, not only twice but pressuring him on nearly every passing play.

JMU coach Mickey Matthews has said he's upped the defensive line's workload and it shows. Dickson did, however, gain 44 yards and one touchdown on seven rushes.

"I think Drew played great," Landers said. "I don't know what we asked him to do. He made some great plays in the passing game and running game and he didn't put the ball in danger".
