THE DUEL AT SEA.

A THRILLING NARRATIVE.

It was a fearful night at sea, and the wild winds howled in fury, and the mad waves lashed themselves into a tumultuous choos, as if the tempest and the ocean were rivals, each striving to prove the greater power of destruction. Yet through the long anxious hours of the stormy night the brave schooner Idle Waif nobly breasted the fury of the gale, her officers hoping against hope almost, that she would be able to survive the terrible dangers through which she was struggling.

A month before she had sailed upon her voyage to New York from a South American port, and among her passengers was her owner, Robert Graham, of the wealthy firm of Graham & Co., accompanied by his wife and daughter, Corinne, a lovely maiden of eighteen, accomplished, pure in thought, and as innocent as a child.

Mr. and Mrs. Graham idolized their only child, and when the father found that he had to visit South America on business of the firm, Corinne at once hegged to accompany him, and yielding to her entreaty, a few days after found the mother and daughter comfortably "at home" in the commodious cabin of the Idle Waif, a large three-masted schooner, ably commanded and with an efficient crew.

The captain of the Idle Waif was a man of thirty-five, and of a stern nature. He had a man-of-warmanner with the crew, which he had acquired when an officer in the English navy, from which it had been said, he was dismissed in disgrace for allowing a slaver to escape, when it was certain, had he not been bribed, he could have captured the craft.

At any rate he was an able commander, and the five years he had been in the service of Graham & Co., Capt. most trustworthy in every respect.

The first mate of the Idle Waif was a young man of twenty-five, who had become an officer of the schooner while she was in South America, in the place of the mate who had resigned to accept the captaincy of a vessel offered

Gervaise Wilde had offered to take the place of the resigned officer, but he frankly told Mr. Graham he could offer no testimonials as to his character and ability; that he was an American -a Marylander-had been for seven years in the United States Navy, from which he had resigned in a foreign nort for reasons he did not care to men-

Mr. Graham gazed into the strangely handsome face of the man before him, beheld the dark, fearful eyes for a moment, and then glancing at the slight but elegant figure, replied :

"I will trust you, Mr. Wilde. aboard the schooner as soon as possi-

The Idle Waif sailed upon her homeward-bound voyage, and it was evident to all on board that no better seaman iban Gervaise Wilde ever trod a vessel's deck; and yet between him and the captain there was a certain restraint. From the first of the home trip Hart Woodruff had treated his first officer with an overbearing man ner noticeable to all, and which the mate received with cold and indifferent

Corrinne Graham narrowly watched the two officers, and her womanly eye soon read the secret cause of the captain's feeling towards his mate. It was jealousy; for Hart Woodruff had from the first loved the maiden, and seeing that she accepted the polite and gentlemanly attentions of Gervaise Wilde with a feeling of pleasure, he determined to rid himself of a man he believed his rival.

On sailed the noble vessel until when nearing the water of the gulf, a terrible storm burst upon her, and increasing towards night, threatened her with destruction.

Bravely did the crew stand at their posts, and twice during that long night did Gervaise Wilde ascend the rigging, when brave hearts hesitated, and securely farl some sail that the wind had torn from its fastenings.

Mr. Graham, with his wife and Corinne, had ascended to the deck, and were grouped anxiously watching the laughed Hart Woodruff, in a tone that black storm and raging ocean, while at the same time they could but admire the cool manner of springing at once to every post of danger, and the with Gervaise not to expose his life comparison drawn between the captain | thus, but he was determined, saying : and his mate redounded to the latter's

All that human skill and courage could do to save the schooner proved nseless, for she was dismasted, became a wreck, and leaking in many places, it | please. was found she could no longer hold out against the storm, which, though abating at daylight, was still raging.

"There is but one course, Mr. Gra- brightened as he said: ham. The boats, excepting one, are washed away, the shooner can remain only a few hours affoat, so I will at once set about building a raft which can hold all of us," said Gervaise turning to Mr. Graham.

We are all in your hands, sir; but what says the captain?"

"I say," and Hart Woodruff stepped forward, "the mate is mistaken; the schooner will float for many days .-And yet I would not expose Mrs. and leyes their captain and his mate as they Miss Graham to risk; so I propose that stood but twelve feet apart, calmly you, sir, with your wife and daughter, accompanied by myself and four of the crew, take the life-boat. In two days at the farthest, we can reach some of the Carribean Islands. While Mr. Wilde, with the remainder of the crew, can remain with the vessel, which, under jury masts, can be run into the nearest port.

"A good plan, perhaps, captain, but as I agree with Wilde regarding the to the raft.

A frown passed over the captain's brow which was not unnoticed, at Mr. Graham's words, but he added, "the schooner will not sink; her pumps will keep it up." Captain, I do not wish to shrink from any duty devolving on me, so I will abide by the decision of the men. Call them and ask them if this vessel can be kept above water for half a day," said Gervaise. "Here, my men," called out Mr. Graham, "come hither a moment; and give us your opinion. How long can we keep our heads above water by remaining on this vessel?" "A few hours, sir, perhaps half a day," rejoined the men, and, as if satisfied with their answer, Mr. Graham

"Mr. Wilde, commence the raft at once; and captain, please see that our baggage and all valuables are brought on deck, with sufficient provisions to last us two weeks."

Six hours after a large and stout raft had been built, which was capable of sustaining three times the number on the schooner, and upon it Gervaise had securely bound the caboose, to serve as apartments for the ladies, and otherwise protect the centre of the raft in such a way as to keep the baggage and provisions secure.

All in readiness, Mr. and Mrs. Graham, with Corinne, got on board, and were followed by the captain, mate and crew, and the bulwarks amidships having been cut away, they awnited the coming of a wave to wash them off the schooner, which was rapidly sinking to a watery grave.

Soon it came-a hage, foam-capped mountain of water, and the raft was lifted on its shoulders and borne off schooner was buried by the same large wave, never more to reappear.

Eight days the huge raft drifted about on the mighty deep, and no suc cor coming, the large part of the crew arose in mutiny, and, seeing the life boat which had been brought along, took the greater portion of the provisions and deserted their companions in distress; but their desertion was not a bloodless one; for three of their number fell dead beneath the unerring aim of Gervaise Wilde's pistol, for he stoutly resisted to the last.

Five more days passed, and then staryation stared the shipwrecked crew in the face, for the provisions and water left them by the deserters had all been consumed.

Then it was that the captain, Hart Woodraff, and the remaining four men of the crew became troublesome, and that Gervaise alone could be trusted, Mr. Graham, with his wife and daughter, placed their only hope in him; and his noble conduct won their admiration and Corinne's love. Another day passed, and night settled again upon the ocean, but a full moon rising made the sea silvery with

Suddenly Hart Woodruff started up from forward on the raft, and, accompanied by four seamen, came aft toward Gervaise Wilde, who, seeing their hostile advance, wheeled and said

"Back! back, I say! all of you, or I'll send a bullet into your midst." The men hesitated, and Hart Woodruff exclaimed :

"Gervaise Wilde, you are the one I You have stolen from me the love of that girl, and I intend to slay you, and your vile flesh shall be our food until succor shall reach us. We are starving, and yet I would enjoy along with your body a love feast, for Corinne Graham is mine, mine, mine." A thrill of horror ran through those who heard him, but the mate's firm eyes never quailed, and there was no tremor in his voice as he replied!

"Could the sacrifice of myself save Miss Graham and her parents, it would be given, but it cannot, and if you advance upon me, your life shall pay the forfeit. You and I, Captain Woodruff, I fear cannot live together upon this raft, so let there not be unnecessary bloodshed. You are armed; the moon is bright; so take your stand here. -Let Mr. Graham give the word, and let the best man win."

"Ha, ha, ha! gladly I accept," made his hearers feel that his reason had left him, and in vain did Mr. Graham, Mrs. Graham and Corinne plead

"It is the only course, sir. The men are wrought up by hunger to a pitch that makes them ready for bloodshed, and as the captain is armed we would have no rest for him; so give the word, "But you may be slain, Gervaise, and Corinne turned her loving gaze full upon the young man, whose face

Captain, are you ready? Mr. Graham, give the word, please

The raft rolled lazily upon the ocean. and the moon shone brightly down upon the strange scene, Mrs. Graham and Corinne crouching down in the window of the caboose by which Mr. Graham stood, while the four seamen, eagerly expectant, were grouped together forward, watching with staring awaiting the word to fire-words that must be the death knell of one of them, perhaps both.

"Are you both ready?" suddenly asked Mr. Graham.

"Yes," came the replies. "Fire!" and with the word the pistols flashed, and with a shriek hardly human, Hart Woodruff fell back into the ocean, which became his grave.

"Mr. Wilde, are you hurt?" exclaim inability of the schooner to keep afloat many hours, I think we had better trust "Not at all. Men, forward there and remember, if one of you comes aft

I will shoot him down like a dog." "Aye, aye, sir," answered the men, thoroughly cowed, and then one of them suddenly cried out:

"Sail ho!" With a glad cry, all on the raft greeted the appearance of a large steamer coming directly toward them, and upon which they soon were warmly welcomed by the captain and pas-

A week more and the shipwrecked party landed in New York, and then Gervaise Wilde became the guest of the Grahams-ave, more, he soon after led to the altar the lovely belle and heiress, Corinue Graham, for he proved to the old merchant that his reason for resigning from the navy was a disagreement with his commanding officer, for which his good sense afterwards showed him he was to blame.

Fascinations of Famous Feminines.

History is full of the accounts of the fascinations of women who were no longer young. Thus, Helen of Troy was over forty when she perpetrated the most famous elopement on record; and, as the siege of Troy lasted a decade, she could not have been very juvenile when the ill fortune of Paris restored her to her husband, who is reported to have received her with unquestioning love and gratitude. Pericles wedded the courtezan Aspasia when she was thirty-six; and yet she afterward-for thirty years or morewielded an undiminished reputation for beauty. Cleopatra was past thirty when Anthony fell under her spell, which never lessened until her death, nearly ten years after; and Livia was about thirty-three when she won the upon the ocean, while the ill-fated heart of Augustus, over whom she maintained her supremacy to the last. Turning to more modern history, the first lady and most beautiful woman at the court up to the period of the monarch's death, and of the accession to power of Catherine of Medicis. Anne of Austria was thirty-eight when she was described as "the handsomest Queen in Europe," and when Buckingham and Richelieu were her jealous

Ninon De L'Enclos, the celebrated wit and beauty of her day, was the idol of three generations of the golden youth of France; and she was seventytwo when the Abbe De Bernis fell in love with her. True it is, that, in the case of this lady, a rare combination of culture, talents, and personal attractions endowed their possessor seemingly with the gifts of eternal youth. Blanco Capello was thirty-eight when the Dake Francisco of Florence fell captive to her charms and made her his wife, though he was five years her junior. Louis XIV. wedded Madame de Maintenon when she was forty two years old. Catherine II. of Russia was thirty-three when she seized the empire of Russia and captivated the dashing young General Orloff. Up to the time of her death (at sixty-seven) she seemed to have retained the same bewitching powers, for the lamentations were beartfelt among all those who had ever known her personally .--Mademoiselle Mars, the celebrated French tragedienne, only attained the zenith of her beauty and power between forty and forty five. At that period the loveliness of her hands and arms especially were celebrated throughout Europe. The famous Madame Recamier was thirty-eight when Barras was ousted from power ; and she was, without dispute, declared to be the most beautiful woman in Europe-which rank she held for fifteen Although the list might be still further extended, our readersthose interested, especially-will see from it that a woman need not lose her attractions though youth be gore; and, above all, that, if her mind be cultured, her talents real and her heart kindly, she will retain a power of neverfading fascination.

Artemus Ward was one day lying on sofa enjoying a cigar in the little office of his publisher at New York, when he received a telegraphic dispatch from Mr. McGuire of the San Francisco Opera House, asking, "What will you take for 10 nights in California?" Without a moment's reflection or changing his position, he reblied, "Brandy and water. A. Ward." He soon filled a remarkably successful engagement, the dispatch-a $10 joke-being published in the San Francisco papers and proving a good advertisement.

Icebergs in the Antarctic Sea.

Those who visit the Antarctic seas

after having been in the Arctic are greatly disappointed in the form of the icebergs, for while those of the north assume every fantastic shape that the fancy can conceive, the southern ones are nearly table topped lumps of ice, precisely the same in form as when they parted from their parent glazier. These more resemble huge Twelfth cakes divested of their ornaments than anything else. - In the warmer northern seas icebergs melt more quickly, and assume far more picturesque appearances; but in the Southern Ocean the temperature of the water through which the icebergs drift is below the freezing point of fresh water and therefore insufficient in heat to melt the ice. It is only after they had moved a considerable way northward, that the regularity of their shape begins to be interfered with. As the berg travels from the pole it reaches a latitude where the summer sun has the power of heating the surface water slightly above the freezing point without affeeting that immediately below it. This has the effect of melting a notch in the side of the berg all around it, and just above the sea level, but this notch was not observed to extend into the ice in any case more than about thirty feet. As the warm water becomes still warmer as the berg floats further north, it has naturally greater powers, and deep caves or caverns are formed, which offer increased facilities for wave-washing the larger they become, until the mass being weakened, large pieces become detached. As this alters the centre of gravity the berg lurches over and either forms a slope or a long spur or tongue rises; and thus the work of destruction proceeds until the form of the berg is alformed the tongue may become the topmost pinnacle. Hence the great variety of form in the bergs seen by ships passing south on an arc of the great circle in comparatively low latitudes. The portions which break off | his own. from the bergs are termed calves, and they are often of far greater danger to shipping than the bergs themselves, for the latter have a reflected light that renders them visible at a little distance on the darkest night, whereas the calf, although it may be several hundred tons in weight, is not perceptible, or, if so, may readily be mistaken for the top of a sea breaking.

Dogs as Sheep Protectors.

I used to breed cattle, but having a natural fondness for sheep, and an opportunity to purchase a couple of Colly (Scotch) shepherd dogs, removing my fears on the score of destruction by mongrel curs, which deters so many where it is possible to verify dates from keeping sheep, I concluded to more accurately, we have the extraordi- try the experiment which has resulted nary Diana De Poiters, who was thirty-six when Henry II. (the Duke of Or-ewes, I have a half-dozen bells, and in leans, and just half her age) became case of danger, the sheep all run to the attached to her; and she was held as dogs for protection. This familiarity between the sheep and dogs, and the watchful care exercised, is one of the prettiest sights in the world. The faithful guardians of the flock are ever on the alert, day and night,. The rapid tinkling of the bell at once arouses the dogs; and about three weeks ago, in the middle of the night, I heard an unusual disturbance among the sheep, but was so confident that the dogs would be equal to the emergency, that I did not come down stairs. In the morning I had the satisfaction of seeing one of these worthless curs which go prowling about at night, lying stone dead along the fence, with marks on him of a desperate fight. I should say, however, that I made one cross by putting my shepherd dog to a Newfoundland slut, and kept the choicest of the litter. He has proved a fine, large dog, about twice the weight of either of the shepherds, and though never interfering in what he seems to think their special duty, is always on hand ready for service. It is curious to observe how, when strange dogs cross the place, the two dogs, shepherds, take a survey, and if they see much business (they are themselves great fighters), by a kind of silent understanding and arrangement, the three dogs go together, and, although we in this country are overrun with all kinds of dogs, there seems to be a general fear of my three dogs, and we are seldom disturbed. I recommend the purchase of one or two good shepherd dogs as the very

An Italian Legend.

Three robbers were walking by the roadside, one evening, after a day of

Character of Shakespeare.

In Hamlet we have the expression of high-wrought passion, dreamy mad-ness. So, toq, in Macbeth, Lear, Shy-lock and Othello there is madness; but each has his respective disorder, each his constitutional frenzy. Macbeth's rage is for the glory and power of a throne; Lear's proceeds of great personal afflictions; Shylock's proceeds of insatiable greed of gain; Othello's derangement is occasioned by jealousy, proceeding of wounded self-love and amativeness. In looking over the proceedings of the late National Temperance Convention at Chicago, we have been struck with the foolish, radical and fanatical ideas expressed by some of the members, male and female. One speaker advocated the union of religion and temperance, another advocated the election of none but strict temperance men to office, i e., prohibitionists. A resolution to prohibit the use of alcohol in sickness being under discussion, a member said it was nonsense, and it ought to be rejected. Doctors could not be dictated to. A California delegate declared, amidst much cheering and applause, that if the resolution was rejected "all the temperance people in the country would be sick.' There was much discussion in regard to sacramental wines, and it was agreed that the wines used in the administration of the Sacrament should be unfermerted. After a warm discussion over a resolution in regard to the "Sabbath," it was amended so as to read "American Sabbath," Christian" being rejected. One member did not believe in "the godless continental Sabbath," another had a holy horror of "the Ger-man Sabbath." There was a long and warm debate on politics as connected with temperance. A reporter states that an amusing feature of the temperance exercises was, that every five minutes the chairman interrupted some speaker to announce the mysterious disappearance of a new silk umbrella, the property of Mrs. Parker, of Dundee, Scotland; a fine stove-pipe hat, the property of a reverend gentleman from either England or Scotland; a small black valise, the prperty of a Southern delegate, &c. Such assemblages of fanatics and supporters of all the isms do more harm than good. The temperance cause would be better off without them. They drive off moderate prople, and really bring a kind of discredit upon good, judicious temperance movements, which is to be deplored. .

What Next?

Mme. Rachel of Paris, the equal and continuator of the famous Mme. Rachel, of London, renders ladies "beautiful forever" for the trifling sum of £1,000, with the trifling inconvenience of never being able to wash face, neck or hands, the "enameled" surface not being susceptible of any more energetic 'cleaning' than can be accomplished by the gentlest posible dusting with the softest brush of badger's hair. Euameled ladies, moreover, can only iddulge in smiles to a limited extent, for the enamel has a troublesome way of cracking that must be guarded against. The Parisian enameler, who claims to tography was made in Paris by Dabe a niece and adopted daughter of the great London homonym, drives every day in the Bois, at the fashionable hour, in an open carriage and pair of the utmost elegance, dressed in the extreme of fashion, and embellished with all the resources of her art, and keeps a standing advertisement in the principal newspapers, informing the pub lie that "the wonderfully beautiful stranger whose appearance created such an unprecedented excitement among the ladies of the fashionable world, as she drove in her elegant equipage round the drives of the Bois de Boulogne, was no other than the renowned Leontine Rachel, possessor of the secret of Ninon, who is to be consulted at such and such an address, and is ready to render the whole female sex as bewitchingly beautiful as she is herself."

A doctor attending a punster who was very ill, apologized for being late one day by saying that he had fallen down a well. "Did you kick the bucket?" gronned the punster.

Sleeping Flowers.

Many flowers close their petals during rain, which is obviously an advantage, since it prevents the honey and pollen from being spoiled or washed away. Everbody, however, has observed that even in fine weather certain flowers close at particular hours. This habit of going to sleep is surely very curious. Why should flowers do so? In animals we can understand it; they are tired, and require rest. But why should flowers sleep? Why should some flowers do so and not others?-Moreover, different flowers keep different hours. The Daisy opens at sunrise, and closes at sunset, whence its name, day's eye. The Dandelion (Leonated or Taraxacum) opens at 7 and closes at 5; Arenani indra is open from 9 to 3; Nymphea alba from about 7 to 4; the common mouse-ear Hawk-weed is said to wake at 8 and go to sleep at 2; the scarlet Pimpernel (Anagallis arvensis) to wake at 7 and to close soon after 2; while Trogopogon pratensis opens at 4 in the morning and closes just before 12, whence its English name, "John go to bed at noon."—
Farmers' boys in some parts are said to regulate their dinner by it. Other flowers, on the contrary, open in the evening. Now, it is obvious that flowers which are fertilized by night flying insects would derive no advantage from being open by day, and, on the other hand, that those which are fertilized by bees would gain nothing by being open at night; nay it would be a distinct disadvantage, because it would render them liable to be robbed of their honey and pollen by insects which are not capable of fertilizing them. I believe, then, that the closing of flowers has reference to the habits of insects, and it may be observed, also, in support of this, that wind-fertilized flowers never sleep, and that some of those flowers which attract insects by smell, emit their scent at particular hours; thus Hespien matronalis and Cychins vespertina smells in the evening, and Orchis bifolia is particularly sweet at night.-Sir John Lubbock.

Julius Cresar, when slain by the conspirators in the Capitol, concealed his face beneath the folds of his toga, so that his enemies might not see the death pang upon his counte-nance. Siward, Earl of Northumberland, when at the point of death, quitted his bed and put on his armor, saying, 'It becomes not a man to die like beast." Maria Louise, of Austria, a short time before she breathed her last, had fallen into an apparent slight slumber, and one of the ladies in attendance remarked that her Majesty seemed to be asleep. "No," reglied she, "I could sleep if I would indulge repose, but I am sensible of the near approach of death, and I would not allow myself to be surprised by him in my sleep; I wish to meet him wide awake." Lord Yelson, on receiving the fatal shot, said to Captain Hardy, "They have done for me at last, Hardy. my backbone is shot through;" and had the presence of mind, while carried below, to take out his handkerchief and cover his face and scars, to be concealed from the gaze of the crew. Strikes seem to be invading all departments of industry. The Pittsburg Commercial says that the clergymen of Towarda have struck-that is, they have combined to have but one service on Sunday for next six months, and sinners must get along the best way they can.

In another column we publish an article on the gold deposits of Virginia, contributed by M. H. Stowe, snperintendent of the Ellis mine in Culpeper county, to the Richmond Whig. Mr. Stowe says the gold fields extend the entire length of the State, having a breadth in some places of forty miles. The diameter of the ledges, he writes, is nearly parallel to the Blue Ridge, and distant from the mountain from forty to sixty miles. Mr. Stowe has had eight years experience in manipulating the gold ores of this State, and has formed the following conclusions: That where they are abundant they can be made profitable; that the modern methods of amalgamation for free gold, and chlorination for sulphates are the most effective and economical; that the Virginia gold ores yield just as readily to the process referred to as the ores west of the Rocky Mountains.

The jury in the Tilton-Beecher case having given definite assurance to Judge Neilson, in the Brooklyn City Court, Friday, that they were unable to agree, they were formally discharged. The disagreement was in reference to the weight of the testimeny and the credibility of some of the witnessers, upon which point the judge was unable to enlighten them. The jury stood least, the most remarkable scandal trial of the age, and it is to be hoped that the general public at least will never ngain be troubled with its details, whatever the courts may do with it in issues arising out of the Loader and Price alleged conspiracy are attracting some attention. Mr. Moulton, who, it is reported, is to be proceeded against by the Beecker party for conspiracy and subornation of perjury in this connection, publishes a card of defiance, and says an examination into his connection with that affair is the very thing he desires.

The legislative canvass has opened in some parts of the State. In Washington county five candidates are in the field, and in several other counties candidates are announced. The State debt question is the most prominent issue, and we doubt not it will enter is increasing yearly, and the people seem unwilling to submit to an increase of taxation. The funders-for such we term those who insist on paying every cent, principal and interest, of the debt-deprecate the discussion of the question at this time, and fear that by a division in the Conservative ranks on the question the Radicals might obtain control of the State. We believe it ought to be brought into the canvass. We should make disposition of the debt. Taxation should be increased sufficiently to meet our obligations, or the debt repudiated at a discount, or upon a lower rate of interest. We are going on from year to year doing nothing, and our creditors and continually howling at our doors It is this unsettled condition of affairs which keeps emigrants away, and the sooner we adjust it, or get it under control, the better it will be for Vir-

From the Richmond Whig. Gold Mining in Virginia.

BY M. H. STOWE, SUPERINTENDENT OF THE ELLIS GOLD MINE.

During the past eight years I have made several hundred assays of gold and other ores of this State, with the view of ascertaining their value, and the processes best adapted to working them successfully, and I propose to give to the public, through the columns of your valuable journal, in a series of papers, some of the results of my experience. I wish, also, to present some facts and suggestions in regard to mining matters, both interesting and important to mine owners and others who feel an interest in the development of the gold fields of the Atlantic slope. I have often been solicited to give more publicity to my experience in regard to the gold mines of Virginia, but antill recently I did not feel quite satisfied to do so, for I had not worked the ores on so large a scales as I had wished. Since the erection of the new ten-stamp mill at the Ellis Gold Mines in Culpeper county, and the testing of several hundred tons of ore, under my personal superintendence, I can speak more positively on the subject, as I am in possession of additional valuable

In the interval above alluded to ? visited many of the gold, copper, and other mines of Virginia, and became acquainted with their condition and the process formerly adopted for the treatment of the ores. I also spent one year in Colorado for the purpose of treating the refractory auriferous sulphurets of that Territory by the chlorination process, in which my operations were very successful on the large scale. the first lot of twenty tons giving 911 per cent. of the fine assay. While in Colorada, I made a large number of assays of gold, silver, copper and lead ores of that Territory, as well as from Montana, Utah, Nevada, California, Arizona and New Mexico, and I am thus enabled to compare, to some extent, the gold ores west of the Rocky Mountains with those east of the Appalachian chain.

THE VIRGINIA GOLD FIELDS. It ought to be generally known that Virginia has extensive and varied mineral resources. Her gold fields extend the entire length of the State, having a breadth in some places of forty miles. The general direction of the lodes is nearly or quite parallel to the Blue Ridge, and said to be northeast by southwest 25 degrees. The gold mines are thought by many to be in the mountains, but this is not the case .--With a few exceptions, the distance is from forty to sixty miles from the mountains to where any, mines have been worked.

The geological formation of the gold fields of this State, so far as ascertained consists of mica and talease slates, with contiguous formations of granite, syenite, and stealite Most of the auriferous lodes in Virginia contain sul phurets of iron and copper, with traces of galena and tellurium inclosed in quartz, the sulphurets of iron predominating largely over the others.

Not all sulphurets of iron and copper contain gold, but there can be no ques tion that we must depend upon these for most of the gold we obtain. These sulphurets are found more abundantly. nine for acquittal against three for below water level than above. In some con iction. Thus ends, for a time at gold-bearing veins, however, there are gether omitted, which gave it a bad scarcely any sulphurets at all, but it is presumed that they will be found at greater depths.

The usual methods of amalgamaticn do not extract all of the gold contained in these sulphurets, and some other the future. In the meantime the side process must be resorted to to obtain it. So far

THE CHLORINATION PROCESS has proven to be the best for a close and economical examination of the precious metal. I know by many tests what can be done, for I have treated from one onnce to four tons of sulphurets at a time, and I have found that they can be worked on a large scale as successfully as on a small one.

As a supplemental process to amalgamation, I believe it the best that is made public. I will not now describe the two processes in detail, but shall do so in a future paper, only adding that neither one of the processes can be made to do everything in assaying gold. Chlorination saves what escapes amalgamation. The latter process saves the coarses particles of gold, while the former saves the finer ores. In fact, the finer the particles of the the canvass in every county. The debt precions metal the better it is for chloronization.

My experience with the gold ores of the State has proved satisfactorily to my mind : 1st. That where they are abundant they can be made profitable. 2d. That the modern methods of amalgamation for free gold, and chlorination for sulphurets are the most effective and economical. 3rd. That the Virginia gold ores yield just as readily to the processes referred to as the ores found west of the Rocky Mountains .-

As a rule, the ores here are much less refractory than those of Colorado. These are my conclusions from the large number of tests I have made of Virginia and other ores, and the working test at the Ellis Gold Mine. I also conclude that if mining operations are conducted with the same skill here as in California, the profits from our mines would be as great, in proportion to the outlay.

DUEDER MINING NECESSARY. To get an abundance of ore we must recort to deeper mining than has been done hitherto. Not many of the mines of this State have gone deeper than 100 feet. At the Engle Mine, in Stafford county, they have gone 150 feet. From all I can leave this is the greatest depth ever attained in a Virginia gold mine. They generally stop sinking when water is struck, which is generally about 30 feet from the surface. Had work been stopped on the Comstock lode at a depth of T00 feet the "Big Bonzana" would never have been struck, and the richest mine in the world

The "Big Bonzana" was struck at asters, it is perhaps some consolation about 1,400 feet from the surface. In that the overflow of river banks, as il- some places it is 250 feet wide, and is histrated by the Nile and Mississippi, is very rich. The Consolidated Virginia | fifteen to twenty-five per cent. Altousually succeeded by seasons of extra- Mine embraces a part of the bonzanza, ordinary fertility. The Hale and Norcross Mine is 2, 100 feet deep, the Savage is 2,200, and the Imperial Empire is 2,000. There are other mines in the Comstock lode which range from 1,000 feet to 1,800. At these seemingly great depths the mines are paying better than ever, although attended with greater expense in hoisting, pumping and timbering. We can never know the immense wealth of our auriferous lodes, here unless wo go to a depth of 2,000 feet. We do not know how many

"BONZANZAS" MAY EXIST beneath our feet that may rival that of the Comstock lode. Much, however, may be learned at less depths, and propose to go down 500 feet at the Ellis Mine within a year. I would be too glad only to get orders from my company to go 1,000 feet.

What we greatly need just now in Virginia is a more general diffusion of proper information in regard to the nineral resources of the State. That 'knowledge is power," in mining maters just as much as in any other line of business, the history of the past compels us to admit. In my next paper, to be prepared soon, I will propose a method for a better acquirement and dissemination of a knowledge of our vast mineral treasures than has hitherto been done, and I believe it will be favorably received.

Semi-Centennial of the University of Vir-

The 29th of June was the anniversary of the University of Virginia. It was celebrated with appropriate exercises and services. Never before in the history of this institution has there been so much interest manifested and so many cf her distinguished sons gathered together. It was an occasion of pride in the grand success of the University, and of enthusiasm as to her future prospects. It is the demonstration by practical success of a trial of half a century of Mr. Jefferson's great aspiration to establish in Virginia a university "where should be taught in the highest degree every branch of knowledge, whether calculated to enrich, stimulate or adorn the understanding, or to be useful in its application to the arts and practical business and pursuits of life."

The Hon. R. M. T. Hunter, a distin gnished alumnus, in his address before the Alumni, traced this purpose of Mr. Jefferson as for back as when a commission was appointed by the General Assembly of Virginia, consisting of Pendleton, Whyte and Jefferson, to Virginia.

The influence of Mr. Jefferson upon the early history of the University was exerted in every way that could solve the difficult problems which beset the effort to transplant a perfect University into the unprepared soil of the States in 1825. His purpose was from the first that what was taught in any other school, should be taught, and equally well taught at his University. The classical studies were duly fostered, while philosophy, the sciences, law and medicine were equally encouraged.

Divinity alone Mr. Jefferson neglected, determining wisely that sectarian influence should have nothing whatever to do with education at the University of Virginia. In its early history religious services were altolains now hold regular services in the University Chapel. The fifty years of the University may be summed up as follows: 15,071 matriculations, of which 2,140 were grad uates, distributed as follows: 447 icine, 13 Civil Engineers, 13 Bachelors of Science, 5 Bachelors of Letters (a degree established since the war,) 168 Masters of Arts, 45 Bachelors of Arts, the latter a degree created in 1849.

Since the war there have been added to the faculty of the University a Chair of Mathematics applied to engineering, civil and mining; a Chair of Analytical and Industrial Chemistry; and a Chair of Natural History and Agriculture .-There is also a laboratory of practical chemistry, surpassed by none in the country; a Museum of Industrial Chemistry; the equipment of the Department of Engineering, with models; a Museum of Natural History; an Experimental Station for agricultural instruction and experiments; a class of Practical Physics in the School of Natural Philosophy; and a class in Sanscrit under the school of Latin.

Of the future of the University, Mr. Hunter spoke elequently and confidently, urging upon her sons everywhere not to forget their Alma Mater, and expressing the hope that the Legislature of Virginia would never refuse the oil necessary to keep the University lights burning, and declaring that to do so would be a wicked and shameful econ-

STATE TAXATION.—The Baltimore Sun furnishes the following, which is interesting: "A table recently prepared for 1873 and 1874 gives the tax able valuations and the rates of taxation in the several States, as varying from 10 cents on the $100 in Connectient to $2,15 on the $100 in Louisiana. The rate is 50c in Alabama, Arkansas, California, Maine, Minnesota, Texas and Virginia; 40 cents in Georgia. Kansas, Ohio and Tennesee; 70 cents in Florida, 10 cents in Connecticut, 24 in Illinois, 15 in Maryland, 22 in Michigan, $1,121 in Nevada, 721 in New York, 15 in Oregon, 20 in Rhode Island, and 70 in South Carolina.

According to the Tax Commissioners' report personal property in New York city has declined to the extent of $15,000,000 since T873, or at least, the assessments are that much less than they were. The assessed value of real estate is $883,000,000, against $881, 000:000 for 1874. This increase must be due to new buildings erected, for all Europe will probably share in the have been idle, doing no one any good. | the commissioners say that there are not, probably, more than five blocks in the city which have not declined in value during the last few months from gether the showing is by no means encouraging.

The whole amount of United States currency outstanding at date, of all denominations, is $418,456,756.69.

GRAND TEMPERANCE PIENIC AT FORT Defiance -On Saturday last, July 3, the various temperance organizations of Rockingham and adjoining counties, held a pienic at Fort Defiance, which proved to those who were so fortunate as to attend an exceedingly enjoyable ocession; and no doubt accomplished much good for the great Temperance cause. About six hundred assembled in the beautiful grove, selected by the efficient committe of arrangements, and doubtless the number would have been over a thousand but for the threatening aspect of the weather. The delegation from our town numbered nearly two hundred and fifty, and the trip by the excellent and well managed Valley Road was rendered more than pleasant by the cheering music of the Jonadab Band. The "Stonewall Band" of Staunton, which accompanied the delegation from that place we found awaiting our arrival and the excellent music furnished by them was one of the features of the day.

Excellent speeches by eminent Temperance advocates, Messrs. Diving Pierce, Points and others, Base Ball by the "Lone Star" and "Independent" while eatables ad libitum et infinitum constituted the enjoyments of the day.

We would especially tender our thanks to Capt. Sprinkle and Sup't Averill for their courtesy and kindness and to Messrs. Price and Points and their estimable ladies for the substan-Yial and generous hospitality tendered to a hungry editor whose appreciation of which they had ocular demonstra-

Several gentlemen of our town a few days since visited the farm of Hon. John F. Lewis, on the Shenandonh river, to see his colts in training for the Saratoga and other races. We are informed that the performances of his three-year old colt, Danville, by King Lear, out of Mary Minor, by Planet, were satisfactory to his trainers; and that the grey "Engineer" horse, the property of Stearns & Hoxsey, is also in fine form, and is likely to win some stakes or make somebody else's borse run. The Senator, we learn, will leave for Saratoga with his horses about the 14.h ipst.

THE OLD TENTH BAND. -As there is and Staunton clabs resulted in a victory for to be a re-union of the Tenth Virginia Regiment at Yellow Massanutten Springs on the 4th proximo, why not have a re-union of its band, also. It was considered one of the best of the army of Northern Virginia, and by its inspiriting strains nerved the old Tenth to heroic deeds on many a field. Quite a number of the members reside in Harrisonburg, and if a call were issued hearly all would attend the re-union. Let the members here take steps to have a meeting of the members of this once famous band, and let us hear again some of the old tunes.

----LOWENBACH'S ADDITION.—The western part of Harrisenburg is known as Lowenbach's Addition. It is building up rapidly, and but five or six building lots remain unsold. Several new houses have been erected there this spring and summer, and our reporter for that quarter informs us that others are in contemplation. It is said to be the coolest part of town, and even during this sweltering term, we are informed, that to go there is like going into a refrigerator.

beautiful, and trust his successor will take warning lest the same sad fate be his. Dearest "Local" thou hast left us-"Pulled out" and gone where we can't follar: No more we'll hear thy sweet voice singing,

"Will you lend us half a dollar." Such might have been the touching obituary seen in the COMMONWEALTH this week if the corpse hadn't pulled out early Saturday morning for the Jonadab pic-nic at Fort Defiance. As it was, when the time came, he wasn't thar.

Circuit will hold a camp-meeting next But why shoot a poor Bridgewater 'Local' when there is erough material lying around the main office to keep Joe. Kelley busy for two months, and then some more. For instance, that whoopen de-dooden Red man up stairs-that Comanche that shouts like a locomotive whistle when its "down brakes." He ought to be shot. And then there's that famous mathematical orator, that lecturer on "Economy, or how to save eight dollars in a thousand years," who is forever praising (?) the Yankees and scattering the exchanges all over the sanctum-why don't you shoot him? Or that portly friend of yours who confidentially asks, "Who wrote that 'leader' last week?" not giving you credit for the reasonable amount of brains you do possess. Why not have him executed? Or, there is the "Devil," why not him? or Josh? Or, if you can't get anything better, shoot yourself, and thereby morit the eternal gratitude of an afflicted community. "Our talented and eloquent" friend and ourselves, with such other help as will be cheerfully tendered, will, out of the scanty material, endeavor to give you an obituary to 'do you proud," something like this:

Farewell! thou we'rt too pure to stay In this base word, replete with evil, And therefore you 'pulled out' one day To pay a visit to your friend, the d-.

Oh! we'll, do it up in good style, only give us the opportunity, but don't come around Bridgewater with your little gun. We acknowledge our sins of omission, but would refer you to the old adage, "you can't draw blood from a turnip," neither can you draw news from a newsless source. Our town is completely tranquil, every body is busy trying to keep cool, and there is nothing, abso lutely nothing, to write about. Harvest is about over and those who have good crops are consequently jubilant. Our excellent P. ficials for three hundred convicts to work on M, and assistants are as obliging and courteous as ever. The genial proprietor of our hotel is always on hand with his kindly greeting, and from the healthy appearance of his many guests, we should suppose that his manner of conducting a hotel is entirely satisfactory. At the drug store of our friends Brown & Maphis, the most delicious soda water can be obtained, and the courteous proprietors are ever ready to wait on those who may favor them with a call. Notwithstanding the oppressive heat Sanger & Co., The tri-weekly mail, on the route via. are kept busy, their stock of Hardware and McGaheysville to Shenandoah Iron Works, drugs is large and well assorted, and the boys mean business. Mac. has gone'to Rockmail. There should be daily service on the bridge for a few weeks. He has worked hard and intends to devote his vacation to solid enjoyment; he is a devoted ladies man, and his handsome face and winning manners cannot but impress the fair sex with the idea that if he is a sample of the beaux of our town, Bridgewater must be a Paradise. The Hon. E. J. Armstrong is looking remarkably well, and we hope health and strength will be spared him, that his voice may be again heard in the place which he has filled with so much honor to himself and satisfaction to his constituents. The rival butchers have consolidated, and Messrs. Marshall and Earman, (not Pres.) are now prepared to furnish our citizens with fresh meat three times a week. Work at the Dora still goes on, and next week a large force of hands will go to work on the W. C. & St. L., R. R., at Mont-

A correspondent, whose letter will be found in another column, makes some complaints as to the present running of the stages, and suggests a change that would be more accommodating to those supplied by that route.

----CHANGE IN THE INTERNAL REVENCE Force. - Owing to a requirement of a reduction in the expenses of this, the 6th Internal Revenue District, Mr. W. H. H. Frenger, Deputy Collector at Staunton, has been removed, and his place filled by Mr. R. E. Freeman, from the chief office here. Mr. Freeman will also be required to perform clerical duty occasional, and will still make Harrisonburg his home.

---Nor Executed .- Our Bridgewater editor was not executed on Saturday, as had been decreed. He ran away from Bridgewater on Friday night, and took up at the Temperance picnic at Fort Defiance on Saturday. He made ample excuses for his neglect of duty, and it was determined by the Staff to try him a little longer. The obituaries are reserved for the present.

A fine growing season, with luxuriant vegetation as a natural result. A truce has been proclaimed between the contending forces in the potato-New and bandsome signs ornament the fronts of the business houses of James W. Burgess and Henry C. Berry. John Y. Long & Co. are operating a steam stave and heading machine, in a finely timbered region four miles southwest of us. We have two octogenarians deserving notice. Mr. Blackaby, who is 81 years old, and has filled the place of a full hand during the past harvest season; and P. A. Clarke, sen., who is in in his 85th year, and in addition to regular daily work in his shop, has the largest and best garden in town, cultivated exclusively with his own hands. Think of this, ye lazy loungers in shops and stores and on street corners!

We desire to call the attention of of our citizens to the importance of inaugurating some movement to secure a suitable building for school purposes. This is a want seriously felt here, as we have been, for years, obliged to use rooms that are low, damp and ill-ventilated-endangering the health of scholars and teachers. There is no more healthful or desirable location in the valley, with a sufficient number of pupils, for a good graded school; and we sincerely hope that our people, following the example so creditably presented by our Bridgewater neighbors, will set a movement on foot that will result in securing to our town and vicinity the same educational advantages. P. I. Kiser, Esq., of our town has returned from an extended tour through the Western States, and gives an unfavorable report of crop prospects, &c. . He confirms the statements heretofore made, as to the ravages of grasshoppers and other plagues, and says there is a general stagnation in business throughout the different sections visited. We ought not to take trouble by the forelock, but we may reasonably be apprehensive of a visitation from these pests at no distant day. Did we not regard the coming of the potatobug as remote and improbable some vears since?

If our manuscript this week bears a striking resemblance to the signature of the immortal Step. Hopkins to the Declaration of Independence, you may know that we have performed our allotted task with fear and trembling, lest some unlucky slip, or unforseen accident, should involve us in a fate as sad and terrible as that which has befallen our brother of the Bridgewater quill, on the classic banks of North river. Urhappy Paul!--

Editor Commonwealth: You made several mistakes in your last issue in regard to the prizes awarded to the students of St. John's Academy. No gold medal was awarded to any of the students of Harrisonburg. Eshman received a silver medal for observance of House Rules, and a .pre mium for diligence in studies. Loch received a premium and the third honor of his class for diligence in his studies. McQuade a silver medal for studies, and Bowman the same. Woodson, the prize, as you stated.

You will please make this correction in your next issue, as it does injustice to one of the scholars. FACT.

CONRAD'S STORE, VA., July 3rd, 1875. Mr. EDITOR -We are just closing our harvest in this section. The wheat crop will not be more than an average one, consequent upon the hard winter. The corn crop is backward, but thrifty, and grass and oat crops almost a total failure.

Our new mail line went into operation on the 1st inst. I. is running on a schedule of time very inconvenient and unaccommodating. It leaves Shen. Iron Works at 2 A. M. daily, and reaches Harrisonburg at 8 A. M. and leaves Harrisonburg at 9 A. M., only remaining one hour, and arrives at Shen. Iron Works at 3 P. M. with only one change of horses, (at McGaheysville.) This can be remedied, thus :-Let it leave Shen, Iron Works at 4 A M. and arrive at Harrisonburg at 10 A. M., and remain in Harrisonburg until after both trains arrive, and leave at 3 P. M., and arrive at Shen. Iron Works at 9 P. M. By this arrangement we could get our Baltimore and Washington papers the day of their publication. Besides if a man from this section has business in Harrisonburg he can get there by 10 A. M, remain five hours and return the same day. And if any passenger for this section come on either train, he can come down the same evening, instead of staying in town all night and coming down in the heat of next day. Can't you help us to get the schedule changed? which every body will be accomodated even the contractor, for he now runs one team of horses from Shen. Iron Works to McGaheysville, 13 miles, and another team from that place to Harrisonburg, where they rest only one cour and return to McGahevsville .-And the same team returns from that place to Shen. Iron Works that went up in the morning. By the proposed change his horses will rest 5 hours in Harrisonburg.

Not only did Elias Howe invent the First Sewing Machine, but for twentyseven years of his life labored to render it more simple and effective, until it would seem that no candid observer, examining the simplicity of its construction, and perfectness of its work in all kinds of sewing, but must at once see and admit its general superiority to all others.

Not only is this true of its vital principles and its ingenious devices, but is also true in regard to the perfection of its manufacture. This has been attested by the highest authority-the Mackine receiving the First Prize at the Paris Exposition in 1867, and Elias Howe, Jr., the Cross of the Legion of Honor,

The work originally published under the title of The New American Cyclopedia was completed in 1803, since which time the vide circulation which it has attained in all parts of the United States, and the signal developments which have taken place in every branch of science, literature, and art, have induced the editors and publishers to submit it to an exact and thorough revision, and to issue a new edition entitled The American Cyclopedia

Within the last ten years the progress of discovery in every department of knowledge has made a net work of reference an imperative want.

The movement of political affairs has kept pace with the discoveries of ecience, and their fruitful application to the industrial and useful arts and the convenience and reinement of social life. Great wars, and consequent revolitions have occurred, involving national changes of peculiar moment. The civil war of our own country, which was at its height when the last volume of the old work appeared, has happily been ended, and a new course of commercial and industrial activity has been commenced.

Large accessions to our recognaphical knowledge have been made by the indefatigable explorers of Africa.

The great political revolutions of the last decade, with the natural result of the lapse of time, have brought into public view a multitude of new men, whose names are in every one's mouth, and of whose lives every one is curious to know the particulars. Great battles have been fought and important sieges maintained, of which the details are as yet preserved only in the newspaners or in the transient publications of the day, but which ought now to take their place in permanent and authentic history.

In preparing the present edition for the press, it has accordingly been the aim of the editors to bring down the information to the latest possiole dates, and to furnish an accurate account of the most recen Palace of Photography, Pictures in all styles, from the oldes to

First Mortgage Premium Bond New York Industrial Exhibition Company

THESE BONDS are issued for the purpose of rais ing funds for the erection of a building in the city of New York, to be used for A PERPETUAL WORLD'S FAIR! a permanent home, where every manufacturer can exhibit and sell his goods, and every patentee can show his invention; a centre of industry which will prove a vast benefit to the whole country. For this purpose, the Legislature of the State of New York has granted a charter to a number of our most wealthy and respectable merchants, and these gentlemen have purchased no less than eight blocks of the most valuable land in the City of New York. The building to be crected will be seven stories high (150 feet in height), surmounted by a magnificent dome, and will cover a space of 22 acres. It will be constructed of Iron. Brick and Glass, and made fireproof. The bonds, which are all for $20 each, are secured by a first mortgage on the land and building and for the purpose of making them popular, the directors have decided to have quarterly drawings of $150,000 each; this money being the interest on the amount of the whole lean.

Every bondholder must receive at least $21,00, but he may receive $100,000! Or $35,000, or $10,000, or $5,00., or $3,00, &c., &c.

Capital Premium, $100,000. These Drawings take place every THREE MONTHS, and eventually EVERY BOND will participate in them. Address for Bonds and full information,
