Love notes
Marching band members get engaged after big game

By PETER CAGNO
The Breeze

While serving a year-long U.S. Army reserve deployment in Kuwait with fellow university marching band member Brandon Rhodes, the Marching Royal Dukes had a lot of time to think about their lives, a factor in which they were to become the husband of Lieutenant Sophia Lederman.

Brandon and Sophia first met while with their band trip to California in the summer of their junior year. Sophia was the percussion section leader, and Brandon was the trumpet section leader. Sophia's dad was a music professor at the University of Southern California, and she was a music student, which is how they met.

Brandon and Sophia started dating during their junior year, and they were together for five years. During that time, Brandon began to think about his future, and he decided to apply to Harvard Business School. Sophia was also considering her future, and she applied to graduate school at Stanford University.

Brandon and Sophia were both accepted to Harvard Business School, and they were both accepted to Stanford University. They decided to go to Harvard Business School together.

Brandon and Sophia had a lot of time to think about their future during their deployment. They were away from family and friends, and they had a lot of time to think about their relationship.

Brandon and Sophia both love to play music, and they both love to travel. They decided to go to Harvard Business School together because they wanted to be able to continue playing music and traveling together.

When Brandon and Sophia returned from their deployment, they were both excited to start their new life together in Boston. They had a lot of fun during their deployment, but they were ready to be with each other again.

Brandon and Sophia are both very happy with their decision to go to Harvard Business School together. They are looking forward to the future, and they are excited to see what they will do together.

Love, Brandon and Sophia

In the U.S., the number of people who died as a result of a heroin overdose rose to 40,000 in 2016, making it the highest number of recorded deaths in the U.S., according to the American Association of Pharmaceutical Manufacturers. This is just one of the reasons that this number has died as a result of opioid prescription pain relievers as recently as 2016. The U.S. consumed almost 80 percent of the world’s opioid supply, directly or indirectly, according to DEA. This epidemic could have been avoided altogether or at least limited many years ago, but society has taken a death toll of about 800,000 people, many of whom were white, just because of the influence of pharmaceutical companies’ policy makers and health professionals.

To understand this epidemic, one must first understand the history and emergence of opioid pain relief in America, and the key players who perpetuated this use, because the government isn’t solely to blame. For decades by leading up to this use, the largest producers of opioid prescription pain relievers published information leading to the epidemic about the risks and the benefits of their drugs. Pharma actuaries are trained to produce misleading outcomes, which then are eventually used to help sell products and increase profits. They are trained to help sell products and increase profits.

In the early 1970s, pill mills were offices where the doctors see an unusually high number of patients, write excessive prescriptions, require minimal medical examinations and usually accept only cash payments. Prescription pain medications sales quadrupled from 1985 to 2014, according to ASA. During the same time frame, the overdose death rate also quadrupled, an unprecedented and powerful sign of the dangers of the opioid epidemic.

To intervene, then they’re accepting, and in turn, perpetuating racism. If you’re a bystander, you’re a racist.

Now, a lot of white people will be upset with this assertion. Many will say that this is not true, that they not racist. If a non-racist sees racist behavior taking place and doesn’t intervene, they’re accepting, and in turn, perpetuating racism. If you’re a bystander, you’re a racist.

FIELD HOCKEY

By HARRY HOLTZCLAW

The Virginia Commonwealth University field hockey team is in the thick of things this season, and the Rams have one of the nation's top performers in senior midfielder Brittany Bunner. Bunner was recently named Colonial Athletic Association Player of the Week after her impressive play during the past two games. She scored her first goal of the season in the Rams' 3-0 win over Towson, and followed that up with another goal in Virginia Commonwealth's 3-2 victory over Northeastern. Bunner's performances have helped Virginia Commonwealth maintain its 5-0 start to the season, and she's been a key component to the team's success. Despite her success, Bunner remains focused on her team and its goals. "I want to go out there and contribute to the team," she said. "I want to help the team win games and get the victory."

BUNNER'S GREAT AT BEING A LEADER

Bunner's leadership qualities extend beyond the field, as she is known for her positivity and work ethic. "Brittany is a great teammate," said Virginia Commonwealth head coach Robyn Herdman. "She always represents the team in a positive way and sets a good example for the younger players." Bunner's leadership is evident in her on-field play as well, as she is known for her determination and intensity. "Brittany has a lot of drive," Herdman added. "She never gives up, even when the going gets tough."

BUNNER'S GOAL DROUGHT

Despite her success, Bunner had been struggling to find the back of the net during the early part of the season. Her goal drought lasted through the team's first seven games, during which she had only two assists. However, she knew that her time would come. "I knew that my goal drought would end," Bunner said. "I just had to keep working hard and continue to play with confidence."

BUNNER'S RETURN

Bunner's return to form came in the team's 3-0 victory over Towson, where she scored her first goal of the season. Her momentum carried over into the next game, where she scored again in Virginia Commonwealth's 3-2 win over Northeastern. "That was a great feeling," Bunner said of her goal against Towson. "It's been a long time coming, and I'm just glad I finally got it." Bunner's confidence is evident in her play, as she continues to be a key player for Virginia Commonwealth. "Brittany is one of our top players," Herdman said. "She always brings a lot to the table, and she's a great addition to our team."

BUNNER'S NEXT GOAL

Bunner's next goal could be just around the corner, as she continues to play with confidence and determination. Her coach believes that Bunner has the ability to score more goals this season. "I think Brittany has the ability to score more goals," Herdman said. "She's a dangerous player, and she has the talent to put the ball in the net."

The Minnesota Vikings won the NFC North division title last season, making the team one of the most successful in the NFL. However, this season has brought its share of challenges, as the team has struggled to find consistency on both sides of the ball.

OFFENSE STUCK IN THE MIDDLE

The Vikings' offense has been lackluster, as the team has struggled to score points consistently. Quarterback Sam Bradford has done his part, as he's thrown for 1,620 yards and 10 touchdowns, but the Vikings' running game has been inconsistent, with Adrian Peterson averaging just 3.8 yards per carry. The team's offense is averaging only 17.3 points per game, which is near the bottom of the league.

DEFENSE SUPERSIZED

On the other hand, the Vikings' defense has been dominant, as the team has allowed just 19.2 points per game, which is the second-best mark in the league. The team's defense has been particularly strong against the pass, as the team has allowed just 200.4 yards per game, which is the lowest mark in the league. The Vikings' defense has also been stout against the run, as they've allowed just 96.1 yards per game, which is the third-best mark in the league.

Stop the Wildcat run

The Dukes have been somewhat successful this year at stopping the running game. They currently rank fifth in the FCS in stopping the run, allowing only 128.5 yards per game. The JMU offense has been tremendous this season. It wouldn't be where it is today, however, if it weren't for their nationally recognized rushing attack. The Dukes are currently the second best rushing offense in the entire FCS, ranking 10th in rushing yards per game with 270.7 yards per game. Such a powerful rushing attack would be difficult for any team to contain, but Stone Charleston may just be the team to do it.

The JMU defense will have to contain the Wildcat offense. They currently rank 24th in FCS in stopping the run, allowing only 128.5 yards per game. The Wildcats won't make it easy for the Dukes to run the ball up and down the field this week. Holding their ground up front will be the biggest challenge the Dukes have encountered so far this season.

All the tricks and traps in the world won't help the Wildcats win this game. They will have to focus on stopping the run and not making costly mistakes from doing what we want to do. Neither team is a strong team in the conference. For those looking to catch the game on TV, it can be found on the American Sports Network.
