Four Dukes march in the 56th inaugural parade

By ANNA YOUNG

President Barack Obama and First Lady Michelle Obama stroll down Pennsylvania Avenue in the Inaugural Parade. The 44th president and wife would be on their feet plenty more, attending 10 Inaugural balls in the evening.

The senior music education major said she was fortunate enough to perform in the 56th Presidential Inaugural Parade.

"To say that I was part of the first African American president’s parade in Washington, D.C. is something,” said Wilson, a 21-year-old student from Stafford, Va. "It’s not just any president’s thing… It’s something, " the Stafford native said. “I won’t forget every second of it… It’s not just any president’s parade but someone I actually voted for and I got to be in his parade.”

This weekend Wilson, who plays the euphonium, and three other Marching Royal Dukes went to Washington, D.C. to perform in the parade. Wilson said she had an “unbelievable” experience.

Wilson was one of the supporters.

Barack Obama was not the only man celebrating the inauguration, as approximately two million people were in attendance. Supporters came across the nation donning various stickers, hats, buttons and other Obama memorabilia.

Co-owners of The Pub. Owners: Isaac Coe

The former employee, Bethany Jones, to the recent hit and run accident involving one of its former employees, Bethany Jones.

John Royer, co-owner of The Pub. Owners: Brenda and Nick Neofotis

On Jan. 6, JMU staff member Sherry Anderson was struck and killed by Jones at 5:30 a.m. while Anderson was jogging. Jones left the scene and was not arrested until later that evening. Jones then admitted to prosecutors that she was drinking at the time.

She was found guilty of public intoxication and was able to come up with a plea agreement that basically voided a civil lawsuit against her, Coe said, “but unfortunately it cost him the business.”

He went on to say that Coe was sentenced to 70 days in jail, but didn’t spend time in jail and his legal charges were reduced.

According to Troutman, the “real tragedy” is how the building once occupied by Rocktown, or more affectionally, “The Pub,” will continue to be a place to hang out in.

"I certainly don’t think we’re at fault, " Royer said.

"It is being investigated by Virginia Alcohol Beverage Control, but may take a while since it’s a criminal investigation as well, " according to Bill Royer, co-owner of the Pub ABC, "but they could face a violation and a fine."

"I certainly don’t think they should be there, " Royer said, adding that Jessen is a manager who had a key and came back to the Pub after hours but even turns to drink, when she wasn’t supposed to be there. He told The Pub will continue to be a popular place to go regardless of the investigation and he has no intention of shutting down.

There is no validity behind that whatsoever, " he said, "we’re here and we’re going to stay here." Royer said.

The senior music education major was one of the numerous fortunates to perform in the 56th Presidential Inaugural Parade.

"To say that I was part of the first African American president’s parade in Washington, D.C. is something," said Wilson, a 21-year-old student from Stafford, Va. "It’s not just any president’s thing… It’s something, " the Stafford native said. “I won’t forget every second of it… It’s not just any president’s parade but someone I actually voted for and I got to be in his parade.”

This weekend Wilson, who plays the euphonium, and three other Marching Royal Dukes went to Washington, D.C. to perform in the parade.

Wilson and the other JMU students, Andrew LaPrade, Hunter Delp, and Michael Huffman, are involved in the Cadets Drum and Bugle Core, an award-winning international group composed of 155 brass players, percussionists, and color guard from around the world, all under the age of 22. The Cadets usually perform throughout the summer, yet were invited to participate in the 56th Presidential Inaugural Parade. The Cadets arrived in Woodbridge on Friday evening and rehearsed through Monday afternoon.

“We don’t track. I’ve done cross country in high school, none of those compare to drum corps and how demanding it is,” Wilson said.

Each day started with an hour-long breakfast and an hour-long workout. Then the Corps would divide into brass and drums and practice for eight hours, stopping..."

dependent Fatah party. Although the Palestin-ian Authority governs in the West Bank, it was considered a terrorist organization by Israel, the European Union and the United States.

Further Investigations of Detainees Immobilized

GABRIELLE BAY, Cuba — In one of its first actions, the Obama administration instructed military prosecutors late Tuesday to drop a 250-day-old legal proceeding involving detainees at the Guantanamo prison, a move that could lead to the release of the vast majority of the 242 men remaining in the facility. The Pentagon announced that an important part of its audience was affected by the problem’s resolution.

At the same time, many of the messages were designed with letters of caution needed to

Facebook Could Hinder Jobseekers

Privacy settings do not guarantee information is not visible to others

By LAURA HEDGES

There have always been concerns about online privacy and students using Facebook to share private information. With an increasing number of students using social networking sites, concerns about the impact of these sites on students' privacy and job prospects have become more pressing.

Privacy settings that limit access to the profile picture, contact information, and friend contacts pose a potential threat. Some students may not understand the implications of these settings, and this can lead to the sharing of sensitive information.

According to Facebook's official privacy policy, the company only shares user information with third parties if the user has explicitly granted permission. However, some users may not be aware of the extent to which their information is shared or how third parties might use it.

The impact of Facebook on job prospects is a concern for many students. The information shared on Facebook can affect employers' perceptions of applicants, and this can lead to missed opportunities.

Facebook's privacy settings can have a significant impact on job seekers. It is crucial for students to understand the implications of their privacy settings and make informed decisions about what information they share online.

Facebook is a powerful tool for networking and professional development. However, students must be aware of the potential consequences of sharing private information online. By making informed decisions about privacy settings, students can protect their online reputation and increase their chances of finding a job.

"You don't want to post anything that would make you look like a bad candidate," Sloot said. "Employers are looking for reasons why they shouldn't hire you."

Sloot went on to explain Facebook's new privacy setting in which users can limit access to their profile picture. The new setting allows users to control who can see their profile picture, and this can help protect their online reputation.

Facebook's new privacy setting is a step in the right direction, but it is crucial for students to understand the implications of these settings and make informed decisions about what information they share online.

Dukes' Goalie Competes with U.S. National Team in Australia

Meredith Alexis graduated from JMU in 2007 as the owner of virtually every major record in Madison women's basketball history. The Duke all-tube leader in scoring and the Colonial Athletic Association all-time leading rebounder, Alexis left Harrisonburg for Washington, D.C., and signed with the WNBA's Mystics following the hottest stretch of her career.

Battier Young departed from JMU (the following March) as well to see what everything Alexis could and then some. While Battier and Young both left the pool, it's one far from the pool畔, rather than stay on the floor for the game, rather than stay on the floor.

As if.

Brooks has used Evans' success as a platform to attract future recruits, further showing that JMU's athletics can receive national attention and can perform very high levels.

We've very proud of, that's something that we don't take lightly. 'MVP's' seventh overall year, just another year, another year that we not that press release to our re-

I think it just brings more attention to our program.

And while Evans is bringing JMU into the national spotlight, it's also brought the potential to be the best, if not the best, player of the year.
