CRIMINAL INVESTIGATIONS

In the late afternoon of the summer solstice, a three-year-old girl was reported missing by her mother. After a brief search, she was located safe and sound in the arms of a passerby.

A car bomb exploded in a residential area on the outskirts of the city, causing minor injuries and closing local roads for several hours.

From the Text to the Trail

A new honors seminar on the Appalachian Trail will give students a different Maymester experience.

By KEVIN DEGNER

The Appalachian Trail course at the Breeze is an honors course and an interdisciplinary approach for the constructive use of science and technology for a peaceful and sustainable future.

The seminar, which runs from May 18 to 31, will focus on building relationships between projects, "Degner said. "There isn't always a venue for relationship building places for these conference groups to discuss various issues." The seminar will have three parts: May 18 to 31, June 11 to 14, and June 14 to 19.

The primary elections for the state of Virginia will be held on June 9. Voters will decide which Republicans and which Democrats will run for the three offices: governor, attorney general, and lieutenant governor.

The Republican candidates for governor are Patrick Mullone, a former prosecutor, and Tony Busbee, a former candidate for lieutenant governor. The Democratic candidates are Jon Bower, an attorney general, and Dave Foster. The Republican candidate for governor, Bob McDonnell, is unopposed. The Democratic candidate for governor, Terry McAuliffe, is unopposed. The Democratic candidate for lieutenant governor, Creigh Deeds, is unopposed. The Republican candidate for lieutenant governor, Bob McDonnell, is unopposed.

The seminar has offered such a course, according to Degner. "It's a sampler," Kessler said. "I didn't want anyone to drop out and I didn't want people to meet each other and have conversations about things that they didn't know anything about." The seminar is designed to give students a different Maymester experience.

Campus Signs Gone Missing

Sophomore Andrew Elgert is the speaker of the senate in Student Government Association for junior year. Elgert, a computer science major, was nominated at Tuesday’s meeting by Sen. John Scott and was approved unanimously. There was no objection, debate or vote since he was the only candidate nominated. Some points he made for his goals as speaker are to “make debate better,” continue the pro-con-pro debate form used in meetings, “cut down redundancy” in debate and make sure committees “play an important role in creating and altering proposed bills.”

It takes some work to prepare for such a hike. Some students are already practicing by carrying packs filled with rocks across campus or their own advertising.

Cluck, a Richmond native, said he’s not an avid hiker, but he doesn’t think that the trail will be too difficult.

“I think the most challenging part will be the days when it gets really hot and we’re hiking and wearing those heavy packs,” Cluck said.

Kessler explained that everyone will carry at least one quart of water in their packs, which she fears are not great for weigh less than 20 pounds. In order to purify water along the trail and teach students how to take care of themselves to prevent dehydration or other diseases.

“We had to work up some pretty good consent forms,” Kessler said about it, but there’s a lot of local history that relates to it probably.”

substantial glimpse into the field. "We took a look at the environmental minors that existed, looked at if there was a way to… connect them a bit," Leslie said. "You can look at the environment from a variety of perspectives, so [with] faculty from different backgrounds, you'll be able to look at the subject in a more holistic way."

According to the environmental science minor's Web site, environmental science, as well as the other new minors, could be pursued by students "ranging from the physical, natural or social sciences, to education, journalism or business, all [benefiting] from this broadly based environmental curriculum."

While neither the department of geology and environmental science, nor the Office of the Registrar knows how many students have declared the environmental science minor yet, the expectations are high.

"The minors were just approved, so it's too early to be looking," Morey said. "However, [the program] draws upon the strengths of existing faculty who are interested in environmental science."

Environmental science is just one of several minors being added to the Fall 2009 course catalog. Other minors include modern European studies, which is offered by the department of political science and chronicle illness, which is offered by the department of nursing.

MAYOR: Planning for More Summits on Various Issues

sustainability, Mittal also wants to use the summit as a way to increase personal responsibility. He cites Degner sponsoring this summit, without the city, as an example.

"I find that unique that an individual is taking responsibility," Mittal said. "Indirectly [Degner] is emphasizing the exercise of personal and social responsibility, that is very important. We do not talk about these issues of personal responsibility and social responsibility, if we want to leave a better organized and less violent world then we need to talk about these issues."

Despite many JMU students leaving Harrisonburg after exams, Degner is not worried about attendance since the event has 78 confirmed guests on Facebook.

Degner currently has no plans to make this summit an annual event but is considering hosting summits on business development and cultural exchange as well as arts and creativity. Before he can plan those summits, Degner is committed to making this first summit a success.

"It's exciting about it," Degner said, "I have a lot of energy going into it."

It will be our task to see that we leave our purple and gold for the next generation better for the next generation than we know it. It will be our task to see that we should bring a little JMU with us — inspiring opportunities and fractured hope. We should work to uplift those places, person by person, deed by deed.

It was surprising to the support I received during my recovery. I know I shouldn’t have been. From the friendly Facilities Management folks, to the professors eager to help you with your capstone, to the anonymous student who inserted a few coins before your meter expires, helping others is a way of life here.

Next Saturday we will leave our purple and gold, and many of us will go to places with real problems. Places plagued with splintered communities and fractured hope. We should work to uplift those places, person by person, deed by deed.

As a graduating senior who has done plenty of research on our study behavior and wishes for someone with more patience.

A “follow-this-example” dart to the alum who announced that all non-science majors need to go back to their sale of campus, because there wasn’t enough computers. From a business major who will study with the puppy. From a girl who likes you but wishes for someone with more presence.

A “crunch-a-size-me-captain” dart to the friend for getting a tattoo.

A “you” dart to the roommate’s boyfriend. A “your-puppy-is-cute-but-you’re-not-that-special” dart to the girl in East Campus Library.

I bleed purple.
Here in the United States, the most important amendment of the Bill of Rights includes the freedom of the press. The press keeps the government in check by keeping the public informed, and the public holds the government accountable on Election Day. All in all, this is a pretty good arrangement in theory, and most of the time it works, for some values of “works.” However, this is not the case in all countries. There are countries where sunlight is not considered the best disinfectant, and the press is not free. The Islamic Republic of Iran is one of these countries, as National Public Radio freelancer Roxana Saberi has been learning over the past few months.

In February, Iran announced that Saberi had been arrested for buying a bottle of wine, which is illegal under Iran’s sharia religious legal system. She was later charged with working without press credentials. Her harm to report the truth was revealed three years ago, but until this year, it apparently wasn’t that big of a deal.

Three weeks ago, though, it was announced that Saberi’s secret trial had charged her with espionage, and sentenced her to eight years in prison. President Barack Obama, Secretary of State Hillary Clinton, U.S. Representative Earl Pomeroy, (D-N.D.), and the European Union Presidency have all issued calls for Saberi’s release, as has the Council on American-Islamic Relations. However, Iran remains determined to continue its commitment to human rights failure. Last Sunday, Saberi celebrated her 32nd birthday in the infamous Evin Prison in Tehran.

She hasn’t been allowed to see a lawyer since March 6, it probably hadn’t gotten a fair trial and her story has been underreported in the United States.

It’s a pretty safe bet that Saberi did not get a fair trial in Tehran; oppressive governments tend to “bend the rules” to put away “enemies of the state” such as Saberi. This is unacceptable. Other journalists who have been arrested in Iran’s ongoing dragnet for dangerous outsiders include Canadian photojournalist Zahra Kazemi and Kurdish journalist Mohammad Sadegh Kaboudvand. Kazemi is now dead, killed by guards in the same prison where Saberi is now held. Sadly, judging by Evin Prison’s track record, Saberi’s chances of returning to the United States alive are slim to none.

Unfortunately, the criticism from the Obama administration so far has been limited to the expected noises of sympathy. Clinton expressed “deep concern” for Saberi’s safety, and Obama said he was “gravely concerned.” With all due respect, that is a highly inadequate response — one expresses “deep concern” about the Cincinnati Bengals’ draft picks this year, over an American journalist being tortured in a dingy jail in the suburbs of Tehran.

At this point, it looks like Obama and Clinton intend to offer not only Saberi — but all the others that have died unjust deaths at the hand of the Iranian government — as a sacrifice to the Great God Kumbaya. If we don’t do anything about Iran’s rampant human rights abuses, even when it affects American citizens abroad, then maybe Iranian President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad will stop calling us the “Great Satan USA” on his blog. If the lives of Americans and people from other countries are the price of a potential pie-in-the-sky peace deal, then the price is too high. I’m not calling for blood in the name of Roxana Saberi, I just want her and all the other people oppressed by the Ahmadinejad regime to be free. Now that’s what I call “change we can believe in.”

Games And Grades

JMU's athletes have been working on a new approach to off the field of play. The National Collegiate Athletic Association has recognized seven JMU teams for outstanding academic achievement. The teams recognized are women's cross country, women's golf, men's tennis, women's tennis, women's indoor track and field, women's outdoor track and field and women's volleyball.

The recognition was based on the Multi-year Academic Progress Rate (APR) scores. Teams that were on the top 10 percent APR of their respective sports were recognized.

Each student athlete can earn two points per year. One point is earned for being academically eligible (above a 2.0 GPA). Another is earned for participation in the student athlete program. In addition, two points are earned if the student athlete returns to the university as a full time student athlete over the past two years.

The APR is calculated by taking all points earned by each student athlete over the past two years and dividing that number by the total possible points that could have been earned. That results in a decimal that is then multiplied by 1.000. JMU has the most teams recognized in the 12-team Colonial Athletic Association.

Academic counselors agree that while they encourage academic success, the responsibility of managing time and balancing school and athletics falls on the student athlete.

"We place the responsibility on the student athletes and they know we expect them to succeed, " said Bill Walton, director of Student Athlete Development. "But the student athlete is responsible for their academic success."

Academic achievement is a big part of the student athlete experience at JMU.

As a player, Townsend's big break came at a tournament his sophomore year of high school. "It's sad to see the streak end, " sophomore Trevor Knight said. "But if you considered what little playing time he received his first three years on campus."

Due to Landers' rushing ability — he amassed 1,779 yards in his fall — he is willing to try his hand at different positions. At the Pro Day in early April, he participated in position drills as a running back, defensive back and wide receiver. Landers, as well as his agent, hopes this versatility will help him get picked up by a team. "It was a rollercoaster obviously, just 'cause you know you're going to be going down to the lows, " Landers said. "Got a lot of phone calls from different teams and here I am I didn't get the free agent market as well, which is probably better because I get to find a position that will suit me more."

Right fielder Matt Townsend scored 54 runs this season, good for third place in the Colonial Athletic Association. The junior also leads the team with 54 RBIs. Townsend is also in the top 10 in the CAA in batting average (.392), home runs (16) and total bases (150).

He was actually as a pitcher. Townsend said, “It was a regional quarterly game and the game was over before he hit the mound. We ended up winning all nine innings and we ended up winning. During that run, we made it to nats for the first time in school history.”

“arachnophobia this year, as he is one of three Dukes to start all 45 of the team’s games so far. It is by far the most he has started in his career, because he instead the last 20 games of his sophomore year and was forced to redshirt last year due to injury. Townsend said, “It’s pretty much my first full season. As a frosh. I came in, I wasn’t an everyday starter. The last couple years I’ve battled season-ending injuries. This year, I’ve just read to stay healthy, put together a full season. Good things have happened with hard work, a little bit of pre-tar.”

Townsend said he is a little nervous for camp but “hard work, a little bit of pre-tar.”

Townsend said he is a little nervous for camp but “there are so many great players that don’t get the opportunity” so he is ready for his turn.

Giants next weekend, in case he doesn’t make the training camp roster, but he said he would prefer to sign with the Washington Redskins because they are close to home for the Fairfax native.

Skolnitsky and Apted already fell for camp. Wednesday and Landers leaves this weekend, so he is ready for his turn.

Skolnitsky said, “I’m not upset about it, it’s a great opportunity,” Landers said. “We have a great network, “ We were all on the phone with each other this weekend about what we heard and just doing the best we could do. We heard.

Apted and Skolnitsky were invited to the Washington Redskin mini-camp, and Harwood was invited to camp with the New Orleans Saints.

Skolnitsky still had a year of eligibility left on the team, but he tested positive for a banned substance in November and was suspended for his senior year. He is looking for an early start toward a professional career, though he also wasn’t drafted this weekend.

“Coach [Mickey Matthews] always tells us make sure you leave it all on the field, “ Landers said. “Don’t be one of those players that walks off the field and says I didn’t realize that was my opportunity.”

With the summer just around the corner, I should be very much excited. I currently am with the idea of finally freeing myself from the shackles of education. However, before we are liberated, we must endure the brain-rape that is finals week.

MICHAEL LARRICK

The Finals

Consider a play synonymous with a policy. You need all the right pieces — the right playwright, the right director, the right actors and the right set. I have better things to do than keep my skull until I cry blood.

I believe that professors need a way to assess our performance on an extended period of time in order to properly manage the load. However, before we are liberated, we must endure the brain-rape that is finals week.

MICHAEL LARRICK is a junior media arts & design major and The Breeze’s humor columnist. He plans to major in filmmaking at the University of Texas at Austin. He is not very smart, but he is very funny.

New York Director Channels Spanish Playwright’s Passion

by TYLER BRADSHAW

New Burger Joint Hits the Spot

by ZACH WEAVER

After a gut-busting research trip in New York to sample up to six burgers per day, Aaron Ludwig and Mike Schen developed the simple, yet calculated Jack’s Brown Burgers.

It started back in 1994.

“Two of my friends and I would make a trip to New York every year and we’d just try all these different burgers. We’d do it just for fun,” said Schen. “One year we went to a place in the East Village called Black Sheep — we ordered two burgers and I remember the server telling me, ‘One of you boys ordered two burgers.’ ”

In 1998, Schen and Ludwig opened a burger joint on Main Street in downtown Harrisonburg.

A great accomplishment was a men-only bathroom.

After every trip to New York, Schen and Ludwig would order a burger from Black Sheep. The burger was about $8 and included bacon, cheese, lettuce, tomato and pickles on a brioche bun.

“A great accomplishment was a men-only bathroom,” Schen said. “It was free standing, it was always clean and it was free standing. This is a true New York City bathroom and that is why we love it.”

When we ask Schen and Ludwig about the place they first tasted their favorite burger, the answers are scattered.

“The childhood dream finally came true when Jack Brown’s opened down the street on April 4 at 6 South Main Street,” Schen said. “There is a possibility of the same ingredients. The menu includes fries and0 the special sauce was good that I am now willing to consider my tomato soup and onions. The crinkle fries have a deep-fried edge and are totally seasoned, and are half the extra cost. The fries are light enough to avoid the adverse side effects and the environmental effects of other burgers.

In the three weeks since it’s opened, Jack Brown’s has already attracted a following. Among the regulars is Val Vinson, a local insurance claims professional.

PLAY: Director Victor Maog Uses JMU To Display His Interpretation of Classic

"My job as a director is to be an interpreter of texts and extend the ideas that they have to a 3-dimensional form," Maog said.

And it looked as easy at Lorca was Tuesday night, directing Steele and fellow performers.

"I think this play is a perfect fit for Steele," said Maog, "because it is about something real and it is about passion and who doesn't understand passion?"

The backbreaking work and tragic lifestyle of farm workers and young children in the fields of California during the 1970s is forever immortalized by Cathy Murphy. Murphy, who photographed the lives and travail of César Chávez, now in her mid-60s, lives in California. Murphy was trained for in the commercial business, but on her son, who was in first grade at the time. “I took thousands of photographs in the fields of California during the 1970s is her favorite photo of him ever.” When the photographs in the exhibit, the one where Chávez’s sitting in his armchair, that’s her favorite photo of him ever.” The nationally renowned exhibit portrays Murphy’s monumental photography, the artist enclave of Bisbee, Ariz., where she resides. She is writing a bilingual book about her experiences with the farm workers and Chávez, and hopes to have it completed in two years.

Aside from planning to return to California, Murphy has continued her activism for workers what Martin Luther King did for civil rights across the country. “He just asked that the photographs of Chávez’s life haven’t been shown in the past because “he just asked that his proper placement in history until recently. Even though Chávez dedicated his life to improving migrant workers, and Murphy spent her younger years documenting the significant strides made by the movement, migrant workers will struggle for their rights today. The Breeze Graduation Guide is meant to recognize seniors and allow them a chance to reflect on their JMU experiences. It serves as a way to remember accomplishments and important events that took place over their time here. The guide also serves as an aid for family and friends of graduates to locate various ceremonies and gives directions for finding their way around campus. Lastly, it provides an opportunity for families to acknowledge their child’s achievements.

The Breeze, the student-run newspaper of James Madison University, serves student and faculty readership by reporting news involving the campus and local community. The Breeze strives to be impartial and fair in its reporting and firmly believes in its First Amendment rights.

Joining the Ranks of JMU Alumni

On behalf of the more than 100,000 members of the James Madison University Alumni Association, congratulations on your graduation and welcome to the JMU Alumni Association!

The members of the association recognize the determination it took for each of you to reach this culmination of your career at JMU. But receiving your diploma is not the end of your affiliation with, time at and affinity for JMU. In fact, most alumni will tell you that graduation is when the strongest bond with your alma mater is solidified.

As you venture off to graduate programs and exciting careers, the Alumni Association strongly encourages you to stay connected to your friends and your JMU family, whether through your own circles or through the vast alumni network that exists today. Alumni groups exist throughout the country for your enjoyment and support. Networking events, reunions, tailgates, golf tournaments, walk-a-thons, and Homecoming are all events designed for you to stay connected and continue to grow within the JMU community. As an alumni, don’t forget to bookmark www.jmu.edu/alumni — it’s the source for all things alumni, including alumni groups, events, or opportunities to get involved.

The financial support of alumni has never been more important to the continued viability of JMU than it is today. Did you know that alumni giving made up slightly more than 50 percent of the last capital campaign? The Association asks that you remember your time here, and that when JMU asks for your help, we hope that you will heed the call. You can start your tradition of giving at any time by visiting www.jmu.edu/give.

Of course the University and the Association hope that you will return to campus as much as possible. Whether it’s to cheer on the Dukes, to guest lecture in your discipline, or to celebrate Homecoming each year, we hope you’ll continue to think of JMU as your second home.

Congratulations on your success and best wishes on your new endeavors. Please know that wherever life takes you, you will forever have the support of JMU and your fellow alumni.

Welcome to the JMU Alumni Association!

Senior Memories
Two students reflect on their Experiences at JMU

By RACHEL CHEMERYNSKI
The Breeze

Well, I guess it’s really that time. Although I don’t exactly want to and am not sure if I’m ready, it’s finally time to say goodbye to JMU, and enter the next chapter of my life: the real world.

I don’t even know where to begin. My time at JMU has given me countless memories and experiences that I will never, ever forget.

First I’d like to say goodbye to Eagle Hall: my freshman year home. Even though you were smelly and had pee lurking in your elevators, I love you for giving me the best friends I could ever ask for and the craziest year of my life, hands down. From providing cute freshman men to late-night vending machines, you really knew the way to a girls’ heart.

Next, I’d like to say goodbye to The Commons, where I lived for the past three years of my life with the most amazing (and crazy) girls, whom I’d like to call my “bridesmaids.” You girls have been a huge part of my college experience, always making me laugh and bringing out the best in me.

Goodbye Franzia, Captain Mo and all my other favorite men: you know who you are.

Goodbye to never-ending block parties, keg stands, and all the other wild (and bizarre) things I’ve witnessed during my past four years here.

Goodbye to the Quad, Earth and Tea Café, Martins, Starbucks and all of my other go-to places. You’ve always cheered me up and made me the perfect cup of coffee when I was having one of those days.

Goodbye JMU and Harrisonburg, VA. Thanks for showing a northern girl what southern hospitality is. (Men actually hold doors?) And thanks for teaching me the world “y’all” and to stop saying “wicked.” I’ll see y’all soon... and for everyone still here, it’s true: It does go by too fast, so live it up while you can.

By JESS NOVAK
The Breeze

“I just want to play on my pan-pipes. I just want to drink me some wine. As soon as you’re born you start dying. So you might as well have a good time.”
— CAKE

Underclassmen (and seniors, too), head these words of wisdom from one of the greatest bands you might but probably don’t know. And while you’re at it: go down to the Artful Dodger, Blue Nile, TDU or Clementine Café and see a show because I bet you’re missing one of the greatest things Harrisonburg and JMU has to offer: music.

Maybe I’m biased and maybe I’m crazy, but either way I’m serious when I say college hasn’t always been all that and a bag of chips. It’s a lot of work, a lot of disappointment, challenges, drama and mistakes. But if there is one place I’ve always found consolation, it’s been in front of a stage, seeing my peers, friends and occasionally even someone pretty well-known rip a guitar or destroy a drum kit.

I’ve got a lot of friends here whom I’ll miss, but the moment the sadness hit was the moment one of my favorite bands played their last note, so I guess this is more of a “thank you” than a “good-bye.” Thanks for filling my nights with good songs and even better people. YOU are the ones I’ll miss.

So go see a show, thank me later and remember these words to live by: “Be excellent to each other, and party on, dudes.”

Good Luck In Your Future Endeavors
Things to do Before Graduating:

You have only a few more days before it’s all over, so what are you waiting for?

- Find a way to get into Wilson Hall’s cupola
- Ride the “drunk bus” one last time (maybe do a flip or two)
- Eat as much as you can in one sitting at D-Hall (when’s the next time you’ll have a virtually free smörgåsbord?)
- Watch the sun set from ISAT
- Sneak into your freshman year dorm for a final tour
- Make out on the Kissing Rock with that special someone (so what if you’re not getting hitched? Dispel the legend!)
- Find the tunnels under the Quad
- Go into a campus building that you’ve never been in before
- Wade (or swim) in Newman Lake
- Streak the Quad (but don’t get caught!)
- Take a trip on Skyline Drive
- Go hiking/camping in Shenandoah National Park or George Washington National Forest
- Submit a Dart or Pat to The Breeze
- Time yourself (or have a race) from one end of the ISAT/HHS building to the other
- Sit in the astronomy park or arboretum
- Lounge in TDU and grab a coffee or latte
- Hit up your favorite downtown hotspots, like Dave’s or Clementine, all in one night
- Write your favorite professors from your four years thank-you letters
- Start a LinkedIn account, and make sure to stay in touch with friends on Facebook

Cut this page out and add your own events!
