BY THE NUMBERS

JMU SCHOLARLY COMMONS
A REPOSITORY SERVICE PROVIDED BY LIBRARIES & EDUCATIONAL TECHNOLOGIES
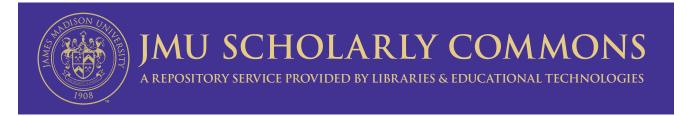

Connecting Madison's top-notch research with the world commons.lib.jmu.edu

223,874
223,874 content downloads to date

8,000
8,000+ items are available on JMU Scholarly Commons

198
198 countries have users of JMU Scholarly Commons content

30
30 percent of searches of JMU Scholarly Commons begin with Google

2 million
JMU Scholarly Commons is connected to the Digital Commons, which has over 2 million works from 463 institutions.

600
Explore works in 600 disciplines

TOP 10
Within the Digital Commons, JMU is one of the top institutions in the disciplines of communication sciences and disorders, diplomatic history, multivariate analysis, social media and statistical methodology.

Mirror, mirror, standing tall, have princesses changed at all?

JMU alumnae Juliana Garabedian ('15) and Rachael Michelle Johnson ('15M) have each published articles on the evolution of Disney princesses and the effects on body image, gender roles and attitudes toward love. With more than 13,000 downloads combined since February 2015, the papers are the most popular on JMU Scholarly Commons, drawing interest from scholars around the world.