

PICTURE THIS

Who's behind the robots?

JMU's summer Robotics Camp is designed for middle-school students who want to push robots to the limits. Campers use the latest EV3 robot from LEGO, which allows them to control up to four motors and four sensors simultaneously. They also learn advanced building and programming techniques from two JMU physics professors, both of whom are longtime AFOLs (Adult Fans of LEGO) who use LEGO robots in their courses.