History
Although El Salvador gained its independence from Spain in 1821, the political and social upheaval that followed led to continued conflict and instability. The country experienced a series of wars and civil unrest, including a civil war from 1931 to 1992.

The FMLN, a grassroots guerrilla group, began fighting against the government in the late 1970s. The United Nations observed a ceasefire in 1992, leading to a peace accord in 1992, which brought an end to the civil war.

Casualties
According to the United Nations, more than 75,000 people died as a result of the conflict. An estimated 200,000 people were displaced.

Demining
The laying of landmines during the conflict has left the country with a significant demining challenge. The United Nations Mine Action Service (UNMAS) has been working to clear the mines since the peace accord was signed.

El Salvador continues to face challenges in demining and landmine awareness, with a focus on providing support and assistance to affected communities.

Falkland Islands
History
The Falkland Islands were first discovered by the Spanish in the 16th century, but the dispute over their sovereignty has been ongoing since 1833.

Casualties
The 1982 Falklands War resulted in the deaths of hundreds of soldiers from both the United Kingdom and Argentina. The war also had a significant impact on civilians on both sides.

Demining
The Falkland Islands are home to a number of landmines, which pose a significant threat to both the environment and the safety of those who live and work in the islands.
