

THE MUSIC HOUR. Teacher's Guide for the Fifth Book. By Osbourne McConathy, W. Otto Miessner, Edward Bailey Birge, and Mabel E. Bray. New York: Silver, Burdett and Company. 1931. Pp. 333.

An ideal manual for both experienced and inexperienced teachers and supervisors of music.

Examples and suggestions are given for appreciation, sight-singing, ear-training, and many other types of lessons. The work planned is suitable for the average sixth grade. The reading material and songs are arranged in a practical fashion. L. H.

JOHN AND JEAN. By Eloise Davis Pickard and Gladys Simpson. New York: American Book Company. 1932. Pp. 95. 48 cents.

A most delightful first reader. The stories in Book One show how the West Wind helps John and Jean enjoy the autumn days; Book Two finds the North Wind showing them the delights of winter's sports; and in Book Three the South Wind helps them chase Spring in her green dress, and they see the birds come and give the orioles assistance in building their nest. The illustrations are as charming as the stories. Children cannot but learn to read with such fascinating material.

DO AND LEARN READERS: Boys and Girls at School, a first primer. Stories of Animals, second reader. Interesting Things to Know, third reader. By Margaret White and Alice Hanthorn. 1930. JEAN AND JERRY'S VACATION, second reader. By Mabel Hubbard Johnson. 1931. TOBY CHIPMUNK, primer. By Margaret J. McElroy and Jessica C. Younge. 1931. BETTY JUNE AND HER FRIENDS, primer. By Lena B. Ellingswood. 1929. FACT AND STORY READERS, primer with workbook. By Suzzallo, Freeland, McLaughlin, and Skinner. 1930. New York: The American Book Company.

The subject matter of these readers comes out of the actual experiences of children, and satisfies their curiosity in regard to things in their everyday life. Each book is attractively arranged, with pictures which are colorful and childlike in conception. And the vocabularies are checked with standard word lists. M. L. S.
