Their patience beside the toiler,
Their courage behind the fighter,
Their hand beneath the fallen,
Their faces against the wilderness,
Their faith in a day like ours—

Our Grandmothers!

To them, in love and honor,
We dedicate this book.
Foreword

With loving thoughts we have chosen to picture in our book for 1925 a little of the truth and beauty of "Old Virginia." Where would our ideals be if those brave and courageous men and women had not lived? Are we grateful to them and are we trying to keep ourselves loyal to their ideals?

(From James Moffatt’s Translation of the Epistle of James)

Remember, we teachers will be judged with special strictness. We all make many a slip, but whoever avoids slips of speech is a perfect man; he can bridle the whole of the body as well as the tongue. . . . What a forest is set ablaze by a little spark of fire! And the tongue is a fire; the tongue proves a very world of mischief among our members, staining the whole of the body and setting fire to the round circle of existence with a flame fed by hell. . . . With the tongue we bless the Lord and Father, and with the tongue we curse men made in God’s likeness; blessing and cursing stream from the same lips! My brothers, this ought not to be. . . .

Who among you is wise and learned? Let him show by his good conduct, with the modesty of wisdom, what his deeds are. But if you are cherishing bitter jealousy and rivalry in your hearts, do not pride yourselves on that—and be false to the truth. That is not the wisdom which comes down from above; it is an earthly wisdom, sensuous, devilish; for wherever jealousy and rivalry exist, there disorder reigns and every evil. The wisdom from above is first of all pure, then peaceable, forbearing, conciliatory, full of mercy and wholesome fruit, unambiguous, straight-forward; and the peacemakers who sow in peace reap righteousness.
Prayer

O UR GRACIOUS Heavenly Father, we wait before thee again at the beginning of another year’s work, in this place of cherished memories. Wilt thou bless our hopes and guide our efforts.

We thank thee for youth, for hope, for aspiration; we thank thee for memories of past happy days, for the strength and courage that come with congenial association, for the love of friends, for the smiles of kindness and courtesy, for words of truth and wisdom. Help us to make our school life rich and sweet, that all future years may thereby be fuller of light and joy.

Enable us to appreciate more fully the power and the opportunities of our school life. Make us sensible of the gifts with which thou hast endowed us, and make us anxious to use them fittingly and effectively. In our speech give us wisdom and self-control; in our judgments give us sympathy and charity, as well as a sense of justice; in our conduct give us an influence that is wholesome and uplifting. We pray thee for the spirit of sympathy and the skill of co-operation, that the resources of the strong may become the inheritance of the weak, and the burdens of the faltering may be lightened by our united power. In all may we reverence thy truth and thy law, that thy smile of blessing may rest upon us. In the name of Jesus Christ, our Lord, Amen.

Fourth-year Class, Candidates for the B. S. Degree

If B. S. means Bunch of Sweeties, they’ll all be elected; but as Jean Gose says, “You can’t prove it by me.”—“Der me,” “Git back,” and let Gladys tell you exactly how it happened. Of course, B. S. might mean Better Sandwiches, or Butter Scotch; and Louise Keeling says, “I know it’s the truth.”—Nancy Roane says, “Well, I declare! I don’t believe that’s what it means. I think it means Better Singing.”—“Lawsy me,” said Virginia Garden, “I thought it meant Better Slow.”—“Yes, suh, that’s what I thought,” said Ala Smith—“Excuse me,” said Hester, “I thought it meant Bobbed Sisters.”—“But Doctor,” said Clara Lambert, “I don’t see how it could be, for how does Orra Smith get in?”—“Rats!” said Mary Warren, “it means Bluffers Society.” And Edith says hers would make Bertha Sad, while Margaret Wiley says, “It means Blue-Stockings.” But with Madeline Willis it would make Big Show anyway. Sue Kelly said, “That’s the onions!” And they all agreed.

Better Sing

Big Sisters

Class History

It was '23, September;
Came a crowd of wide-eyed maidens
To the Blue-Stone Normal campus.
Here they met with many hardships,
Met and overcame them bravely.
Stunt night first their valor tested;
Then the old girls sent a challenge
To compete in basketball game.
Lost they this, but ever after
In athletics they were victors.
Swiftly passed the time till Christmas,
When they had their first vacation;
Swifter passed the time with homefolks,
And again these Normal Juniors
With their classes wrestled bravely.
But as "Juniors" they were destined
Never to be hailed hence-forward,
For this College—once the Normal—
Now calls first-year students "Freshmen";
And as Freshmen then they prospered,
Although things aside from studies
Held the thoughts of these fair maidens—
Made the time till June pass quickly.
First, the Hippodrome, the wondrous,
With its music, graceful dancers.
And its strangely human circus.
Then the festive Garden Party
For the Sophomores—lately Seniors.
Never was a royal company
Entertained with pomp more splendid.
Longed-for June, with all her pleasures,
Held for them some tears of sorrow,
As they bade farewell to loved ones,
Left behind these halls of learning.
Far and wide o'er Old Virginia
These her daughters hied them homeward.
All too swiftly passed the summer,
And to mountain side and sea shore
Blue-Stone Hill her call insistent
Sent to every loitering student.
Back came trooping all the maidens,
Back to duties and to pleasure.
“Soph’mores” was their boasted title,
And in place of Freshman greenness
Was an air sophisticated,
An intolerance for all newness
As displayed by first-year students.
But they found that all that greenness
Was not flaunted by the Freshmen.
Student Teaching with its trials
Drew from them the tell-tale color,
Caused them worry—grievs unbounded.
But with duties of the schoolma’am
They were not engrossed entirely.
Time they had for sports athletic,
And the wall of the gymnasium
Proudly holds two Soph’more banners
As a token of their prowess
On the field and on the gym court.
Versatile e’en as the Greeks were—
They were skilled in dance and music.
To display it they presented,
On the stage, an operetta,
Bringing to this land of schoolbooks
Many little sprites and fairies
To delight the hearts of students.
Came again the “Month of Roses”
Ever bringing on Commencement
With its mingled joys and sadness—
Joy for a successful ending
Of a task they’d undertaken;
Sadness at the thought of leaving
Alma Mater and its memories.
Yet the friendships that she gave them
Long will stand the test of absence
After all the rules and methods,
Taught to aid in giving knowledge,
Are outgrown or else forgotten.

Sophomore Class Prophecy

The air was still; 'twas twilight’s hour
(The eve of Commencement Day)
That we two sat and idly mused
On the path of our future way.
We wondered if our guardian Fate
Would bring success—and how.
What would each one be working at
Just ten long years from now?

As if in answer to our thoughts,
Out stepped slim Peter Pan,
A merry twinkle in his eye,
His magic pipes in hand.
“Would you two like to go with me?
I thought you'd want to see
Your dear classmates of '25
As they will later be.”

We both agreed we'd like to go
If we could only fly.
So Peter Pan blew fairy dust
Into each eager eye.
Up, up, we flew, and far away,
Above a mystic land.
“Now you can see. Don't fly too low.”
Soft whispered Peter Pan.

Across to Ancient Greece we flew.
O'er seas that sparkling shone:
America’s team in the Olympic sports
Was led by Nickell and Doan.
Herring, Lambert, and Haga, each
Won places of honor and fame;
Ferguson, riding her hobby—play—
Bossed the Olympic game.

Kind Peter Pan then showed us next
The lights of gay Broadway,
Where Kneisley, Buchanan, and Wisman all,
As violinists, led the day,
With Coffman, Reynolds, Bradley, and Roane,
Quartet of world renown.
Nell Binford runs a circus ring,
Where Kelly is the clown.

And never did a circus boast
Actors more famed than these,
With Harrison and Porter as acrobats,
And Rudd on her high trapeze;
The dancers, of course, are Milford and Penn;
Stomback the music runs;
Ripberger does the tightrope stunt;
The side-show is Ethel Dunn's.

We linger on in old New York;
There's Pettus, the baseball fan.
Ashwell and Coleman and Bargelt
Address the Ku Klux Klan.
With Hossley and Ellmore to manage it
Leavitt now edits the Times.
Carter and Thompson are typists swift,
And Grove composes the rhymes.

Peter Pan then gaily laughed;
"Now Hollywood you see;"
Your Flora Francis, little and sweet,
Is quite another 'me.'
See there a great production;
It is the season's hit,
Hopkins, Harper, Alphin, Tabb,
Are taking part in it.

A house party down on the Beach
Has Cornick, Whitehurst, Moore,
Allison, Allen, Williams, and Ayers
Furnishing the "pep," as before.
Of course their names are different, now;
They're quite society bees.
Daughtry and Phaup are week-end guests;
They've come to get the breeze.

Then Peter Pan his pipes did blow,
"Come now, we're on our way;"
Let's try to see the Art Museum
Before the close of day."
This portrait's by K. Griffin's hand;
This section, Pan believes,
Has won great fame. The artists are Adkins, Mathews, and Reaves.

"Your other classmates," Pan went on,
"Are scattered far and wide.
These doctors, lawyers, and teacher-folk
Are cause for honest pride.
But that is Wendy calling me.
Good-bye; good luck to all!"
And Peter raised his pipes and blew
An answering fairy call.

William Webster Ellsworth

For his inspiration to would-be writers, for his discerning comment on the New Poetry, for his instructive address on Shakespeare and Old London, and for his informal talk before the Stratford Dramatic Club, Mr. William Webster Ellsworth has the cordial thanks of the entire student body. His visit here in late January will long be remembered. May we hear him again!

Longings

Friend of mine beyond the mountains,
The ever changing mountains,
The purple-headed mountains
That reach upward to the sky,
I wonder if you ever think the things I think on such a day,
When yellow birds are caroling,
And yellow flowers are blossoming,
And a yellow sun is shining up so high.

Do you ever long for something,
An infinite, dear something,
A fascinating something,
That always seems calling you?
Just a voice that's calling, calling, calling you from far away.
"Come on," it seems to whisper soft,
I know it is a gypsy voice;
It always calls when skies are blue.

When skies are blue, dear friend of mine,
And fields are green, dear friend of mine,
And springtime sweet comes o'er the hills,
When all the world is dreaming, dreaming, dreaming, and Heaven's bending near;
That's when I long to roam again
Far o'er the mountains still and gray,
That's why I want you so, and why
My heart with longing fills.

—Hortense Eanes
If the Valley had a voice, would it speak?
Would it tell of Boone and Jackson? Would it seek
For its own unending glory
In a matchless epic story
If the Valley had a voice?

If the Valley had a voice, would it sing?
Would it fill the boundless heavens in the spring
With a melody inspiring
Till our tasks should be untiring,
If the Valley had a voice?
But the Valley has a voice, and it speaks
In the waters ever-flowing, on the peaks
   We can hear it as we listen
'Mid the flowers or snow that glistens,
For the Valley has a voice.

Yes, the Valley has a voice, and it sings
Most of all it thrills the silence like the wings
   Of a soul's up leap to beauty,
   Or a will's strong rush to duty—
Yes, the Valley has a voice.

SEPTEMBER

24. "Turn back the universe and give me yesterday."
25. We cannot help meditating after seeing "The Three Musketeers."
27. We wonder at the various pronunciations of our names as we shake hands at the Faculty Reception.

OCTOBER

4. The world's greatest circus! Ice-cream and pop-corn! The Freshies turn out in full force to see the famous Y. W. circus.
11. Stunt night is quite a sight,
   But for upper classmen—much delight.
17. "I shall call myself a donkey! I shall call myself a donkey!" saith Don Pasquale.
18. The Stratfords have an "all-star cast" at their banquet.
31. A day of great festivity. Why, there are the October birthday party and the Athletic Association Jambouree. We hear the story of "The Golden Arm" and see many strange-looking people. It is Hallowe'en!
NOVEMBER

3. Wellington Hall is incorporated as a dormitory.
11. We entertain Mr. Ching, Mr. Chang, Mr. Neshemato, and many other students from Columbia University.

Our Foreign Guests

An unusual privilege was ours in having as our guests, on November 11, thirty-five foreigners who are studying education at Columbia University. The party was conducted by Dr. Thomas Alexander, with others from Teachers College. They represented sixteen different countries, including Australia, China, Corea, Japan, India, Arabia. Hardly any other Armistice Day celebration could have been more fitting or, for us, more delightful. Their addresses in Assembly and their personal talk outside brought home to us with a thrill the happy truth that “God hath made of one blood all the nations of the earth.”

The Wages of Art

ANG that exhibit!"

Joseph Hendrick arose from his seat on the grassy hill, took a few steps, and looked down at the drawing on which Diana Colbert was working.

"What's the matter now, Joe?" Slender, green-eyed, sandy-haired Diana glanced up with a smile.

Joseph sat down beside her Turk-fashion and ran his fingers through his straight black hair.

"Just look at this green and brown smear on mine. It resembles that hill," he motioned to the smooth green slope opposite the one on which they were seated, "about as much as I resemble Pocahontas. Diana, I had much rather draw a picture of you."

"Help yourself. But it would hardly do for the contest." Joe, his hazel eyes on Diana, chewed a grass blade reflectively.

"Say, I'm going to do it. Scenes from the Valley of Virginia are in your line, while red-headed ladies are my specialty."

"Stop poking fun. I shan't pose. Joseph Hendrick, can't you realize that graduation is only three weeks off and that the pictures for the contest have to be in next week. Now sit down and sketch that hill."

"Yes, ma'am; but please ma'am, may I draw a picture of you?"

"After you finish that hill."

Joe took a fresh sheet of paper and worked as diligently as Diana for the next half hour.

"That's more like it," he said, holding his sketch at arm's length. "Yours is better, but then the big town of Crawford expects you to win the prize, and I would not disappoint them. Guess we had better go and practice. We can come again tomorrow evening. I'll be over in the morning for the first sitting."

"I have to write up chemistry experiments in the morning. We're too busy for you to be painting my portrait, Joe."

"That's all right. I can leave the experiments out of the picture. Come on.
Let's go." They circled around the hill, took the dusty road back to the small village of Crawford, and arrived soon at the four-room school house, where the Seniors were practising the class play.

"Finished your chemistry?" Joseph found Diana shelling peas on the back porch.

"Hello, Joe. Yes, I've finished. Why did you bring your drawing material? There is only an hour before school opens, and we'll not have time to work this morning."

"You forgot about the masterpiece you are to sit for. Just hold that pose. The sun is on your hair, and it looks so pretty."

"Thought it was red."

"So it is. Horrid stuff, in fact. But you keep on shelling peas."

Examinations passed, and their graduation day dawned in all the beauty of a June morning. Joseph, handsome in his brunette and athletic fashion, stood on the steps of the Colbert house, his hands behind his back, and looked up at white-clad Diana standing on the honey-suckle-covered porch. His face radiated happiness.

"Diana! Diana! Father said I could go to the Art school. He just said so, and I'm going next month. Whew! Isn't this a glorious morning?"

"Oh, Joe! You're really going? What a chance! Some of these days you will be a great master. You can paint me a little picture then of the sun rising from behind Massanutten."

"Take your pet masterpiece? Not much. You will paint that yourself. My specialty is ladies with—er," he laughed and handed her the finished portrait. For the first time Diana saw the picture. The yellow glint of the hair was not true, the freckles were gone, but the green eyes were the very eyes of Diana.

"You will be a great artist some day, Joe."

Orchestra music, nodding oaks, proud parents, long speeches, white dresses, and blue serge—the exercises affected Joseph as a hazy dream. "And Miss Diana Colbert wins the prize," the superintendent closed a shuffling speech. Joe came to life, his happiness complete.

"I'm leaving tomorrow." As usual the two sat on the steps.

"I hate to see you go." For the first time Diana mentioned herself. "It's going to be hard to stay here and—wash dishes."

Something—the moonlight, the honeysuckle, or Diana's tone—stirred Joseph.

"Diana, I love you."

Diana smiled. Quickly she stood up. "Joe Hendrick, you must forget such foolishness. You've got to go away and work hard if you ever want me—us to be proud of you."

Joseph, eighteen and hopeful, interpreted the smile as he chose.

"It is no use, Meester Hendrick," the art director stopped at Joe's easel, one of many in the crowded studio. "See, the shadows under that tree are too night black. For three years you paint the people well, but the rest——" He stepped to the next student.
"The light is good, but——" Joe's mind whirled. He covered the easel and pulled off his paint-smeared smock. Wearyly he left the building, made his way through the crowded streets, and up several flights of stairs to his hall room in the apartment house where he served as night fireman. He picked up a letter lying on the table. From Diana. They had corresponded regularly during the three years he had not been home. In answer to his first ardent love letters she had made friendly replies in which she spoke of his work and hopes until he gradually adopted her same tone. Today her inquiries about the picture he was painting, and her small-town news seemed empty words. He determined to stop writing about his work; that girl would never care for anything but art.

"You've got pretty good color and expression in that face." Joe, painting an imaginative Italian dancer the next day, was surprised by a voice at his elbow. A fat man, chewing on a cigar, continued:

"Ever think about designing magazine covers?"

"That is not exactly my ambition."

"Thought perhaps you might like to make something on the side. My observation has been that you dabblers in paint are poor enough."

"You're about right. What's your proposition?" And so it was that within six months Joseph had a permanent position as cover designer for The Chop Suey.

"In my new work I am saving money," he wrote Diana. "I shall come home in the spring."

Joe, self-possessed and assured, stepped off the train. Embraces and kisses from his mother, handshakes from his father, bear hugs and delighted screams from a number of children confused Joseph. On the edge of the group stood a motionless figure in white, smiling serenely from under a big hat. In four years all childishness had vanished with freckles, but Joseph felt that Diana was Diana still.

"Hello, Diana. How are you?"

"Just fine. I'm glad to see you, Joe."

"Anybody would think to see you that you didn't use to be each other's shadows," remarked the station-master with a wink at Mr. Hendrick as he grabbed Joe by the hand. "Well, how's the boy? 'Clare you look jus' as healthy as if you was painting barns' stead of pictures. Now, don't he?" Joe received similar greetings from most of the inhabitants of Crawford.

That night he sat on the steps of the Colbert house with Diana, as he had done as a schoolboy. He told her of how he had worked in the school, of the Italian at the next easel who had consumption, of the North Carolinian who borrowed everybody's brushes, and of the testy director who gave encouragement to no one.

"And what have you been doing, Diana?" after a while.

"I have cooked and washed dishes—and painted a little. Come over in the morning. I have something to show you."
He found her sweeping the front porch. A tendril of honeysuckle caught in her hair, and as she raised her hand to disentangle the strand, Joseph noted the gold lights in the braids.

“Do you still have that picture I painted of you?”

“Yes.”

“I sometimes think that is the only decent piece of work I have ever done—or shall ever do.”

“Nonsense, Joe. Come on.” He followed her through the house and up to a roomy attic. Joseph found himself in an improvised studio. Diana approached a number of carefully covered canvases that leaned against the low rafters and selected one.

“Now stand at the other end of the room,” she directed Joseph. As he took his place, she lifted the cover and Joseph gasped at the sight. On the canvas the soft glow of dawn crowned the blue top of a blunt mountain in the distance, and the light of day just touched the sweep of green fields that seemed to meet the eye.

“Diana!” Agony and joy were in the sound. The artist in Joseph recognized the touch of a master hand; the lover caught the expression on Diana’s face. Thinking only of her work! Always thinking of art.

“The light is not good,” she said as she stepped back, “but I dare not change it again. I had the true touch one morning, but spoiled it with a streak of yellow. Do you like it, Joe?”

“Like it? Diana, you are an artist. I never dreamed you had such genius. A name is yours for the making. I am proud of you.” The lover’s tones were gone; in his voice was the deference due some celebrity. He looked at the picture again, walked up to Diana, and took her hand. Like a young goddess she seemed to him.

“And so little red-headed Diana has painted the sun rising behind Massanutten.” He dropped her hand and ran down the steps. He reached the gate and turned up the road. In the store window he glimpsed a blue-eyed, red-lipped, yellow-haired lady on a magazine cover. He gulped hard. Art! He turned and went home.

Two days later he left to go back to his “business.” Again the family gathered at the station. But up in the attic of the Colbert house a green-eyed girl sobbed over a little water-color sketch—Joe’s masterpiece.

A Sigh at Evening

The birds sing sweet, the sky is blue;
I sit alone and write to you.

The grass is green and springing high;
The world is happy; yet—I sigh.

I saw a little child today,
With smiling face and laughter gay.

I saw a little flower fair;
It was but one of many there.

I saw a weary soul pass by,
With haggard face and troubled eye.

O happy child and lovely flower,
Live swiftly, for 'tis but an hour.

The happiness of youth and love
Is God's own gift, straight from above.

So time goes on, and life goes by;
I see the world, I see—and sigh.

Over Yonder

Over yonder, where the mountains rise up hazy 'gainst the sky,
Over yonder, where the hills are misty blue,
Over yonder's where I want to go some day before I die,
Just to sit and sit and think what's best to do.

It seems to me like this old world's a mighty pretty place to live
If we'd only take the time to look and see,
But we're busy down here, people, with a life of take and give,
And it's mostly "take," I guess—at least, with me.

But I think if I could get off there alone and way up high,
Out of sound of all this rush of fuss and noise,
I might naturally come to see with understanding eye
That the good Lord made this earth pack full of joys.

So I guess I'll take a trip, whenever I can get a chance—
Try to go up on the mountains near the sky,
Over yonder, where the heaven is blue and sunbeams laughing dance—
Yes, I'm going there some day before I die.

Ye Olden Times

Come sing me a song of the days of old,
Of knights and warriors, noble and bold,
How they helped all the weak and oppressed everywhere,
How each ceaselessly strove to win Lady Fair.
Tell me more; of their courage in war I would hear,
Of the combats they fought, without doubt, without fear,
Of the kings with their grandeur and rich display.
Oh, I wish that all this might have been in our day!

Student Teaching

Student teaching is something that plays a part in the life of each H. T. C. girl. No matter how talented she is in the art of bluffing, she cannot bluff her way then.

It is very important that each girl have the benefit of this experience before receiving her diploma, because “experience is the best teacher”—even better than Miss Anthony.

This training is what gives her a chance to make use of all her original ideas, native tendencies, instincts, and capacities with the help of an ever-watchful supervisor to keep her from going astray. Sometimes, however, she gets “clear off the track” and wanders so far that it takes a deliberate jerk to bring her back; but then, that happens to a lot of girls.

No doubt you are wondering where the pleasure comes in. Well, that comes afterwards, provided her report doesn’t reveal the sad fact that she has wandered too far.

Twilight Hour

The dull monotony of the long Sunday afternoons on the campus has been pleasantly and profitably interrupted by the introduction of the Twilight Music Hour. The name connotes the time and occasion, but a mere name could scarcely suggest the full meaning of the Hour. The Zélian Music Club, realizing the need of a suitable recreation for Sunday afternoons, and realizing the advisability of familiarizing the students with a high type of music, were instrumental in the introduction and continuation of this informal hour of music. Those who love and appreciate music are invited, and those who are capable of participating on these programs are sometimes asked to appear on the programs. It is the object of the club, which stands for scholarship and talent in music, to vary the programs in personnel as well as in the material presented. Therefore, participation is not limited to club members. After attending several of these programs, one is forcibly struck with the well-known quotation from Shakespeare: “The man that hath no music in himself, Nor is not moved with concord of sweet sounds, Is fit for treasons, stratagems, and spoils; The motions of his spirit are dull as night, And his affections dark as Erebus. Let no such man be trusted.”

Freshman Training

“All Freshmen come to Sheldon Hall, immediately after dinner tonight”—thus ran the announcement.

“Twas such a little thing, but such panic as it put into the hearts of the “Rats”! What could it be for? Were the upper classmen going to initiate us? Why, oh why, did they read such things just in time to spoil our dessert?

Dinner over—and such a commotion in the halls and such gossiping all the way from Harrison to Sheldon Hall! Finally, though, we were all seated and trembling in the Assembly Hall, nervously awaiting our fate.

We found most of our fears groundless, but we were informed that we were to enter into a series of lectures to be called “Freshman Training.” We must read the booklets the Student Association had given us and know the rules and regulations of the college well enough to take an examination on them. Well, that scared us a bit, but it was better than initiation—and anyway, we resolved we’d show how well we could learn those rules.

We did; and the examination didn’t prove nearly so hard as we expected. We must have turned out pretty well in the sorority, for we’ve heard no more about training. Really, we feel like full-fledged college girls now, but we are surely glad that training is a thing of the past instead of a future evil.

Freshman Day

“One morning very early, before the sun was up” the Freshman Class arose and woke the whole campus. This most unusual occurrence happened on March 17. About 6:30 in every dormitory a

Cotillion Dances

A very pretty dance was given January 24, under the auspices of the Blue-Stone Cotillion Club.

The A. M. A. orchestra furnished the music and really “did themselves noble.” They gave us the jazziest jazz or the dreamiest waltz with the same ease and in such perfect time that we just naturally danced whether we claimed to be dancers or not. The dining room looked quite attractive, decorated in blue and gold, with penanns and pillows scattered liberally around in every nook and corner.

Speaking of men—there were men galore from east, west, north, and south. They were from “Tech,” W. and L., V. M. I., S. M. A., University of Virginia, A. M. A., and “from the home town.” They came with the intention of having a good time. There were so many men that it was nearly impossible to find your own partner. The girls had to help the men find their partners after each dance; so of course happy confusion reigned supreme between dances.

Time truly went by on wings! It seemed the dance had only just begun when we heard the orchestra wailing “Home, Sweet Home,” and we learned to our sorrow that we must stop our fun and go thither.

Was the dance a success? Well—just ask anyone who attended it.

The second occasion on which the girls demonstrated their entertaining and dancing abilities was the lovely little dance given by the Cotillion Club in the gym on February 14, for the V. P. I. cadets, who presented their Minstrel here that evening.

The gym was appropriately and at-

Editorial

The Schoolmam of 1925 marks the close of the biggest year that H. T. C. has ever known. More and more girls are coming every year, and more and more activities are appearing. This year we have the swimming pool, varsity hockey, and baseball teams. Then the big trips that have taken place really show progress. We are not afraid to venture forth from these protecting gates to try our fate against the world. The Glee Club trips, bigger varsity trips, and even a trip by the Stratford Dramatic Club are listed in our book of travels. All of them met with more or less success, and all are brave enough to try them again.

So mightn't we say that 1925 was a year of progress and growth for H. T. C. and that many dreams long unfulfilled have at last come true? The greatest wish that we could make for H. T. C. is that the success of the future be as great as that of the past.

Just a lot 'o' odds and ends
All fixed here in a heap.
So that every bit 'o' school life
Is here for you to keep.

Seconds from the Mirror,
Poems, too, galore,
With every speck 'o' news—
You couldn't ask for more.

All left-overs of school life
Are given in The Breeze;
We hope that you'll accept them,
And that they all will please.

Grandpa

"Grandma" seems to fill our thoughts
And occupy our mind;
But not one word of "Grandpa"
Anywhere we find.

And yet he loves us just as much,
No matter what we do;
So don't you think that Grandpa
Should have a line or two?

SPORTING NEWS

Hockey Season

Harrisonburg, Nov. 15.—The first H. T. C. Hockey Varsity Team made its debut Saturday afternoon against Westhampton College on the athletic field. A cold, drizzling rain didn't in the least dampen the spirit of the H. T. C. players and rooters—they fought and cheered to the last minute. The final score stood 4 to 1, in favor of Westhampton.

Revenge is sweet, Westhampton, so clear the tracks for H. T. C. next year.

Basketball Season

Bridgewater, Jan. 9.—With what looked like a promise for as successful a season as last year, the H. T. C. sextet took its first game of the season from Bridgewater College to the tune of 28 to 3. About fifty enthusiastic rooters and the squad went with the team. The whole show generated the effects of the Christmas holidays, but with a little strict training, the defect was removed.

Harrisonburg, Jan. 17.—Playing a two-division court and a five-player team, H. T. C. again defeated Bridgewater College, 49 to 15. The game was much more interesting than the score would indicate, because it was the first time that either team had played under these new regulations.

Harrisonburg, Jan. 30.—The Farmville Basketball Team was forced to bow in defeat to the H. T. C. basketeers by the score of 38 to 19. Perhaps it was the home floor, or perhaps it was the splendid guarding done by Harrison and Kelly, or perhaps—well, it might have been a dozen other things—that gave H. T. C. the victory, but the victory was what H. T. C. wanted and that in itself is all-sufficient. The Farmville guards said they would rather watch the electric-like playing of Doan and Rosen than to guard them. We don't blame them at all—we should too.

Harrisonburg, Feb. 6.—In a final spurt that showed that "never-say-die" spirit, the H. T. C. team staged a come-back against Radford that tied the score 35 to 35. The entire game was unnecessarily rough, and both R. T. C. and H. T. C. players were put out on fouls. It's hard luck when neither team can win after such a game as that, but at any rate H. T. C. wasn't licked.

Roanoke, Feb. 16.—The first game played—and won—on the week trip into Southwestern Virginia and Tennessee,

The Dramatic Club Presents "Seventeen"

"Seventeen", was presented by the Stratford Dramatic Club Saturday evening, March 7, at 8:30 o'clock in the Assembly Hall. It was an overwhelming success, for the audience appreciated and enjoyed the pathos, the puppy-love, and the parental restriction which made the play so human and laughable.

Frances Clark in the part of William Sylvanus Baxter, was decidedly the shining star of the evening. It is seldom that a girl portrays a masculine role with such marked success.

Mattie Fitzhugh made a motherly Mrs. Baxter, capable of understanding "Seventeen" better than he understood himself. She was not supported by Mr. Baxter, played by Elizabeth Rolston, who would not buy a dress suit for his son "because of the principle—not the money." The foursome family was completed by Marion Kelly as Jane, a child with an enormous appetite, a retentive memory, and a willing tongue. Emma Dold took the part of Genesis, the colored servant of the Baxters and endman of the entire play.

Lucille Hopkins as Lola Pratt made a splendid "baby-talk lady" who, by her lisp and soon captured Virginia Jackson as Joe Bullitt, Virginia Campbell as Johnie Watson, and Virginia Harper as George Crooper. All four parts were played with the exact effect, as was witnessed by Sue Kelly as Mr. Parcher. The Stratford Play was indeed the success that the entire club and Miss Ruth Hudson were able to make it.

The Scrapbook

On April twenty-fifth the Freshman class presented "The Scrapbook" to the students and friends of H. T. C. in Sheldon Hall.

Act One made us better acquainted with the girls by showing us the family portraits.

The funniest of all was "The Evolution of Dancing," from the prehistoric dance to the old-fashioned and modern waltz. The Freshman class is very musical, and their gay songs added much to the enjoyment of "The Scrapbook."

A Disturbance of Dreams

Ten-thirty! Lights out! In a few minutes not a sound is to be heard. The moon, peeping out from behind a cloud, smiles rather contentedly when he sees that no one is astir on the campus.

Eleven! All is yet silent save for the distant muffled sound of the night watchman making his rounds.

Clang! Clang! sharp clongs pierce the hushed stillness. From every building hurriedly come girls, girls, and more girls. Each, half awake, gazes at the other with a questioning look. It is indeed a pathetic scene. And what can all the commotion be? Only fire drill!

Nature’s Tribute To The Sophomore Class

On the morning of April thirtieth, the Sophomore class was highly honored. When the girls looked out of their windows they were surprised to see that Mother Nature had paid a tribute to the class. On the ground were patches of green and white. She had decorated the whole Valley with the Sophomore colors.

Apple Trees in May

Apple trees in May! lovelier far Than even night’s most silvery star; Or radiance of the noonday sun Or glorious eye when day is done; Soft as snowflakes falling white Or the moon’s caressing light; Then when off your petals float, Hidden in a wee green coat Lies a seed which soon will grow In the warmth of summer’s glow Into apples, luscious, red, Nestled in a leafy bed. Fruit of autumn, bright and gay, Child of apple trees of May!

The Verse Fever

Every spring each fountain pen Gets something like verse fever; The one who says that May has power Is certainly no deceiver; For when the robin sings aloud And the winds a-thrill with joy, And all the outdoors calls us forth Our busy hours to decry, How can the maker of verse be still? How can his pen behave? Spring makes his thoughts so springy, They simply can’t behave!

The Little Brown Bags

On Sundays the girls all eagerly seize The little brown bags with their nibble o’ cheese, Two rolls and an apple or orange round, Two cookies that are always crisply browned.

The Infirmary

To some it’s a place of sorrow and woe; To others it’s a pleasant place to go; To others it’s a second home, To go back to when night has come.

Repair shop for all bruises and bumps, Measles, grippe, pink-eye, and mumps. “What’s wrong with you? You look all in. You’re working too hard—you’ve grown quite thin.”

Some sick, some well folks, both live here, And one, above all, who is especially dear, Who sympathizes and makes us well— Our friend, Miss Gertrude V. Lovell.

Glee Club Trip To Tidewater Virginia

The H. T. C. Glee Club began its big trip on February 21, and during an absence of six days gave six concerts. The first performance was given at the Naval Training Station in Norfolk. Sacred programs at the Monumental Methodist Church, Portsmouth, and at the Park Place M. E. Church, Norfolk, on Sunday morning and evening. On Monday night there was the concert in the Blair Junior High School Auditorium. On Tuesday and Wednesday additional programs were given in Newport News and Staunton.

The girls returned late Wednesday night, tired but happy. According to all reports they had a most wonderful trip.

The Glee Club has made it its policy to give a series of concerts every spring throughout the state. These trips, besides being pleasant for the members, benefit the college by advertising it.

Varsity Versatility

Did you know that the Varsity rivalled the Glee Club on one of its trips? It did. On the way from Nashville to Chattanooga the girls were feeling unusually peppy and musical; so the banjo was brought out and tuned up. And then the fun began. One enthusiastic passenger passed his cap around and turned in quite a collection of matches, pins, buttons, and a dollar in small change. We are sure that the Glee Club never furnished such inspiration. How about it, Glee Club?

Study
I rush with my books to the library,
I have history and science to do.
Notes galore. If I work every minute
I'll barely have time to get through.
I'll glance through the daily newspaper
just a minute before I begin.
The cross-word puzzle looks easy—
What's an eight-letter word for
"to sin?"
I wonder if "ale" is "hard liquor."
No, it will not fit into the space.
What's a three-letter word for a tavern?
Let me see—"hotel," "stopping place?"
"A woman who turned to a spider?"
"Elevated," and "part of the arm?"
I enlist all the help I can muster
Over "ollaopodrida" and "charm."
We hunt through the volumes of knowledge
For a four-letter word meaning
"throes"
Till brought back to earth with the warning
"It's time for the library to close."
Have You Experienced It?

"Sallie, what are you going to wear tomorrow?" asks Jane in her usual night tone. "I thought if you were not using that red striped dress, I should like to borrow it."

"I am terribly sorry, Jane, but I just let Helen have it. Anything else you are perfectly welcome to," replied Sallie.

"Oh, no, that's all right. I don't care.

Jane walked slowly up the hall pondering over the wardrobes of her friends. She paused to tap on Ethel's door.

"Come! Oh, it is you, Jane? Come right in! Help yourself to the cookies!"

"Perfectly welcome to," replied Sallie.

William F. was looking at his long jumper tomorrow?"

"No, thanks. I had just taken a fancy to the blue one."

Just then, spying Edith, she rushes up.

"Will you lend me your cute little pink dress tomorrow?"

"Awfully sorry, but Peggy just got it."

After scribbling a hurried note home requesting clothes, Jane crawls up to bed with hopes that tomorrow will take care of itself.

New-Term Blues

The girls had gathered in Sheldon Hall,
Looking with anxious eye
On seeing their programs, each and all
Uttered a mournful sigh.

“Oh, I hate my schedule,” said Mary to Sue.

“It is worse than it was before,”
Now this is what I heard her say,
And maybe a little more:
“I have six on Monday and five today,
And three on Saturday too!
 Really and truly, without a doubt,
This is more than I can do!”

was with the Roanoke Y. W. C. A. The Y. W. started the scoring, but after the
H. T. C. team had gotten its bearings, the fun began. The Y. W. team put up a brave fight, but the Purple-and-Gold
Basketcarriers carried off the victory, 38 to 19.

Radford, Feb. 17.—In the roughest and the most football-like game ever played by the H. T. C. Varsity, R. T. C. de-defeated H. T. C. 22 to 5. It was not until Doan and Harrison had been forced to leave the floor because of injuries that Radford piled up the score.

Nashville, Tenn., Feb. 20.—Perhaps the best game, both in experience and real basketball playing, that the H. T. C.
varsity has had this season, was the one with Peabody. For the second time this season, the Farmville basketball team went down in defeat before the H. T.
C. sextet 24 to 17. Better luck next time, Farmville. H. T. C. wishes you the best of luck over all of your other opponents.

This is the last game of H. T. C.’s basketball season; and though it doesn’t mean championship, it does mean that
H. T. C. has a higher score than any team she has played. It means she has lost only one game on Virginia soil—
that one to Radford.

The Tea Room

Whenever you want something good to eat
And a cozy fire and a comfy seat,
Just go to the house across the road; There you’ll find good things by the load.
There are apple dumplings with whipped cream,
And tender steaks that are a dream, And chocolate cake, all kinds of pie,
Hot biscuits and butter—they seem to fly.

Ode (Owed) To The Team

We owe them thanks for victories,
And sympathy in defeat;
We owe them yells and also cheers
For a record hard to beat.
We owe them lots for sportsmanship,
For health and hearty vim.
We owe them for the many hours
They’ve practiced in the gym.
We owe them thanks for the way
they’ve met
Each team and tried to lick it.
Alas, also, some of us owe
Still for our Varsity ticket.
We owe it to their modesty
To praise them here no more,
For praise to them is harder to face
Than any team on the floor.
We’re proud of them in every way,
And this we try to show;
But never in a hundred years
Could we pay them all we owe!

—I. O. U.

Our Days

Each day is a road which beckons to us
And leads on over the hill.
We choose the way, we walk that path,
We follow at our will.

Each day is a stone, with which to rear
A building, strong, sublime;
The structure’s worth our very best;
Will it stand the test of time?

Each day is an opportunity:
We seize it or pass it by.
We can mold a character upright and true,
If we have but the faith to try.

If so, why? If not, why not?

Tractively decorated with V. P. I. colors, orange and maroon.
Music was furnished by the "Southern Ramblers" of Harrisonburg, and they proved splendid. However, good things as well as bad must have an end. It's so much better when they leave pleasant memories.

Both dances were attended by many of the girls and adequately chaperoned by members of the faculty. They danced too, and we believe they had a good time.

Chain of Freshmen dressed in red and white, cheered, roared, sang, and broke the dreams of every Senior, Junior, Soph, and Faculty member on the campus. All rushed out and found that the whole school was in the possession of the Freshmen. Now we understand why the sign "Watch the Rats" had been placed in the lobby of Harrison Hall for several days. Everyone was watching them indeed!
The 7:25 bell called the school to breakfast. Red-and-white flaunted everywhere. High up on the ceiling, twined in and out of the railings of the staircase, and across the door, red-and-white waved for Freshman Day. Upper classmen were glad to see such an exhibit of class spirit, but even upper classmen sometimes think that Freshmen should be seen more and heard less.
Lunch time came. Excitement ran high. Miss Lovell, the Honorary Member, dressed in white, appeared with a large corsage of red-and-white sweet peas.

In the dining room a meeting of all upper classmen was called! Consequence reigned and guesses ran wild as to what it could be about.
That night the spirit came out. All upper classmen appeared in black, woefully singing a funeral dirge, which for a moment numplussed even the red-and-white Freshmen. Finally the red, black, and white met in the dining room.
Before quiet was secured, in walked several members of the faculty, perfect copies of the flapper school-girl. That was the climax. All classes enjoyed it together.
Then Helen Goodson, a Freshman representative, proposed a toast to the upper classmen, to which Elizabeth Rolston responded. After dinner a delightful stunt of four years of college life was given by Juanita Baldwin, Betty Everett, Thelma Taylor, and Louise Loving.
When everyone finished laughing, the thought that on the morrow exams would come sobered all. Sorrowfully the girls went to their rooms to read, to think, to study. But everyone felt better prepared because of Freshman Day, Freshman spirit, Freshman sportsmanship, and Freshman colors, red-and-white.

Hail, Dear Old Harrisonburg
Hail, dear old Harrisonburg, noble and strong;
To thee with loyal hearts we raise our song;
Swelling to Heaven loud our praises ring,
Hail, dear old Harrisonburg, to thee we sing.

Majesty as a crown rests on thy brow;
Pride, honor, glory, love Before thee bow.
Ne'er shall thy spirit die,
Thy walls decay;
Hail, dear old Harrisonburg, for thee we pray.

Hail, dear old Harrisonburg, Pride of our youth,
Lead thou thy children on To light and truth.
When then death summons us, Others shall praise.
Hail, dear old Harrisonburg, Through endless days.

The Staff
The staff oft dresses up so fine And goes to school or store; But at staff meetings oftentimes We asked what Ada Woore.

Helen Walker, also a talker, Uses one finger to type at a time; She's never a talker—far more than a walker, She's always a runner when writing a rhyme.

Edith Ward is the "drawing card";
At stick figures she shines; When it comes to curves she is no good, So that's why certainly she should Stick always to straight lines.

Everyone should wisely ponder
And look before he leaps;
Hurt thyself but not thy class,
The Annual Staff thinks "Safety First," And hence good "Counsel" keeps.

Sunset On The Campus
Away to the west of Blue-Stone Hill The sunlight fades, and all is still. A whippoorwill with strident cry Flutters through the pale blue sky; And as he wings his flight so dim A star looks down and laughs at him. The sky and mountains melt in one Beneath the rays of the sinking sun. And o'er the world in darkness deep Stealthy shadows slowly creep. As college buildings lie in shapeless mass The lights gleam forth like dewdrops in the grass. —NEVA LEE WILLIAMS

Hiss Harnsberger sits in her chair, With books around her everywhere, All the librarians, woman and man, Couldn't find books as fast as she can.
Pan

A cocky, strutting boy is he,
Is Peter Pan,
Who flits about from tree to tree—
This Peter Pan.
A Doodle-do,
A crocodile,
A warrior too,
A fairy child,
O Pan!

A lightsome, spritesome boy is he,
Is Peter Pan;
And, prithee, what else can he be—
This Peter Pan?
A dancing boy,
A family man,
A flash of joy
Is Peter Pan.
O Pan!

The Brook

The little stream danced merrily
As onward it wound its way
Down through the woodland's shady dells
Through the flowers bright and gay.

It rushed along to reach the sea
And mingle with the ocean,
To toss the ships and dash the spray
Whene'er it took a notion.

—Evelyn Rolston
The Violin Solo

A voice that speaks to hearts of men
In wistful, haunting strain,
In singing tones, rich, mellow, deep,
Of life and love and pain.

Oh, golden voice! Oh, heart of life!
Thy music calls to me;
It tells me life is sometimes love,
And sometimes pain must be.

The love of friends and love of God
May in my heart abide,
And the bitter-sweet of sorrow and pain
Be with it, side by side.

But thy most tender, dulcet tone
Will ever linger there,
Within my heart, a lovely thing
Of beauty, hope, and prayer.

—Nancy Mosher

As a psychology teacher she can't be beat.

T is for Turner—our good dietitian;
To give us our food is her daily mission.

U is for Unity, a thing that we need
To make our school system sure to succeed.

V is for Varner, our chaperon good;
She'd let you go home for a week if she could.

W is “W”—the basketball star.
Does she out-play all others? Oh, yes, by far!

X is for that which in math is unknown,
And that's a great deal, as we must own.

Y is the “Y”—where we curl our hair;
How ugly we'd be if it weren't there!

Z is for zero—a mark made like this (0)
For those who think that ignorance is bliss.

The Swimmin' Hole

Have you ever had a frolic
    In the good old swimmin' pool,
In the sparklin', dancin' waters,
    Shinin' clear—and oh, so cool?
Were you ever tired o' livin'
    And a-workin' all day long?
Ever felt that nothing suited
    And you somehow don't "belong"?
If you'd try a little swimmin'
    Take a dive, or maybe two—
An hour's splashing in that water
    Would just change the world for you.

The Mistake

One quiet night 'bout nine o'clock
A curious thing occurred;
While I was sitting on my bed,
The fire alarm was heard.

The alarm itself was not so queer,
But then, 'twas Sunday night;
And ne'er before had drill been known
To mar the Sabbath bright.

The girls with one accord began
To stir about a bit;
In trying to find their coats and shoes
They nearly had a fit.

Each one ran out with quickened steps
And knocked all else asunder;
But when we reached the lower hall,
We all began to wonder.

For there beneath the fire alarm
A man and woman stood.
They looked at us, we looked at them,
And laugh I thought I should!

They'd simply made a slight mistake—
Which neither one would tell—
Just naturally rang the fire-alarm
Instead of the door-bell.

—Anna Goodall
Grandmother

Of strong hands and brave hearts,
Gracious and graceful in wealth or in poverty,
The good women of Old Virginia,
Loved and lovable—
Our Grandmothers!

—Dr. J. W. Wayland

On the hearth the bright fire glowing;
Outside, winter's sharp winds blowing;
Twilight slowly fading away,
Bringing the end of another day.

Knitting, knitting, always knitting,
Grandma by the fireside sitting,
Slowly rocking to and fro—
See her busy needles go.

Locks of silver, shining bright
In the hearth-fire's mellow light;
Hands o'er-lined with many a wrinkle;
Eyes that smile with kindly twinkle.

Knitting, knitting, still a-knitting,
Grandma by the fireside sitting,
Slowly rocking to and fro—
See her busy needles go.

—Margaret Kidd

A rosy old lady, a wrinkled old lady,
A wee tiny lady so trim;
A benevolent look, a heart full of love,
Eyes deep though now growing dim.

A rosy old lady, a wrinkled old lady,
A plump smiling lady so dear;
A hand that is firm, a heart that is true—
Our troubles she's willing to hear.

Grandmothers all, little or big,
We all can say from the start,
Though we some day may be grandmothers too,
Our grandmas will still have our heart.

—Bertha McCollum

We love our bonny, blue-eyed granny;
She steals our hearts, 'tis quite uncanny!
She loves us well.
Unselfish, patient, thoughtful ever;
Smiling always; gloomy—never!
Her charms we tell.

We pray that we may never grieve her,
Never to pain or sorrow leave her,
But how we fear!
And may your spirit, hovering o'er us,
Lead us on to lives as glorious,
Granny dear.

—Helen Walker
WHAT do we owe to the good women of Old Virginia? Sacred Traditions? Life? Gratitude? Good homes? Good names?—All, and much more. Their strong hands were skilled in many tasks that we today are spared; their hearts were full of strength for the hardships they had to face, full of love that has come down even to us. They were gracious and graceful at home and abroad, undaunted by poverty, unspoiled by wealth; they were loved because they were lovable.

YOU CAN ALWAYS DEPEND ON A N-E-W-T-O-W-N
The new and unusual—that sparkling reality which is known as the life of each school year—is caught and held forever within the pages of Bureau built annuals. The ability to assist in making permanent such delightful bits of class spontaneity rests in an organization of creative artists guided by some 17 years of College Annual work, which experience is the knowledge of balance and taste and the fitness of doing things well. In the finest year books of American Colleges the sincerity and genuineness of Bureau Engraving quality instantly impresses one. They are class records that will live forever.

BUREAU OF ENGRAVING, Inc.
"COLLEGE ANNUAL HEADQUARTERS"
