"The Rivals" To Be Given As Graduate Play

TO BE PRESENTED IN OPEN AIR THEATER MONDAY EVENING
Miss Hudson Coach

"The Rivals," a few act comedy, will be presented by the graduating classes Monday evening open in the open air Auditorium. Miss Ruth Hudson, head of the expression department has coached them. Many new faces will be seen in this play; the freshness of the plot, the unorthodoxy of its characters, and the exquisite humor of its dialogue makes one of the most amusing and delightful in the range of the drama.

The plot centers around Captain Abberline, a strong old police chief who is entering on a well merited retirement. Miss Lydia Longsand, changes his name to Ensign Beverley. This incident remains closed to Captain Abberline's father, Sir Anthony Abberline, who is a court jester. There is a chance for the younger students.

Harriet says, with justice, that the whole tone of this comedy as well as the local scenery, reminds one of Humphrey Clinker. The characters are traditional, common to the stage but are drawn with all the life and the variegated, whimsicality of its characters happen.

The plays are well cast with Mildred Coffman, Phyllis Palmers, Eliza Dixon, and the Sophomore class, which have been fostered by the Sophomore class. There seems to be here a more than likely influence and character students.

AUNT ABIGAIL'S HAPPY WISDOM

Dear Nieces:

I wonder how many of you said, "Rabbit" last Sunday morning, but all my graduating girls did, and just how you get packages galore. Tom said he'd like to be graduated so he would get some packages. I wonder if he would like to get a package.

I just happened to think that that will be the last letter. No way of getting in touch with me again. I wish I could have been there to see you come back next fall, only for a smile.

A letter just came from Bay and Henie. It must be terribly important, coming at this late hour, so I'll have to see what I can do for them.

They asked me the most outlandish questions.

With much, much love for all of you.

Aunt Abbie,

Dear Aunt Abbie,

My friend Henie, through no fault of her own proved inadvisable on the subject, asked me to write to you about a matter of etiquette that irks her.

You see, Henie told me of an occasion that occurred to her on several times that was a funny sentence, I'm not! Well, here's mine about a certain young lady and I hope that she doesn't have to go together and when we met a girl with her mother and ignore the girl, or shall she ignore her mother and not the girl, or shall she ignore both of them?

One day we were walking to town together and we met a girl with her mother, and I said "How do you do" and Henie said "Hi!" at exactly the same time.

At once hope eternal emerged in our hearts: hereafter two of us were to walk together and whenever we met a girl with her mother, we would simultaneously speak. One would not say "Hi!" to the girl and the other "How do you do?" to the mother.

Are you— or do you

Wonderfully yours

Bay and Henie.

Dear Bay and Henie,

What nice little girls you two were to write me a letter the very last week you were up here.

And what a thoughtful letter it was. I believe you have almost grown up. I really think that I can't improve upon your solution. You might write the mom to smile your broadest smile.

Because you're probably in a hurry to get home, and because I'm in a hurry to have you—

With much love to both of you.

Aunt Abbie.

The evening wore on. Finally he departed with the understanding that she was to meet him in the morning, and he married her.

As Edith went into the house, she partly gained control of her faculties. She really realized that she had promised to marry this man tomorrow. What had possessed her? Why had she been thinking? Oh, God, what was he to become of her?

Far into the night she paced the floor, agonizing over the possibilities. Could she give the man up? She prayed that she could. She prayed as never before. Finally, after two hours of pacing, she thought out the only solution. Immediately she sat down, and wrote to Deaconess Denton asking for her vacation. Maybe if she could go away! The answer to the letter would decide.

When the early morning clock first struck, she searched the bed and Kermit had been ahead of her. Her appearance betrayed the fact that he had not slept either.

"Oh, Kermit," she began hurriedly, "meanwhile keeping her distance. "I know, but we are forgetting my picture in the Schoolman," Kermit interrupted.

"I'd get myself cycle-analyzed."

Dr. Wayland: "What has taken the place of mutilation?"

E. Anthony: "Drivers have."

Dr. Wayland: "No. If you see me in.

Kim's letter: "Cookie, what does grand slam taste like?"

Cookie: "Like the diner!"

Prunie (on telephone): "Is that the boy Bridge Department?"

C. B. D.: "Yes, is there anything I can do for you?"

Prunie: "Well, would you tell me how many points you get for a little ham?"

Mr. Logan wished to borrow a book from the library.

A few days later Mr. Logan appealed to Dr. Pickett:

"It's OK with me, but I have one rule that whoever borrows a book must return it to me."
