Number twenty-three

Published by the students of the State Teachers College
Harrisonburg, Virginia

containing the log of the year, scenes from the voyage, and portraits of the seamen.
Who have been more than "Dads" in being "Pals",
Who have taught us to see life with an unbiased view,
Who have given us strength and courage through their own examples,
Who have placed their confidence in us, thus leading us to nobler things,
Who have been willing to sacrifice their all for us.

In this book, dedicated to them, may find something of all that they have challenged us to make of our lives.

OUR FATHERS

This book seeks to preserve the memories of our Voyage of 1931-1932, with all its gentle breezes and sun-lit peace, and all its strengthening combats against stiff winds and high waters.

PROVERBS 4:1-9

Listen, my children, to a father's instruction, attend and learn intelligence.

When I was a child with my father, a little one, loved by my mother,
he taught me and told me this:
"Get sense, get knowledge,
at any cost get knowledge.
Never leave her, and she will guard you;
love her, and she will take care of you;
prize her, and she will promote you.
... She will adorn you with charm and crown you with glory."

—Moffatt's Translation
Our Heavenly Father, we thank thee for our earthly fathers; for all they have done to make our lives truer and better. Their love and care have been our inspiration and security; their trust and comradeship our gladness and joy.

Keep us always mindful that we are "bought with a great price"; and make us wishful and purposeful to live wholesomely and helpfully in return.

Grant us, our Father, understanding hearts and a full appreciation of all our parents have done for us and meant to us; make the thought of them and the memory of them a constant benediction, that our lives may be the fragrance of all that is truest and best.

Amen.
Sea Cry

Give me a ship at the dawn of day
And a billowy breadth of sea;
A sinking star ere the sun breaks way,
And a cool wind kissing me.

A dash of spray and a spurt of foam
And a silvery path on the blue;
The cool dark depths where fishes roam,
And a route to the heart of you.

Dr. Benjamin F. Wilson

A FATHER TO OUR CITY

We stop the press to record our great loss and sorrow in the sudden passing today, May 24, of our beloved Dr. Wilson, professor of biblical literature in this college.

Born of an honored South Carolina family, founder of Converse College of that state, for twenty-seven years pastor of the Presbyterian Church of Harrisonburg, former moderator of the Virginia Synod, a moving spirit in the Massanetta Conferences—this scholar, traveler, teacher, this man of God yet kept very close always to our common humanity.

He has been as a father to us, as a father to all denominations in our city and to all the un-shepherded throngs outside the churches. It was he who wrote for our use the prayer of gratitude for having had good fathers, which is found on an earlier page of this book.

Winsomeness, fragrance, the blend of strength and gentleness—of mercy and truth—how often were these words on his lips, and how unaware he was of the fact that he himself was to us, day by day, their best interpretation.

Aries, the Ram, stands for "leadership, courage, enthusiasm, and ambition"—and for you he ought to have added art. We'll not mention the stars in a case like this, for there are many different kinds of shine. There's shoe-shine, moon-shine, star-shine, and just plain shine; but best of all we have the sunshine. Your future work will be to "put that sun back in the sky"—if it falls out.
That ideal and congenial husband of yours was born under Gemini or Libra. You may become an astronomer or a pedlar. Because you have a desire to stay on top, like good cream, you will never grow sour. Some day we expect to hear of your shaking hands with the Statue of Liberty.

While we scanned the heavenly bodies, it became known to us that we should be of no assistance in prophesying your future. You also should have been born under Leo, for Venus tells us that your heart has decided your own future and that you know the secret. We trust in the powers of Gemini.

Blessed be the daughter of Leo, for yours is the strength of the heart! Your heart, the vital organ of all lives, will rule in your classroom, in your kitchenette, and in your entire life. Keep your generous disposition, and you'll never be disappointed in your country or in far lands.

The world fills you with wonder. Your efforts to learn more about it and its people will lead you into peculiar situations, from which there is pretty sure sign of your extracting yourself through the innocent working of your native wit. If this fails, you must resort to psycho-analysis.
According to Evangeline Adams you are destined to be "sensitive, sympathetic, and agreeable," and to "make an excellent companion and mate," unselfish and generous to a fault. Under all your stages of greatness you will occupy. You will have little difficulty in adjusting yourself to the progressive undertakings you undertake. Your character and physical make-up are flexible; so you will have little difficulty in adjusting yourself to the progressive stages of greatness you will occupy.

Through the haze of the years, the light of your star shines you surrounded by small children. Whether you are in the character of mother or teacher, it is impossible to tell, but the affection between you and them makes you a great influence for good in their lives.

Justice makes you well-fitted for the position of chief judge in a blindfold test, and sincerity makes you put body and soul into anything you undertake. It can't all be blamed on stars in a case like this. Jack wasn't a star sent from heaven; she's just a little bit of heaven herself. A future of dancing, teaching, dramatics, and matrimony is all mapped out for you; so you need not plan any more. Your life will not be a dull one, for yourself or for those about you.
A profound mind, with a great love for research and the ability to carry knowledge and inspiration to those who are less fortunate. Your talent should be expended in teaching. Thus your horoscope reads, and your record in college and in the schoolroom verifies it.

Herein the stars indicate a career in musical and social fields. However quiet you may be, your power to convince is very high, and therefore you need never count in groups of four the years as they roll by. Your reputation for domestic arts makes safe your future.

You are a terribly earnest person. It's really a difficulty for you to become frivolous. For the addition of charm and attractiveness to your make-up, we suggest you cultivate a little more flippancy in your views of life. Could you try out for the role of jester in the May Day court?

CARGOES

"The ship is yours. And when you come back——"

URS!

Breathlessly came that first bright argosy. Something new—something rare—shaped to man's best strength and placed at our command, a thing alive, making the waves give place.

One last straining look we flung after long familiar things. Then, eagerly turning our backs, we stared at the immensity of all before us. What will it bring? Shall we not go to meet it—whatever it may be? We ventured a step away from the protecting rail, and all immensity seemed to advance a step toward us. We gasped with the first sharp sting of spray. Then we suddenly loved this life that is our ship.

Lifted high, we chose our star, masts, crew. Silently we shaped the splendid bows to stand the beating of waves that no land can ever check. Gladly we accepted maps prepared by other seekers with other ships, but ever sought for ourselves the way yet uncharted, mystic. Only skies and ship bound us.

Then, as tumultuously and endlessly as the waves, came events that welded our affections to this ship of ours. Old girl-new girl wedding, old girl-new girl game, receptions, frolics, plays, and the christening of the good ship "Alma." We faced our work cheerfully, that this new possession of ours might proudly enter any port.

Then suddenly that harbor that had seemed so far away loomed large before us. Vacation! Half-forgotten land touched strangely feet accustomed to staunch timbers.

For most of us the urge to see our trip through brought us back again, loth to stop until the last sail was packed and covered. The ropes pulled more easily to our hands; the wheel turned more surely under the firmer touch. But we missed the ones left behind. What regrets we may have had we lost in the eagerness to help the fumbling new hands to carry on. Could they but know the gladness of pushing ahead, of feeling the freshness of winds that whipped at the sails straining with the fulness! And the ease of companionship after tasks were completed—walks up and around decks, playing “Two Gone” with green banners, shouts, and laughs.

More quickly than sliding down the rigging came the second port. More easy the return to ship. And suddenly a consciousness of the merry, bubbling wake felt by our vessel. This ocean would remember us after we had cleaved it apart. How many other ships would see that ever-broadening path we left? Will they dare to follow? Then we must make that slight strip lead straight into the sun’s glow. Our “little sisters” must find in it the courage and ideals that are found in the hardness of the machinery below the beauty of the white spread of canvas and shining decks. We must set them the example of beauty in hardest action.

The third port! And then home again, swaying in with every sail flying, the brasses shining, creamy foam curling around our bows, and all hands on deck—bringing with us memories of each day lived to its fullest, tasks done, friendships won, ceremonies made solemn with caps and gowns, plans for future trips. And though each separate glory may have faded, the memory of each has played her part in shaping the sailor. Standing high, feeling the beauty of all land and sky and sea spread ahead, yet the mariner can feel the low, steady thump of the engine, the security of well-shaped bows. Yet can be heard the friend shouting from below, “Come down!” Suddenly comes the remembered admonition, “And when you come back—” We have come back. We have only one thing to say: “The trip was good!” Each sailor echoes and re-echoes the words, “The trip was good!”

And we have found it good.

November

This is a season of dulling skies,
Of breathless hush as the autumn dies.

Over the sere brown fields is spread,
Little by little, the pall of the dead.

Pale yellow sunlight stains the earth,
Jaundiced touches of unseemly mirth.

Like death-bed drapes, the heavy-hung haze
Muffles the farewell that saddens these days.

Pale yellow butterflies languidly rise
Like the soul of the year as it silently dies.

"What we know here is very little, but what we are ignorant of is immense . . . ."

That star's at a distance of ten billion miles;
But who put it there, and what keeps it in place?
I found the bare statement in one of my files—
"That star's at a distance of ten billion miles."
But no information on how many trials
Were made before it was judged fit for the space.
That's star's at a distance of ten billion miles;
But who put it there, and what keeps it in place?

Sophomore History

OMETIME somewhere someone warned: “Looking back is the first sign of old age.” Be that as it may, we can at least comfort ourselves that we are growing old together. Anyway, who wants to trade new dreams just now for fond memories?

It seems only yesterday that Blue-Stone Hill blinked and winked a welcome to you and me. Yes, we were bewildered—just like Alice in Wonderland, for it was indeed a strange and wonderful land to us.

Ah, you are laughing. Perhaps you are remembering how pitifully small two hands and two eyes seemed. Yes, even two little ears were very inadequate, while one poor mind was only a needle in a haystack. We can not forget all the lectures and meetings. Woe unto us if we forgot our little purple books or program cards. Even a traveler with a guidebook, a road map, and a dozen conflicting signposts could not have felt more at loss.

However, our inferiority complex soon became a passing fad and we “Freshies” made our début amid cheers and shouts at the New Girl-Old Girl Basketball game. Never had we appeared so enthusiastic. When we showed H. T. C. what all good sports are made of, we began to ruffle our feathers. One beautiful October evening a “Fresh” blooming bride walked down the worn path to say, “I do.” Then we fairly strutted like vain peacocks.

It was not until we signed the student government pledge that we came down to earth and fully realized ourselves a part of the college life.

Our path was illumined, too, by the first Y. W. candle light service. As the beautiful strains of “Follow the Gleam” rose from the human circle, we Freshmen truly felt ourselves the “little sisters of the campus.”

We can never forget, either, the teas, receptions, dances, and parties. How they made us forget—not quite—that queer feeling located just not anywhere but everywhere.

I suppose we studied some, but who remembers when or how much? At any rate, exams arrived, passed, and a truce was duly signed for three whole months.

At last Christmas came—the most longed-for day of all the year. Gay and light (I should say light-hearted, for time had faithfully done its work in avoir-dupois) we bade each other, “Bon Voyage.” Then we started for home.

Alas, all pleasant things must come to an end. Soon we were back on campus, buzzing like busy bees.
Do you remember how one spring evening the people of Harrisonburg were suddenly alarmed when a troop of eager girls ventured forth for the first time at evening, armed with new privileges?

Another red-letter day flaunts itself on our calendar. I need to mention only the date—May 15. Caps and gowns gave evidence of the dignity and the significance of the occasion. To us it seems that we as a class dedicated our lives to our Alma Mater. We can not help feeling that Wilson Hall and we as a class belong together in the annals of H. T. C. To us this building will stand as a memorial not only to a great man but to our own “classhood.”

One May morning the campus was awakened bright and early by the calls of milkmaids and the mooing of cows. Our Class Day had dawned with bonnets, aprons, and milk-pails galore. Red and white reigned that day with all the pomp and splendor the “Freshies” could display. After “It Can’t Be Done” was given, tired eyes closed on a happy and successful day.

Vacation! “Put away your books and pencils” was never more joyfully sung. A few tears were shed, but even the best of friends must part.

Three happy months sped by on wings. Once again we turned our faces schoolward, but this time with an awakened dignity. Do you remember how grown-up we felt with a little sister tucked somewhere about?

It seems to me that we have lived for just one day—March 5—our second Class Day. We have been hardy Freshmen, but now we are lucky Sophomores. Do you remember how we walked beneath the horseshoe—just for luck? how we wore a rabbit foot—just for luck? and how we looked for four-leaf clovers—just for luck? Suppose we shut our eyes and wish—just for luck.

Sophomores, we leave each other soon. Some will return in the fall; others will seek their work out in life. But wherever we may be as years slips into year, let us not change “old friends for new” or forget our Alma Mater. With our goals before us, heads up, and memories locked deep within our hearts, let us travel upward, onward always.

—HILDA HISEY

"And is this our boat? My, how times have changed! I shall never forget the old boat I made that trip in back in 1931 and 1932—twenty years ago. Yes, it was twenty years ago that we completed our first voyage. There were 141 of us that made the trip that year. There were still about a hundred who were staying on board for two more years.

"Why, you were with us too, Miss Janet Rebecca. You were only a baby then, and who ever would have thought that twenty years later I should accompany the eminent Miss Hanson to Berlin to address the World Court on 'Why We Have Had Peace for Twenty Years and Shall Have It for Twenty More.' Oh, Janet Rebecca, it had been so wonderful traveling with you in your lecture tours over the U. S.! The best part of all, I think, was seeing again those girls who were on that trip with me back in 1932.

"The most wonderful thing was seeing old Harrisonburg again. Why, I should have thought it was the new U. S. or World Capital if I hadn't recognized old Wilson Hall standing there just as majestic as on May 15, 1931. Dr. Duke's idea of developing it into a great five-fold institution was surely realized. Wasn't it great, seeing Dr. Converse honorary president of the whole system and Mrs. Cook his assistant and advisor? Just think of Harrisonburg State Teachers College as now having a teachers college, a medical college, an academic college, a home economics college, and a business college. And Elizabeth Moore is dean of the teachers college, with so many of our 1932 class on her staff—Dorothy Cromwell, Elizabeth Morgan, Karena Dryden, Mary Helms, and Elizabeth Craig all back at their Alma Mater and following the old teaching profession.

"I was surely surprised to see Catherine Booton as dean of the academic college, with Virginia Goodrick teaching astronomy, Dorothy Fox teaching archeology, Jane Miller supervising Greek and Hebrew, and Mattie Wright head of the philosophy department.

"To think that Dot Williams fell for a doctor so hard that she turned 'medical' and now heads the medical college there! At that rate, many of our old class must have fallen for doctors, for Minnie Baylor, Winnie Rolley, Grace Butler, Josie Gammon, Jacqueline Faulkner, Augusta Baker, and Emily Camper are all in the nursing profession. It seems Alma Bean went there for treatment, and fell in love with and married the knee doctor.

"Isn't it queer that the heads of all these college departments should be members of the 1932 class? But I'm not surprised, for the things we learned from Dr. Huffman, Miss Seeger, Miss Lanier, and Miss Aiken were bound to make us great. Yes, Hazel Ashwell is heading the business school and sends out such expert typists that there are no eligible bosses left. And Courtney Dickerson, as head of the home economics school, helps many girls to find the detour to a man's heart (through his stomach). Some of those who were helped in this way were Mary Coleman, Ethel Obenshain, Elsie Tinsman, Marian Torrence, Anne Chadwick, Georgie Chine, Mildred Dressler, and Hazel Bazzarre, who are all happily married, and still pleasing their husbands with luscious pies and cakes. It was good to know, too, that the plans for the twelve new dormitories and six new administration buildings were drawn by Meelheim, Sifford, and Argenbright, architects. Gladys Julian and Isabel Battenfield became quite famous when they sculptured a large, new statue of Joan of Arc for Harrison Hall.
"But, Janet Rebecca, weren't you surprised to see the old Frog Pond made into that fashionable summer resort, with Edith Bruce and Geraldine Rose as joint hostesses? Honestly, I nearly died, though, when I saw Anne Salmon spending her honeymoon at 'Frog Pond Lodge' and Mildred Dawson there with her husband and three sets of twins. And, you know, Anne told me that Ruth Watt is prima donna of the Metropolitan Opera Company and Louise Thweatt has joined the Ziegfeld Follies.

"Wasn't the old training school queer-looking, made over into a home for Harrisonburg College Cats?—dear Mrs. Ashby and Campus Tom being cared for so tenderly by Mildred Simpson as day nurse, and by Grace Williams and Kitty Funk as night nurses.

"I didn't think so many of our class would fall for the big city lights and skyscrapers, but when we were in Chicago I thought they were having a class reunion. Margaret Eure has founded an outstanding child-centered school there. She first started the institution with just her own eight children. She has as members of her staff Thuya Arrington, Lucy Chappell, and Elizabeth Wilkinson. We were 'plenty surprised' to see Mildred Garrett and Marie Day demonstrating yo-yo tops on the main street in Chicago.

"I shall never forget when they had that big accident on Lake Shore Drive in Chicago and Mary Lawson, Nancy Marino, and Blanche Pride came driving the ambulances at break-neck speed. They said they learned to drive when the Chino-Japanese war was going on, in hopes of getting a position, and liked it so much that they have set up ambulance stations in several cities. Margaret Adams, Carolyn Baldwin, and Anne Drummond are running the Great All-American Ambulance Service Co., Inc., in Detroit, and Lucy Hubbard, Virginia Greenwood, and Gladys Garth have a branch office of the same concern in New Orleans. And speaking of drivers, did you know that Hazel Stevens, Mildred Witt, and Nellie Wright are driving cabs for Amos and Andy's Fresh Air Taxicab Co.?

"The best dance I've been to in a long time was the one we attended in Chicago, when the High Hat orchestra played under the direction of Sylvia Grim. And wasn't Polly Perryman knocking that old piano? And Kay Butts can surely play the saxophone. Maxine Compher did put the rhythm in with those drums too! Helen Rush sang Olga Burtiner's new song hit, 'Thanks for the Autogiro Ride.' I was delighted to see Sarah Frances Gayle with her husband at the dance.

"It was good, too, to find Virginia Shank in Detroit demonstrating new Ford 'straight twelves' with rumble seats. Remember she took us to the Shaver-Smith Theatre. Old Virginia Dorset lived up to her H. T. C. record, and gave us a swell tap dance that evening. Eleanor Baker, the great brides-clothes stylist (you know she had experience being a bride at H. T. C.) presented a wonderful fashion show that night. Grey Hinebaugh, Eunice Meeks, Mildred Etheridge, Beatrice Dameron, and Emma Carr as models certainly make the men give up single blessedness.

"I was so sorry to see Dorothy Gresham and Dorothy Rollins serving a term in the penitentiary for hanging Depression. But I guess they are getting plenty of good attention, with Mary Alice Wade and Anne Davies as head wardens of the Pen. And say, Janet Rebecca, do you know what they told me?—That Thelma Adams, Madge Heldreth, and Sue Pierce are all police-women, and Mildred Lewis is head of the air-traffic control, with Lois Bradshaw, Alma Shumate, Christine Clark and Mildred Burfoot on her force.

"You could have knocked me down with a pin when I picked up the New York Times last night and saw that Vada Steele is editor and Ruth Western assistant editor, while Mae Thurston has charge of the advice-to-young-lovers column.
"Our class surely had some inventive geniuses in it too. Elizabeth Warren has made a name for herself and a place in the hearts of all school children by inventing the great knowledge gum. It can be gotten in all brands—history, English, and Latin—and you have only to chew of it to absorb the contents of that subject. Remember we saw her large factory in New York, with Elva Fleming, Margaret Mears, Margaret Hansbarger, Virginia Hale, and Mary Grove all holding high position in it, and Ethel Lovett, Latisha Inge, Frances Nevitt, Garland Riley, and Dorothy Ramsey all traveling demonstrators of the great knowledge-giving chewing material.

"You know, Janet Rebecca, when I was getting a manicure at Virginia Eubank's Beauty Parlor in New York, she told me that Lois Bishop had become quite famous through the invention of a collapsible elevator for passage up and down the double-decker beds. She said that through her eminent saleswomen, Ruby Virginia Bishop, Lera Bowman, Virgie McFarland, Margaret Pratt, and Julia Evans, every college in the South had installed double-decker beds with elevator ascension facilities.

"And guess what else she told me.—That back in 1942 Mary Cloe was elected 'Miss America' and ever since she has spent her time looking at the pictures taken of her, reading the newspaper write-ups about her, and lecturing on 'How H. T. C. Gave Me the Miss America Figure.' These people that live on reputation! You knew, didn't you, that Susie Massie, Catherine Martz, and Mary Louise Roark all won places in the California Olympics back in 1932 and now make their living by charging ten cents for people to shake their hands?

"While I was waiting for you in the Grand Central Station this morning, I found out from Minnie Sue Hedrick, who has charge of the information bureau there, that many of our class live in Europe and Asia now. Elva Brock is in a hospital in Denmark, having over-exerted her muscles in an attempt to master Danish exercises. Myrtle Estes went to Spain to study guitar and fell in love and married a Spanish nobleman. Edith and Ruby Haden, Mary McConchie, and Hallie Irene Morris have been conducting an excavation party in Egypt. Minnie Sue said it had been reported that they had discovered six golden cities.

"Margaret Mauzy became wealthy by introducing the new game of 'Pig' into the French schools. Anne Sanford and Dorothy Shrum are giving joint soap-box lectures on 'The Twentieth Anniversary of the Washington Bicentennial.' And, do you know, she said that Kathleen Snapp, Helen Turpin, and Dorris Vance, who had studied under Einstein after leaving Harrisonburg, have discovered a wonderful new theory which even surpasses his, the 'Theory of Convulativity'?

"Say, I do want to take a bath in one of those grand Turkish bath houses which Leta Hines, Josephine Hinkle, and Hazel Kline set up in Turkey. It is said they are so fine that even the Sultan comes down for a bath every other Saturday night.

"One of the most alarming things she said was that Elizabeth Read, Lucile Bailey, Mary Fuller, and Gladys Grabee have become gypsies and are now traveling over Italy in gondolas telling fortunes. But Janet Rebecca, Eloise Burton has become a human fly and climbs the leaning tower of Pisa three times a day.

"Really I never thought that 141 people could do so many different things. I do hope they've all found the right callings and are happy. As for me, I never wanted but two things—one was to keep track of my friends, and now I know where every member of the old class is, and the other was to travel; and being the chaperon of an eminent person like you, Miss Janet Rebecca, surely has given me opportunity for touring. What do you think?"

Spring is such a cool thing.
It is grey, and green, and dark blue, and the blue-grey
One sees when smoke curls aloft from an old brick chimney.
It is the grey of twigs and dead branches,
The green of new buds showing tiny tips.
It is the cool one feels at sunset
At the close of a February day.
It is the blue-grey of the Alleghanies
And the green of near new grass.
Spring is cool, and fresh, and sweet
With the odor of a grey rain-cloud.
It is the deep blue of the rain-washed sky
When the grey cloud has gone.
It is blue and silver, at twilight,
With that dusky tone that makes it so much cooler,
Like a landscape painted in blurred brushes,
Or like the husky, vibrant tones
Of a great singer in a minor key.

The Freshman fleet of more than three hundred little barks, flying the sign of the Dunce Cap and meaning thereby that they are not too wise to learn, launched forth last September. Though usually speeding along before favoring winds, they have sometimes sailed into the teeth of trying gales and have feared to founder in the depths of the unknown.

"Noble vessels are ye all—some of finer build than others and bearing a loftier sail, but noble vessels all of you. Ye are God's workmanship, and with his Spirit for pilot and his Word for chart, the Harbor is sure."
Portrayal of a Pair of Hands

Her hands lay lightly in her lap,
Calmly acceptant of little or much,
Touched by the twilight's gloom to a glow
That shone like the tenderness of their touch.

Once, unperceived, I marked the march
Of a thought as it passed through their slender length:
As though they had found a sudden need
To press for a moment another's strength.
The fingers were lifted, extended and curled
With a yearning reach—till the knowledge grew
That their reach was short and of no avail
And to mutely withdraw was all they could do.

Then they sank like a sigh when a moment elapsed
And lay there quiescent and loosely clasped.

There was a glee club in the school from the first session, which took part in occasional college exercises, and in 1915 it was more definitely organized. This organization was the first college glee club in Virginia to affiliate with the Federation of Music Clubs. It serves as a college choir and frequently gives programs and sacred concerts in the college and in the churches of the community. Public performances off campus include exchange performances with many Virginia colleges, concerts in the high schools of many cities of Virginia, church programs in various cities, participation in state contests and choral festivals, broadcast programs, Apple Blossom Festival in Winchester, and various community organizations of Harrisonburg.

HONORARY MEMBER
Mr. Logan

Since 1919, when the Stratford Literary Society became the Stratford Dramatic Club, it has been customary to give each fall a modern play and later a costume play, and often another program, sometimes consisting of three one-act plays. During these years the Stratfords have produced a variety of dramas, three hundred and seventy-eight characters having been cast. In keeping with the general trend of activities commemorating this bi-centennial anniversary of Washington's birth, the club has presented two dramas depicting him as youth, citizen, and president of his country. Their titles were: "Washington's First Defeat," and "Washington Marches On." Besides these, two plays of more modern type were produced—"Once There Was a Princess," and "Bargains in Cathay."
The purpose of this organization is to foster literary interest and attainment and to encourage creative writing.

In a spirit of helpfulness to artistically inclined students and to the whole campus, the Art Club took its place in the college. The place has grown in importance with an increasing sense of responsibility among its members in the setting of ideals for artistic endeavor.

Actually creative work is sponsored in the making of posters, scenery, floats, and properties for plays and pageants. An appeal to the social interests of the student body is made through carefully planned and prepared dances and chapel programs and informal gatherings. Accomplishment means much to the club, but unreached aspirations lead to its future growth.

The Choral Club was organized for the purpose of encouraging chorus singing on the campus. Membership is open to all freshmen interested in vocal music. There is weekly practice. In the frequent absences of the Glee Club, the Choral Club serves as the college choir.

For the past two years the club has sponsored county and district choral contests in Wilson Hall, and provided the prizes.

The Alpha Literary Society was organized in 1924, with the idea in mind which the motto "Forward," implies: to give every girl in the college a chance to be part of some organization, that she may move forward in literary interests.

It is the Alpha Society in that its secondary aim is to train girls for membership in the other three societies on the campus and to help these other societies to find the girls most interested in literary work and most capable of entering the field.

The Lanier Literary Society, founded on October 8, 1909, was named in honor of the well-loved Southern poet, Sidney Lanier. This society was one of the first to be organized on the campus.

This year the field of study in the Lanier Literary Society has been devoted to the novel and to magazine reviewing. Previously, the study of poetry occupied the majority of the time, but the Laniers are ever broadening their background of work and looking ahead into new literary fields.

When the very foundations of the college were being laid and the elemental policies and traditions taking shape, the Lee Literary Society was organized. The name of Robert Edward Lee was chosen as the embodiment of everything fine and inspirational. Since then the society has lived and grown with the college, seeking always to uphold the standards set by the founders.

This year the Lees have made an intensive study of their constitution, making such revisions as were needed. Interesting and instructive programs have included a study of modern authors and types of poetry. The society was the guest one evening of the Ashby Chapter of the U. D. C., at which time slides of the scene of the World War were shown.

The Page Literary Society, named in honor of Thomas Nelson Page, has endeavored to live up to those ideals which he gave in suggesting the motto quoted above. By celebrating Page day on his birthday, April 23, and presenting programs about him, it keeps alive the appreciation for that great Southern author.

This year, programs for the first quarter were based on a study of the modern magazine; for the second quarter, on poets who are universally loved; and for the third quarter, on poets who are also musicians.

The Harrisonburg Varsity hockey team has played only one varsity game this year, the rest of the time being devoted to preparation for the Virginia Hockey Tournament, held here in October.

The one game, which was played at Westhampton College, was a real test for both teams, the final score being 1-1.

Kitty Bowen, captain of this year's team, will be succeeded by Mary Haga.

Basketball

Opening the 1932 basketball season with a game with the team from Shepherd College, Shepherdstown, West Virginia, the Harrisonburg team emerged victorious with a score 50-12. Our way to a year without defeat seemed clear, with victories over Westhampton, 57-10, over Farmville, 32-25, and over the Savage School of Physical Education from New York, 35-15.

A trip to East Stroudsburg and Lebanon Valley, in Pennsylvania, had just been postponed, when Blackstone College challenged the Harrisonburg team to a game to decide the champion team of Virginia. The game, one of the most exciting battles ever seen on the Harrisonburg court, proved fatal to H. T. C., the first defeat in four years. The Blackstone team, confident of success, won after a hard struggle, with a score of 31-30. The rabbit’s foot, worn by Mary Farinholt, captain of the 1932 team, will next year decorate Frances Neblett, captain-elect of the team of 1933.

Swimming

Swimming is the one sport on campus that is popular from September to June. Class swimming, which ends with a big water-meet, is the great event in this sport. After class swimming, life-saving classes are open to all who wish to become Red Cross life-savers and examiners. Even those people who have never learned to swim are given an opportunity to learn in beginners’ classes.

In the spring the tennis courts are filled with players from early morning until dark. In this sport, also, class competition is keen. The ladder contest to decide the best individual player is another interesting feature.

Beginners in this sport have ample opportunity for instruction.

GOLF

Each year golf becomes more popular with the "old-timers" and also with beginners in the game. The nine-hole course on the campus, with its recent improvements, is never deserted except in bad weather and on Sundays.

Class instruction for beginners affords an opportunity to learn the game.

Both students and faculty members spend much of their spare time enjoying this form of recreation.

Hockey Tournament

The second annual convention of the Virginia Hockey Tournament was held October 30-31 on our field. Most of the visitors were entertained on campus and, with the co-operation of all the students, much was done to make their stay pleasant.

Representatives were present from the college of William and Mary, Hollins College, Sweet Briar College, Randolph-Macon Woman's College, Mary Baldwin College, George Washington University, Westhampton College, Salem College, Salem, North Carolina, and from the Washington City Hockey Club.

As the whole object of the tournament was to get together and learn more about hockey by playing together in a friendly manner, much of the fun came in when mixed teams, composed of players from all colleges, held their games.

The tournament opened Friday afternoon with the following games:

Westhampton vs. William and Mary .................. 5-6
Salem College vs. Mixed Team ........................ 0-2
Sweet Briar vs. Harrisonburg ......................... 2-6

On Friday evening everyone was invited to a movie showing hockey technique, after which there was dancing in the big gym.

The contests started again early Saturday morning with the following games:

William and Mary vs. Harrisonburg .................. 1-3
Sweet Briar vs. Mixed Team .......................... 8-2
Westhampton vs. Mixed Team ........................ 11-0
Sweet Briar Club vs. Salem .......................... 1-2

After the hockey luncheon at twelve-thirty, the alumnae played against the coaches—winning with a score of 2-0.

The big event of Saturday afternoon and the climax of the whole tournament was the game between the Washington City Hockey Club and the picked team composed of outstanding players from all teams. The score of this fine game was 6-5 in favor of the picked team. Our college was fortunate in having several of its players chosen for this team. Three of these—Mary Farinholt, Kitty Bowen, and Frances Rolston—played in the game, while Anna Lyons Sullivan and Ercelle Reade were also named for the team.

SEPTEMBER

21—Anchors aweigh! On this day the good ship Student Body set forth on its nine-months voyage. Veteran members of the crew welcomed each other heartily, and newly recruited seamen were given their berths aboard ship. Laughter dried up any signs of wet weather about the eyes on departure as the ship safely cleared the Cape of Farewells and entered the Bay of Bright Hopes.

23—The Y. W. welcomed old and new crew members with a party in the Big Gym.

25—A reception at Hill Crest by the commanding officer made the new seamen an official part of the ship's social life.

26—Lucky Freshmen! They enjoyed still another party. This time it was in the Little Gym, and the hostesses were the House Councilors of their dormitories. Both hostesses and guests shared in the entertainment.

30—An important date. The crew had the pleasure of hearing Professor Barr, of the University of Virginia, speak in praise of teaching, at the quarterly Convocation exercises.

The Seniors attained their full rank after three years of work when Dr. Duke granted them their privileges. The new girls were joined by bonds of love and friendship to the old ones in the beautiful ceremony of the Old Girl-New Girl Wedding. The bride and her attendants were such that the groom and his friends were proud to receive them.

OCTOBER

2—Another side of Old Girl-New Girl relations was shown when the two groups met and battled in the first basketball game of the year. Varsity triumphed with a score of 35 to 15, but the New Girls were good sports and did some fine cheering.

5—Juniors received their privileges and recognized the fact that they were upperclassmen at last.

7—Vows of loyalty and service were made by old and new girls at the student government pledge-signing service. There is nothing quite so impressive as the sense of personal responsibility which the simple signing of a name gives to one.

8—Each with a tiny flame from the light of the world flickering in her hands, the Y. W. C. A. members, old and new, exchanged pledges for the new year at the annual Service of Lights.

16—Good food must have been served at this party; the Frances Sale Club entertained new home economics students in the Day Students Room.

22—In spite of its pride and awe, the student body was able to enjoy the visit of the State Board of Education, especially the speeches of its members in chapel.
23—If we hadn’t already had our share, we should be overcome with envy of the new girls. On this night they were given another party—by the Blue-Stone Cotillion Club, in the Little Gym. It looked like exodus to Miami Beach, for all its characteristics were there—beach pajamas, life guards, and all.
30—The beginning of the hockey tournament turned the campus upside down in its complete absorption in the sport. Johnston Hall dwellers relinquished their dormitory to the visitors, and the Senior Dining Room was practically theirs completely. The games themselves were thrillingly interesting, and scores proved our claim to one of the best teams in the state.
31—As a wind-up of the week-end’s fun, the Athletic Association’s Hallowe’en party gave everyone a chance to dress up and dance. Ghosts and witches couldn’t keep away a big crowd.

NOVEMBER

4—Future fun caused immediate expense as class treasurers wheeled our dues from us.
5—We had no idea plays were so lively away back long ago, until we went to see “The Beggar’s Opera,” a Lyceum number. Such dances, such songs, such a charming heroine, and such a gallant hero!
6—A tea for the visitors from Columbia University added a touch of formal distinction to our social self-respect.
7—Jackson, as jolly as ever, opened its doors to the student body and faculty in its open house. Who said Freshmen were downhearted?
11—Once more we marched to martial music and wore red, white, and blue as we commemorated the end of the war in an Armistice Day parade.
13—The editors-in-chief and business managers of the Breeze and Schoolma’am traveled to the Intercollegiate Press Association at Lynchburg, but they missed the Athletic Association play, “The Truth As Is,” which revealed everything, past, present, and future about our revered faculty and many of the most respected members of the student body.
18—Organization of the Freshman class through election of officers was followed by a party for the new officers in the Tea-room. The class may have been new, but it was certainly wise in its choice.
20—Flashing swords, romance, and a rose flickered on the screen when “Cyrano de Bergerac” was seen up in Reed Hall.
26—Thanksgiving brought only one day holiday this year; so most of us were together at the big turkey dinner. It looked as if a new kind of turkey had been introduced, from the number of drumsticks that were served.
27—A concert by the Harrisonburg Municipal Band filled the auditorium with good stirring music.
28—The last hockey game of the season gave the Varsity another victory over the Alumnae team, 6-0.

DECEMBER

4—The Stratfords brought royalty and ragged riches into an American village in their first play of the year, “Once There Was a Princess.”
5—The annual staff spread out wares from all over the world at its bazaar.
Christmas presents were picked up for a song; and food restored energy spent in dancing. Like all street fairs, this one provided entertainment. For their part in it, the Juniors received a reward.
9—Landlubbers, changed to capable swimmers, demonstrated their ability in the Beginners’ Swimming Meet. Not one was drowned in the attempt.
10—A music recital was followed by the faculty tree-decorating party in the two dining rooms.
11—Senior Day brought out the capped and gowned Seniors to receive the respect paid them by the rest of the college. A party in the big gym was their offering to the festivities on campus.
12—Jackson and Ashby treated themselves to Christmas parties.
13—Sunday afternoon brought the Christmas season close to us when the Glee Club and the men’s chorus from town sang a program of Christmas songs in a beautiful vesper service.
14—Full of the wonder of the Nativity was the pageant given by the Y. W. C. A.
15, 16, 17—Exams plunged us into frantic labor, lightened only by the thought of home at its end.
18—One exam to take as the Special whistled, and then—we were off!!

JANUARY

4—Here we were united again after a long vacation ashore. Marvelous tales of adventure filled the ears.
6—Grace, rhythm, power, and beauty: The Ted Shawn Dancers moved across the stage and left us breathless at so much easy, lovely motion.
8, 9—Two nights of class basketball would have made some people believe feeling was strong between the classes. It was, but only to the extent that each wished its team to win.
13—After a week-end’s rest, the deciding game of the series was played. The Seniors won, and every other class joined in the rejoicing.
18—The land of make-believe and little people came to the stage when Tony Sarg’s Marionettes acted out for us “Alice in Wonderland” and “The Rose and the Ring.”
23—Shepherd’s College from Shepherdstown met our Varsity and were fairly vanquished 50-12 in basketball.
27—Again we gathered together our spare pennies and took them to the class treasurers—class pay day.

FEBRUARY

5—They claimed they were the luckiest class on campus, and when we saw the kind of members who belonged to the Sophomore group, we all agreed. Horseshoes, clovers, and rabbit-feet were picturesque but not necessary for that class’s success.
6—The Art Club turned the Little Gym into a red and black decorated spot, where they provided music for dancing, refreshments, and entertainment at their annual ball.
10—A distinguished speaker, Dr. Duke of Harrisonburg, spoke in chapel on Lee and his connection with the Washington and Lee University.

11—Election day saw the polls well patronized from 8 o’clock to 6. No lack of civic spirit was felt, for the whole student body turned out to cast its vote.

12—Drama week was initiated on campus by the Stratford tea for the faculty.

13—The new Stratford members showed their talent in a pair of one-act plays: “Bargains in Cathay,” and “Washington’s First Defeat.” Both were very much enjoyed by the large crowd that attended the matinee.

Varsity basketball continued with another game won by Harrisonburg from Westhampton with a score of 57 to 9.

16—“Music in the air.” The Glee Club presented a program of solo and group songs and added, just to show how versatile they are, several charming folk-dances.

18—At an open meeting of the A. A. U. W., Miss Deering spoke on education in the Near East.

The Glee Club left for Richmond and Norfolk.

19—Proving that we were all wrong in our mental pictures of Alaska, Mr. Sergent of the U. S. Geological Survey told us that it was warm enough there to be quite comfortable, and he showed pictures that certainly upheld his word.

20—Invaders from the North were repulsed with heavy losses when the Savage basketball team was defeated 35-15.

22—We received an unexpected present on Washington’s birthday when a half-holiday was declared in order that we might attend the program in his honor in Wilson Hall.

26—All four classes met again as rivals in an inter-class swimming meet, in which the Seniors won.

27—Evening dresses, finger waves, dance cards, and men. The formal dance sponsored by the Cotillion Club was voted a big success by all who attended it.

MARCH

1—The second election day brought out as big and as thoughtful a crowd of voters as did the first.

3—An old rival, Farmville, fell before the power of the H. T. C. basketball sextet, who rolled up a score of 32 to their 25.

4—Another reminder of the fact that it is Washington’s bicentennial year was given in the movie “George Washington,” presented in Wilson Hall.

5—The Freshman basketball team took a little trip of its own. It went to Stuart Hall and won the game 48-28. An enthusiastic crowd of supporters were in attendance.

11—Money bags and gold dollars were the signs of the Juniors’ wealth of good spirits. At their party in the evening they joyfully killed Depression and acclaimed Prosperity.

12—The Freshman class showed their affection for their big sister class by the nicest kind of a party.
14, 15, 16—Into the doldrums again. Here we were caught in exams.
18—The campus was livened up once more by the Alumnae minstrel show.
19—Our second basketball defeat in four years came when a post-schedule game with Blackstone College resulted in the score 31-30 in favor of our visitors.
23—The combined ceremonies of quarterly Convocation and installation of new student government officers made an impressive hour of chapel exercises. The speaker of the occasion was Dr. Charles Smith of Roanoke College. A formal dinner, followed by dancing, brought a pleasant day to an end.

24—Another set of new officers were introduced to their duties when the retiring Y. W. cabinet passed its light to the new one, which will function for the next year.
25—Tooting of horns and roaring of engines marked the departure of all but fifty students on a six-day Easter vacation. Those remaining found that even a deserted campus offers lots of possibilities for amusement.
31—The return of the Easter travelers put the campus on its same old basis, and classes were resumed as usual.

APRIL

4—The first of the life-saving tests were given. Won't the hard-working swimmers be proud when they can wear the emblem?
6—The tables were turned! Dining room girls sat at a beautifully arranged banquet table and enjoyed the efforts of campus officers to fill their places as waitresses. The evening brought weary backs, aching feet, and an added respect for those who possess dining-room scholarships.
8—The Stratford costume play, "Washington Marches On," drew an expectant crowd, who were not disappointed in the acting, the costumes, or the play itself.
10—The stately harmony of organ music came from the hands of Miss Kettering's pupils in an organ recital at the Methodist Church.
15—They tried to assume simplicity, but even dunce caps couldn't hide the real worth and wisdom of our youngest class. The Freshmen worked long and hard to make their first day one of the most successful events of the year.

MAY AND JUNE

31, 1—Stormy waters tried the strength of the Senior and Sophomore vessels. This struggle decided whether they could reach port or not. Such exams!
2, 3—The storm moved on and crossed the path of the Juniors and Freshmen. With steady work, they passed the hurricane area as successfully as the Seniors and Sophomores.
5—With reverent hearts, the graduating classes bowed in worship for the last time together.
6—The ceremony of handing down banners marked the ascent of each class one step higher in rank, while the bonds of the honey-suckle chain made them all one unit.
7—Saddest and sweetest of moments. For some, landing, only to re-embark on the sea of life. For others, a three-months shore leave and then a return to life aboard ship, but without many who have made the journey pleasant.
Formal Dinner and Cotillion Dance
College Costuming

The average H. T. C. girl has at her command several distinct ways of getting dressed. When she jumps up at seven-thirty and has to get to an eight o'clock class, her technique is vastly different from that employed when she arises at eight-thirty and dresses at leisure for a ten or eleven o'clock class or, possibly, for no class at all. In the first instance, it is a case of throwing on as rapidly as possible the first garments she sees. In the second, there is time for deliberation in the choice of clothes, time for elaborate attention to the hands, face, and hair, and time even for a visit to the tea-room to help that empty, caved-in feeling that comes about half-past nine when she has not been to breakfast.

Every once in a while she goes to a tea. For such an occasion she dresses with care, but she generally knows with almost no hesitation just what to wear, and the process is not a long one.

The time the Harrisonburg girl is at her best in dressing is when she wants to go downtown. This does not refer to the quick trip for a definite purpose, in morning or afternoon, when the method is simple. If she has on a skirt and sweater she adds a coat or jacket and beret to her costume, and goes. Her genius shows when she is going downtown for pleasure. The technique is somewhat the same as is used when she is going to a dance, but she gets more practice in going downtown.

Someone calls to her, “Frances, go down the street with me.”

“When?” she calls back

“In just a little while.”

“All right,” she replies, and fixes her mind on the question of what to wear.

A look in her closet reveals that she has absolutely nothing suitable. Is she discouraged or bothered? Not at all. She immediately wonders what her friends have. She goes into a room, talks about clothes with a neighbor, is given a choice of dresses, and selects one. Or maybe she goes to several rooms before she finds the right dress. Now that she has the dress, she needs a coat; so she repeats the procedure, and finally gets just the coat she wants. She hears that Virginia has a hat that will go beautifully with the coat, but on going to Virginia’s room she finds no one there. After a prolonged search in the closet, she finds the hat in a box under the bed. It is a perfect fit. Her costume is at last complete, as she has gloves and shoes. She is ready to stroll downtown, take in a show, linger in Candyland, flirt with—or be scornful of—every boy she sees, according to her taste, and hurry all the way back to avoid missing dinner. At dinner she sees Virginia, who says, “Oh, Frances, I didn’t have a thing to wear downtown this afternoon, and I took a dress, hat, and coat from your closet. I hope you don’t mind.”

A Limited Allowance—The Fun of It

I have heard about the depression?—Not only have I heard about it, but I know from experience—a very concrete experience in the form of a limited allowance. Yet this isn't so bad, after all, though it involves three points: first—careful budgeting, second—sticking to the budget, and third—a philosophical attitude. A lean budget is rather easy to make, but the hard part is standing by it without getting peevish.

Two of us, after carefully considering the merits and demerits of the movie program for this week, finally decided on one and went to town to see it.

The picture was very good, but we saw advertised one much better. Can we see it? No—because our budget does not allow another movie until next month, when the momentous question must be decided all over again.

The deciding is lots of fun. It proves your own and your room-mate's disposition, develops debating ability, and usually ends in a compromise, with both sides happy at the bright prospect ahead.

A trip to town isn't complete without the traditional visit to the Soda-Sandwich Shoppe. Before leaving the college, we renew our resolution to order economically and wisely. We first unanimously vote for a lemon dope (small), and then eye each other to see which one is going to spend a second nickel to buy something to be eaten along with the drink. Thus a new problem presents itself, and again a compromise is made—one of us spending an extra nickel for something divisible by two (maybe a box of Nabs) and the other resolving that, next time, her other nickel shall provide doughnuts, say, which come two for five. So we're both happy that we can get so much for so little, and we enjoy our feast as if it were a big Marshmallow Sundae.

By the way, when hungering for those delicacies which cost over fifteen cents, remember that they tend to produce lateral curves, and you'll be consoled immediately. I've tried it, and it works.

Every college girl has a personal correspondence, which may mean one letter a week or a dozen. We fuss if we don't get letters, and yet they're expensive, because they have to be answered. Stamps and stationery—two articles we must have, yet can't keep. In solving the stamp problem, my roommate and I have developed the use of a penny-catching envelope. Into this we drop every penny which we have left in change, and these are converted into stamps. It's really a nice system, and keeps one from buying a stick of chewing-gum or a one-cent piece of candy.

Of course, there are other ways of stretching a dollar to twice its normal size. For instance, buy darning thread instead of a new pair of hose. That may get you into the practice of darning before you have hose other than your own to mend.

You've probably guessed by now that I'm Scotch, but it's only this limited allowance which is bringing that element forward, and I'm not minding the strain at all. In fact, I'm beginning to think that having Scotch ancestors is a valuable asset in this year 1932.

George Bernard Keezell
The Father of This College
In Memoriam

Whereas, In the allwise providence of God, our friend and counsellor, Honorable George Bernard Keezell, was removed by death on June 22, 1931, be it resolved:

First, That the State Teachers College at Harrisonburg, Virginia, has suffered a serious loss;

Second, That the outstanding services of Mr. Keezell in the establishment of this institution, as a member of the first board of trustees, and in his continued friendship and support to the end of his life, entitle him to be recognized through all future years as the father of this college;

Third, That it is deemed appropriate that, at the earliest suitable time, Mr. Keezell be honored on this campus with some fitting and permanent memorial;

Fourth, That inasmuch as Mr. Keezell himself never failed to give large credit to his late wife, Mrs. Belle Hannah Keezell, for the success of his efforts in behalf of this institution and also in behalf of education throughout Virginia, we hereby accord her due recognition along with him; and we also hereby acknowledge the continued loyalty to the college of his daughter, Mrs. J. F. Simms, who was one of our first students;

Fifth, That we not only recognize the pre-eminent services of Mr. Keezell in the founding and building of this institution, but also accord him his due rank among the outstanding Virginians of the past generation, and pay tribute to the high order of his statesmanship through many years in the Virginia General Assembly;

Sixth, That a copy of these resolutions be entered upon the faculty minutes; that another copy be transmitted to Mr. Keezell's sons and daughters; and that they also be printed in the college periodicals, The Virginia Teacher, The Breeze, and The Schoolma'am.
Loves

He lies who says there is but one love only—
    He is poor for having known but one,
I've heard a score of loves come knocking
    At my door when day was done.

One love brought laughter on his parted lips,
    Another tears of pain and bitter truth;
A third flung gain and glory at my feet;
    Another built a shrine to youth.

I heaped my joy upon their outstretched hands,
    And garnered beauty from their dreamy eyes.—
He is a fool who thinks God's mind so small
    As to conceive but one scant source of paradise.

—Garnet Hamrick
The Requiem

The crowd was surging up and down the steps of San Sebastian in the Plaza Marco. Business men, lawyers, priests, women, peasants from the country, were ascending and descending those worn stairs in a constant stream. Flower women stood at each side of the stairway, calling forth their wares to the passing throng. Around the building pigeons whirred and turned, alighting every now and then on the cobbles of the plaza. The brilliant blue sky canopied this little world, and the warm sunshine etched its vivid hues with gold.

At the foot of the stairs in his habitual place stood a small boy of eight or nine years, with a little curly white dog beside him. He had that self-poise, that self-assurance about him that one associates with those who earn their own living. As he drew his bow across the strings of the violin which he held tenderly, the dog watched him with an adoring gaze, head cocked on one side, tail thumping. At his feet lay a little basket, into which an occasional passer-by dropped a coin. When the dog felt that interest was flagging, he would seize the handle of the basket in his teeth and dash around through the crowd, to be greeted with laughs and pats and, sometimes, a coin.

The boy had just finished an aria from Rigoletto. The dog, feeling that his master was being neglected, frisked off with his basket among the passers-by. Suddenly he dashed in front of a tall, dark man who was descending the steps unheedingly until he almost tripped over the dog. With a fierce word he kicked at the little mite and passed on.

The crowd stopped, aghast, as the dog fell with a dull thud almost at the feet of his little master. The boy stopped playing, looked slowly down, and then, with a cry, dropped to his knees.

"Ah, my Mierita, my loved one, Mierita! Can you not hold up your head? Look at me! Ah! can you not even wag your little curled-up tail?" The dog's eyes opened for a minute; one feeble thump sounded on the cobbles, and his eyes flicked shut again.

The boy gathered Mierita tenderly up in his arms and stumbled to his feet. Thrusting his precious violin heedlessly under his arm, he walked with slow steps down the street. His big brown eyes were shining with tears, and he could not trust himself to glance at the little limp creature.

At last the child turned a corner beside a high board fence. He slipped his hand under a plank and, pushing it inward, crept through. Inside, in a tiny plot, was a small, rude shelter, his home. The boy laid his precious burden on the soft green grass. He sat beside him, looking at him for a long time, until the teardrops began to flow quietly down his cheeks. He snatched up his violin and, taking his bow, poured forth his whole soul, his impassioned and fiery spirit, in that last melody for his dog.

As the notes trembled mournfully and beautifully on the air, a passer-by heard, and stopped to discover the source. He, too, knew the loose plank and, swinging it inward, looked through. The music was sobbing of a heart filled with grief. The man stood there thoughtfully, head bowed. Just then, a little white dog came trotting around the corner. The man hesitated an instant until, deftly catching the little creature, he slipped it through the opening. As the child swayed to his playing, the new dog padded softly up to him. Filled with desire, longing, despair, he looked. It was—it was Mierita. Then he hadn't been dead after all! He had just been asleep. The boy dropped his violin and stretched forth his arms longingly. Then—they fell to his side. This was not his friend, his loved and loving comrade! He turned his head slowly. There on the deep green grass lay soft little white Mierita where he had laid him so tenderly.

Slowly, slowly, the child's fingers closed upon his violin, and once again his requiem filled the air.

JUMBLE

The life that I live is a frightful jumble
Of triolets, essays, and such.
Even at night I hear their deep rumble:
The life that I live is a frightful jumble.
I'm sure that my brain will eventually crumble
From trying to get that poetic touch;
The life that I live is a frightful jumble
Of triolets, essays, and such.

THE "VIRGINIANS"

As I stepped into the house, a fearful din burst upon me and, incidentally, almost burst my ear-drums. There wasn't any question in my mind as to the cause of the uproar; I had heard it before. The orchestra was practising! If you have ever heard a group of music-loving—or rather, jazz-loving—adolescents, with no training whatsoever, conduct an orchestra practice, you can realize what my poor mother has been suffering. The rest of the family are usually away, but she must grin and hear it.

One of my younger brothers is a saxophone player in this orchestra; so that is one reason why they choose our house in which to rehearse. Just what they are rehearsing for, I haven't discovered, but from hints of purple velvet music-stand covers, I judge that there are important engagements in the offing.

The older members of our family are, of course, much delighted that my young brother has some interest that will keep him out of mischief, but that it should take this particular form is not an unmixed blessing.

I often feel that I should like to have some close neighbors, but when the orchestra meets, I feel that a kind providence guided us to a house some distance removed from other human habitations. I sometimes wonder why the group doesn't enjoy the hospitality of the homes of other members, but I strongly suspect the reason.

Maybe I have not been trained to appreciate real music. Who knows that there is not an embryonic Sousa here? Anyhow, I shall continue to spend my afternoons away from home.

PROHIBIT DEPRESSION

One kind of prohibition that the United States needs, according to Mr. McLlwraith, is to keep the money from getting "tight."

HOW TO REMEMBER THE MEMORANDUM?

Miss Aydlette: "Oh, Dr. Sawhill, I forgot to bring that money."
Dr. Sawhill: "You should carry a memorandum."
Miss Aydlette: "I tried that, but I couldn't remember where I left it."

GRADING BY THE NORMAL CURVE

Anne Salmond: “Oh, Dr. Frederikson! You can't do that. Nobody will have time to study, and it will just ruin your curve.”

“THE LONGER SHE STANDS, THE SHORTER SHE GROWS”

Grace: “Haven't fashions changed a lot recently? When I got this dress, I thought it was long.”
Dot: “Probably it was, but just think how long it has been since you got it.”

RESOLVE

I have so very much to do,
    I think I'll not do anything;
Sleep is calling on me, too.
I have so very much to do,
The time I'd spend I'd surely rue,
    And truly small results 'twould bring;
I have so very much to do,
    I think I'll not do anything.

HIS PLEA

“There are no gaps I cannot bridge, no yawning voids I cannot fill. Beyond the cavities of doubt I will find the truth. I will know the cause of this dull ache of despair, if you will only bestow the privilege. Don't make me wait! Won't you smile?—I'll swear your feasts shall be served with golden plate—there will no longer be cause for distress. Please open your mouth and say yes.” said the dentist to the stout, gray-haired old lady.

—MARTHA BOAZ

ARROGANCE

A smart roadster was drawn up to the curb. It was low-slung, with long, rakish lines. It seemed as if one could sink down and rest forever on the soft green upholstered cushions. The fittings were burnished silver; the car was perfectly equipped with the latest gadgets. An old T-model Ford rattled by and splashed mud all over the roadster.

THE CHASE

Tarry, O Fame, in your furious gait;
Wait, O Wealth, till I find the key.

Story

TIME—May 1, 1232

PLACE—A village green in Provence, France

On the first of May the merchants, monks, shepherds, shepherdesses, nuns, knights, country folk, and troubadours of Provence gather together for a day of festivity. The traveling troupe affords entertainment, but the most important event of the day is the contest of the troubadours. A golden violet, as token of the favor of the queen, and the honor of crowning her are to be bestowed upon him whose song shall prove most pleasing.

Guillaume, the first troubadour in the contest, sings of heroic deeds. Francois, the second troubadour, sings of the love of a boy and a girl, and the third troubadour, Arnauld, sings of wind, rain, and spring. He is declared victor.

- I sing of deeds heroic and the two-edged sword

- Of pillaged towns and cities on the pyre;
- Of slaves who wept and perished in their blood;
- Of pomponne marches in triumphant hours.

PART III—THE CORONATION

- O beauteous Queen, I can not sing of love,
- For my sad heart was rent upon that thorn.
- I fain would sing of winds upon a hill.
- When April shakes her hair in early morn.

- Who ride for bravery in splendid train,
- But of the cool, sweet voice of nature, heard
- A calling through the fragrance of the rain.
- Upon the dewy green there is the sound

- Of flowery tread. 'Tis May upon the hill,
- And all the world’s awake with joyous spring,
- And there is dancing by the sparkling rill.

The School Annual

We do not think—not publicly, at least—that we are the only people who print school annuals properly. Many printers do as good work as we, and a few do better, perhaps. But those that do better, charge a great deal more. We believe we are the second largest printers of annuals in Virginia. We know that year after year we print the same books, which indicates that our customers like our work. Furthermore we usually do any new annual that is put out in our territory, which indicates that our work is appreciated where we are best known. We always strive to carry out intelligently and in good taste the theme a staff selects. "Intelligence," "good taste," what telling words are these when applied to an annual. They mean that the printer is to enter into the spirit of the work and transfer to the printed page the vision of beauty pictured in the mind of the editor. They mean that he is to guard the staff against the visionary, the gaudy, and the needlessly expensive, by constructive and conscientious advice.
