YOU went to college; you will never forget that. You spent several years at this college, years filled with new experiences, with happiness, with the joys of accomplishment. If you were like the rest of us all was not always serene but for the most part your memory of this place will glow with a sense of pleasure. To recall the memory and bring to life things long since done we publish . . .

SCHOOLMA'AM

Published by the Students of Madison College, Harrisonburg, Virginia
READING AND PRAYER

Remember now thy Creator in the days of thy youth, while the evil days come not, nor the years draw nigh, when thou shalt say, I have no pleasure in them; and further, by these, my son, be admonished: of making many books there is no end; and much study is a weariness of the flesh. Let us hear the conclusion of the whole matter: Fear God, and keep his commandments; for this is the whole duty of man. For God shall bring every work into judgment, with every secret thing, whether it be good, or whether it be evil.

Ecclesiastes 12:1

Author of all wisdom, we thank Thee for the guidance of our thinking and the development of our minds which have come to us thru our college years. We pray most humbly that Thou wilt be with us as we go forth to teach, to strive and further learn.

Amen.
Dedication

They've shared our sorrows and our joys and all our belongings. To them it was that we turned when we needed help or guidance in solving problems, and with them we lived. We did not see them when they were at their best only, but rather at all times—in the morning, when they hated to get up, at noon, when they rushed in from classes, and at night, when they studied. We dedicate the nineteen hundred and forty Schoolma'am to those who will always make our college memories most dear, our Roommates.
In the following order we give you

Madison campus: red tile roofs—gray stone walls—white columns—spruce and fir trees—flowering shrubs—green lawn.

Madison days: classes, where we underlined and memorized—the rush home at four-thirty to don hose, with socks over them, for a quick trip to town only for an ice cream cone—sports, which included tennis, basketball, baseball, badminton, and hockey, with sore muscles the next day from either too much or too little exercise—club meetings, where we blackballed a few candidates and voted in many new members.

All of these are things which we remember and shall remember, and the staff of the 1940 Schoolma'am has tried to visualize them all for you. They have been supplemented with a sprinkling of semi-silhouettes to add to the pages a bit of the spice and color which your presence here this year has given to the campus life.

Contents

The scenes that daily met our gaze
The men and women that taught us
The friends that studied with us
The organizations that guided us
The clubs that expressed our tastes
The games that we played together
The stars that we chose to honor
Spotswood Hall and Sheldon Hall, where the Sophomores and Freshmen lived, and Alumnae Hall, where they dated.

Through this gate passed the Freshmen, eager in their quest for learning, and four years later emerged the Seniors, eager to find what the future holds for them.
The columns of Jackson, where some of the Freshmen live.

No one tired of this sight, familiar to all—that of Wilson's majestic columns.

Jackson Hall, with its lively Freshmen inhabitants, and Harrison Hall, with its dining room and music studio.
Alumnae Hall, in which we waited for our rooms to be assigned, and attended receptions.

The waiting for program cards to be checked—conferences about courses—and finally a class until four-thirty every day.

Reception room where we dated and listened to the radio.
The gymnasium in Walter Reed Hall, where everything took place from registration and classes to dances and athletics.

Quiet! and one was deeply absorbed in some interesting book from the shelves of the Browsing Room in the library.
Reed, Wilson, and Maury, in which the future teachers went to classes each day.

The auditorium in Wilson, where we attended tri-weekly chapels, entertainments, and that sorrowful occasion of graduation.
When it rained it poured, but everyone seemed well prepared.

The spring, with sun and a green campus, was a joyous sight to see.

Of course we had snow, and all of us enjoyed the winter sports which were so novel.
WITH new improvements in equipment and new faculty members, approximately eleven hundred girls, our largest student body ever, came to Madison for the session of 1939-40. In the faculty seats in chapel we saw twelve new instructors, among them a librarian with the new Madison Memorial Library as a workshop, a registrar to keep track of our class cuts and grades, an English professor with a knack for preaching constructive sermons, a history professor who is one of our own local alumnae, and new additions to the other growing departments.

It was almost difficult to find our way around, because of the many changes made during our absence. We rushed into Dr. Converse and Mr. Stanley’s office looking for mail, which we eventually found in the basement of Harrison; and to our surprise the old student government room was transformed into a recording studio, with the latest equipment for putting Madison on the air and on the disc; we climbed to the fourth floor of Wilson for our club meetings in the newly finished apartments; no longer did the Seniors eat with the Juniors, but dined in the pine-paneled exclusion of their own dining hall, a collegiate version of a Rathskeller.

The publication of the Virginia Teacher had given way to plans for the publication of the Madison Quarterly—only a pipe-dream now, but soon to be a reality. For our cultural development we were provided with such well-known artists as Eva LeGallienne in Ibsen's Hedda Gabler and The Master Builder, Hanya Holm and her dance troupe, and Ernest Hutchinson—nationally known pianist. The production of Thornton Wilder's Our Town by the Stratford Dramatic Club and the sponsoring of the male chorus of the University of Pennsylvania by our own local Glee Club were outstanding contributions to the entertainment of the student body.

Weekly assemblies, for students only, created a closer union between the students and the organizations of which they are a part. College spirit was further intensified by the performances of the undefeated basketball squad, accompanied by the college band and enthusiastic crowds.

Yes, a lot of changes have been made and achievements accomplished, all adding to the growth of our alma mater.

The School of Music

We blew a pitch pipe, sang scales and syllables when we really knew we couldn't sing at all. Through the well-used devices of sitting on the edge of the chair and thinking the tones up high, we did, much to our surprise, get through with a swelling amount of knowledge of music. But from the amateurs the music faculty pulled the more professional, and through their efforts we had a Glee Club, an orchestra, a band, and those lovely individual recitals during the spring quarter.

Into the life of every prospective teacher among us there came a time for participation in what is known as Student Teaching. It may have been at the Main Street School, at the Harrisonburg High School, or in one of the outlying communities, Dayton, Bridgewater, or Pleasant Hill—to which you commuted in the college car. But the problems were essentially the same: lesson plans, which always worked out in the way exactly opposite to what you wanted, when someone asked the wrong question; individual differences of children—if they had only been made all alike, they might stick together; conferences, in which you discussed everything from the child’s history to the ethics of a future teacher; home visiting, when you didn’t know what to say, so you said nothing. These were the trials of a student teacher, but it wasn’t so bad after all; and you got practical experience for the years in which you are to follow the profession.
Necessary to the last degree and very vital to the smooth running of the college was the administrative staff.

It was the mission of Miss Hopkins to inspect our rooms and to see that our dormitories looked up-to-standard. She always came on the one morning of the week when we had decided to sleep late and had dashed out of bed as the bell rang for class—showering the room with our possessions, causing it to look as if a cyclone had just hit.

Remember the dandelions which came up all over the campus? Mr. Long, who supervised their clipping when they grew up into puff balls, also had men ready when anything needed moving or any repair jobs were to be done. His duties were taken over during the spring quarter by Mr. Early, and we saw the buildings given a new exterior trimming in the form of a coat of paint.

Most of this staff worked in offices. It was Miss Blain's and Miss Carr's responsibility to aid the Dean of Women in her sanctum, keeping straight how many week-ends we had been off campus during one quarter, seeing to our date slips and late permissions. Mrs. Funkhouser assisted the registrar in keeping our essentials for graduation and our class cuts. Mrs. Hamaker, Miss Roller, and Mrs. Sharpes worked in the business manager’s office and presided over the records and our bank accounts—which were usually at the status of zero.

Miss Waples helped Dr. Weems in the college infirmary to cure our ailments, which ranged from flu and mumps to cuts and bruises. They always had some healing salve or pills to administer.

Miss Ralston’s work was to keep the lines at the switchboard straight and to put the mail, when there was any, into the right box. Miss Thomas saw that our food was on time, and Miss Hudson supervised the social activities of the seniors.

Yes, theirs were necessary ministries, and they performed for us services which we shall not soon forget.
As professor of biology and Christian gentleman, Dr. McConnell was among the best-loved members of our faculty. He received his degrees at Virginia institutions, but went abroad for study in the biology laboratories of Jugoslavia, Germany, France, and Norway. Dr. McConnell had made extensive research on the hydra, and his papers have appeared in international publications. Although he has gone on, Dr. McConnell has left inspiration and ideals for others.
The Senior Class chose for its officers girls having leadership ability—but they also had other distinctive characteristics. When it was time for business, they were business-like; but when it was time for fun, they were ready to join in.

"Meda," although small in body, had a rich personality. She was friendly to everyone and always wore a smile. No matter what the issue was, "Meda" worked for the good of her class and used her voice to sound the opinions of those whom she served. The responsibilities belonging to a class president she assumed willingly, and effectively fulfilled.

Nor did Marcella fail in any way to do her part as vice-president. She was a very capable girl and one who gladly cooperated with the other officers at all times in working for the welfare of her class. She was a typical college student—one who was admired by those who knew her.

The class also made a wise choice when it selected Charlotte for secretary. She was very willing to serve her fellow-students and always did her work well. Charlotte’s appearance was striking and her personality attractive. In college she was a friend to all she met.

For treasurer the class needed a person who was both responsible and accurate. To fill this office "Gerry" was chosen, and never during her year of service did she fail to come up to the high standards which had been set for her. She accepted her responsibilities in a good-natured manner, and was always just the girl her class needed in that office.

"Dot’s" ability and striking personality fitted her for many services, but the class was especially fortunate in selecting her for sergeant-at-arms. She was a very capable officer, and one who willingly did her part in carrying on the activities of the Senior Class. Her good disposition has been admired by all who knew her.

Certainly the class needed a capable person for reporter, and this office was efficiently filled by "Peggy." She was interested in the activities of her class and desired to serve in the best way she could those who had selected her. Her personality was admirable and her friends numerous. She met everyone with a smile and a friendly "hello."

In this small space only a few things could be said about these six girls who so efficiently served as the leaders of the Senior Class of 1940. They were typical college students but, more than that, they were typical class leaders!

The Senior Class sponsors were Miss Helen M. Marbut and Dr. H. A. Converse, and the mascot was Beatrice Ott.

On the opposite page, in attitudes of repose, are seen members of the Senior Class Council. But repose was not always their lot, for they usually had to be up and doing.

It was theirs to elect hostesses for Senior Hall and to appoint suite-groups for answering the telephones—which seemed to ring constantly. Again, it was their high function to see that dormitory rules and proprieties were observed and to advise with any girl who might be in danger of becoming a discipline problem. Endeavoring thus to foresee and to forestall possible errors into which some of their classmates might inadvertently fall, this Council stood always ready to serve as a sort of buffer between any possible unwary individual and the higher Council of Student Government, which had the power and the obligation to act in these matters.

The Senior Class chose as president for its Council Frances Cole, in whom they vested the responsibility.

"Shreck," the house president, looked after the general welfare of Senior Hall and had the specific tasks of locking doors and calling house meetings—where everyone appeared looking very unnatural in bathrobe, slippers, and hair-curlers.

"Meda" and Marie were also members of this Council, by virtue of their positions as presidents of the Senior Class and of Y. W. C. A., respectively.

Miss Ruth Hudson, social director, was faculty adviser.

SENIOR CLASS HISTORY

What a big place this was when we arrived at college (then State Teachers College) for the first time, hoping that we looked experienced, but soon showing how green we were. We were escorted to a firmly established room, wondering how in the world we’d break the ice with a strange roommate — or maybe two — who had been high school friends and talked continually about people with whom we never had the faintest inkling of acquaintance. They even went so far as to break Bill’s picture the first night. And registration—it was more of a nightmare than the cry we had had the night before. It looked as though they had run out of figures for classes and had resorted to confusing us still more by means of letters.

On our first class day we rode forth as cowboys (or maybe cowgirls were more appropriate here), and lassoed everyone in sight.

After a summer’s holiday, we returned with new tales of adventure to relate to any susceptible listener, and new photographs to rave about. Because of our look of superiority we were actually mistaken for seniors, but we knew we were slipping somewhere, for the mail grew slimmer and slimmer.

Those long- awaited privileges were ours at last, and we could be seen downtown in the presence of a man after dark. And we could go down by ourselves—in threes.

This was the first time we had really seen the lights of Harrisonburg. And it was the first time we had seen our own lights after 10:30, for that was the year when 11:00 lights were granted and everyone had an extra half-hour in which to put off till tomorrow what should have been done that day.

Class days we swung as swingsters and, with the exception of the moments when it rained and our hats fell apart, we all had a swell time.

Juniors! How we had looked forward to that title! It meant that we had a little sister class and were rated as upper-classmen, with the mature-sounding privilege of chaperonage. It also meant that we could ride with dates—if we had a date, and IF we promised not to stop. That year we got a new name on our letter-heads — Madison
College—and we laid the blame of our permanently empty mailboxes on this change in address. The Dean of Women's office saw less of us because we had the privilege of signing off-campus slips in our own dorm. And we each took a turn at playing hostess to the masculine callers, who invariably dated someone living on the third floor.

Gold-diggers was our class theme, and we were not out of money for a day at least, even representing human money bags in our costumes. But the chapel program that day dug far beneath our glittering exteriors and revealed our purpose to be digging not for ordinary gold alone but for the gold of knowledge.

And we were still digging for knowledge when senior year rolled around, with the glad-to-graduate but hate-to-leave feeling that it brought. We gave a great deal of thought to the placement situation, the war in Europe, and the Hope Chest (with greatest emphasis on the last). And before we knew it we were saying good-by, promising to write twice a week and to return the white dress we had borrowed to graduate in.
With a president like “Red” Pence, (alias Anna Jane, or “Little Sister”) the Juniors couldn’t keep from having a howling success of a year, even if they had tried. “Red” is the kind of girl who gets her class to work, and to like it! She’s the person who made “co-operation” something besides a topic for dull editorials in school newspapers. Maybe it’s her ready come-back, or her grin; maybe it’s due to her performance as the daring “Señor” on class day; it might even be the color of her hair! But, whatever it is, “Pence” has it—and she might give Dale Carnegie a few lessons.

Frances Wright—“Fran” to her closest friends, “Fannie” to Dr. Converse, or just plain “Wright”—is the kind of vice-president who isn’t just an “also ran.” Unequaled energy, talent enough to give away, and a full supply of common sense, “Wright” is one Junior who rises to every occasion.

Betty Whitelegg—English-born, artistic, and capable in every way—wielded the pen of the Junior class, and didn’t let her duties stop there.

Jinky West, the class Morgenthau, aside from her official duties, found time for such extra-curricular activities as diamond rings. If you’ll promise not to murder us, we might add that she’s a gem herself!

Business-like? Appearances are deceiving, because Kitty Moltz is really a business manager in social-committee clothing! She’s another artistic young lady with a flair for saying things the way they ought to be said.

The girl with a smile for everyone, a voice that never raises itself, and a conscientious way of working, whether it be as a home economics major or as a class sergeant-at-arms: if you haven’t already guessed, that’s Jinks Colonna.

The dynamic personality which literally spells efficiency and capability is Julia Ann Flohr, the class reporter who rose to the position of editor-in-chief!

The girl with the Southern drawl who doesn’t say much, but when she does talk, makes it worth listening to—Margaret Baylor, president of the class council.

Curly hair encouraged by the rain that most of us dread, tact and plenty of it, the home economics major who looks like the “physical ed.” type—that spells Faye Mitchell, a member of the council.

Dark eyes and the kind of hair that goes with them—last but not least—another member of the council—Clara Vawter.

The Junior class had the honor of having Dr. Rachel Weems for their big sister, Mr. Conrad Logan for their big brother, and small Edgar McConnell for the mascot.

We of 1942

Diminutive Jeff, the leader, somehow contrives to get everything done when it should be, without anyone’s realizing how hard she works. We wonder how she can do all of the many things she does, and still have time to spend so many week-ends at the University of Virginia—or is it W. and L., or Hampden-Sydney?

Our vice-president, Catherine, is often seen tearing around campus from Glee Club to German Club and thence to something else. She uses enough energy to wear three people out, but her happy disposition never lets her down.

Tony’s popularity with both boys and girls is sure proof of that unfailing personality but, with all of the fun she has, Tony keeps that Sigma Phi Lambda record high.

Katherine’s willingness to help on all occasions, plus a smooth temperament, makes her one of our popular personalities. When she sits behind the table in Harrison, her ready smile keeps paying class dues from being such a task.

Maybe it is the prom-trotting which Nettie Lee does that makes her such a good dancer, or vice-versa. But dancing isn’t her only accomplishment. Nettie Lee’s versatility is typical of her abilities and her execution of them.

If there are gray skies, she’ll make “a change in the weather”—for when Hart sings, the campus sings with her. When she dances, the campus dances along. Eleanor’s gay charm has made her the center of attraction everywhere she goes.

A laugh for every occasion—that is Sites’s motto. Perhaps it explains why she gets along so well with faculty and students alike. Jane’s irrepressible sense of humor has put her in many a tight place, but it always gets her out again.

Being president of the class council is no easy job, but Joy goes after it as she does everything, quietly and efficiently. That easy-going manner has won Joy many friends and admirers.

Mrs. Adele Blackwell was the big sister of the class, Mr. Raymond Dingedine was the big brother, and little Betsy Lynn Gibbons was the mascot.
Seated: Katherine Curling, treasurer; Evelyn Jefferson, president; Jane Sites, reporter

Standing: Antoinette Eastham, secretary; Nettie Lee Garnett, sergeant-at-arms; Eleanor Hart, business manager; Catherine Funkhouser, vice-president

SOPHOMORE CLASS HISTORY

Madison upper-classmen scattered in haste as nearly four hundred members of the class of ’42 poured into the campus for the first time two years ago. Seemingly having stormed in from every direction, the girls were gathered together and settled down under the leadership of Margaret Moore, freshman president, and later, under Evelyn Jefferson, sophomore president, to glide through two eventful and sometimes bumpy years.

Since the arrival of this group, there have been numerous happenings on campus, such as the appearance of the new curriculum and the new class-cut system, but probably the most noteworthy though less tangible occurrence to the sophs has been the discovery of talents of all sizes and shapes among the members of the class. These talents began to reveal themselves early in the first year and have rapidly increased as time has gone on. The abilities range from the Hawaiian dancing as done by Eleanor Menin to the pounding rhythm displayed by drummer-girl Ott, whose 1900 car is rapidly becoming a landmark at Madison.

Revealing a large number of musically inclined students, the class boasted nine orchestra players, twenty-two members of the Glee Club, of which Jane Dingledine is the new president, and several members of Aeolian, now led by Kathryn Walker. Several of the music-loving sophomores also appeared in Madison’s swing band, The Lost Chords.

In other fields of college life are found Virginia Woodward, basketball sport leader; Mary Belasco, badminton sport leader; Pat Johns, cartoonist for the Breeze and Julia Kilpatrick and Louise Parks, new managing editors of the Breeze.

Madison swayed and tottered on its axis when the sophs gaily laughed their way through class day. This year, having changed the theme from the “heart throbs” of their freshmen year to radio announcers broadcasting over station S-O-P-H of the WMC network, they erected a radio tower and sent signals by means of small aerials on caps. The evening program, presented for the first time at Madison in Wilson auditorium, satirized a day of radio programs, including advertisements, a children’s hour, Kate Smith and others. There was more than the merry side as manifested by Eleanor "Bing Crosby" Hart and Corinne "Joan Davis" Riley, however, there was the serious side explained by Evelyn Jefferson when she told of their desires to attain and broadcast higher ideals of the college.

The sophomore class has seethed with activity, particularly because of a number of graduating students who tore madly to and from student teaching and at the same time struggled to make an especially good impression, with an eye to the future. Less serious activities have included going to town at night, a sophomore privilege, and seeing who could hear the most of Glen Miller.
We of 1943

Assuming electoral responsibility for the first time, the Freshman Class, aided by their sister class, the Juniors, elected understanding, capable, and efficient officers, who have willingly given their best to the class and college alike. The members will always be able to reminisce with pride upon their first year in college, led by these chosen few, each of whom possesses a distinctive personality.

Hannah, our dependable business-like, optimistic president, was equally at home on the hockey field or in the president’s chair of responsibility. Her frankness and abruptness of manner has distinguished her from the mob, while to her the fun and pleasure of college life has come only after she has first served her class to the best of her ability.

Always near and ready to help share the responsibility was Dinny, our vice-president, who is also beautiful, with her curly brown hair and flickering blue eyes, but certainly not dumb. Never failing to lay aside her personal work when called on to assist her superior, this friendly, modest Dinny has done her job well and for the good of the entire class.

In electing tall, dark Sally for their secretary, the class must have noticed her neatly kept hair and decided that she could just as well keep a roll of 450 members. Sally has been “Johnnie-on-the-spot” with correct reports and minutes ready before the president herself remembered them, which denotes the perfect cooperation among the officers.

As banker for the class, amicable, jolly Dot, with her ever-popping dry sense of humor, has every penny of the overflowing treasury accounted for in her big grey book. Dot, being a Home Economics major, has... learned the wide value of her every cent, and just where it will best aid the class.

Tantalizing, fun-loving Jackie was chosen sergeant-at-arms, which position has grown in importance under her good advice and straight thinking. A bundle of energy is Jackie, who has given with pride much of this energy and much time to benefit her class.

Lastly, the class conferred upon happy-go-lucky, carefree Esther—"Dick" to some—that hard-working, toiling position of class reporter to which she has unselfishly given many busy moments. Ess, with her light red hair and happy face, has carried her good nature into all her work for the betterment of her class.

Thus we have seen in brief review the officers of the Freshman Class, who have all served cooperatively and unselfishly for the welfare of that large group.

Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Slaughter were the big brother and sister and Betsy Lynn Gibbons was the small mascot.

HELEN WALL
Hillcrest, the President's Home
Before we entered college we received a small purple book with gold stamping on the cover and packed with so much information that you knew positively that only a dictionary could be any fuller of such foreign terms as "quadrangle," "honor points" and the like. This was called a handbook, and it was published and sent to each new student so as to acquaint them with the college regulations and give them many miscellaneous hints before they left home to attend college.

To the new girls Student Government began to function immediately upon their arrival on campus. You were greeted by some old girl as soon as you got here, but that didn't make you feel one bit less homesick. In the beginning rush of getting settled you attended Handbook Classes where you learned what was in that book, the faculty reception, where you got all mixed up, and the picnic supper—all sponsored by the Student Government Association.

Later on in the fall we dressed in our best to attend the Old Girl-New Girl Wedding, a ceremony officially forming the ties of binding the new students in closer harmony with the old ones, which lasted "till graduation doth us part."

In February the student elections came up again when we felt that we had only installed those who were then in office. In a truly democratic way, which included a nominating convention of which the members were elected from each class, the new nominees were put up. On election day almost every student voted and the victors were the next in office. The Student Council is also elected by popular vote of the different classes of the school. The Social and the Standard committees were the only appointed officers. They were appointed on ability to serve alone.

"Democracy is something deeper than liberty; it is responsibility," is the motto of the Student Government Association, and that was something of the spirit that it endeavored to instill in the minds and lives of the students at Madison.

The responsibility of creating a spirit of cooperation between faculty and students, of helping new girls to become adjusted to an entirely unfamiliar way of living, and of maintaining an atmosphere of steady progress in an environment conducive to intellectual and social development, rested with this organization.

STANDARDS COMMITTEE

With Gladys Dickerson as chairman, and working under the direction of the Student Government Association, the Standards Committee was made up of nine members. It was they who helped to formulate and maintain the proper standards of dress, conduct and social activities both on and off campus.

“Standards Day” on February twentieth was climaxed by a fashion show in Wilson Hall, at which Mrs. Pauline Moore of Guggenheimer’s, Lynchburg, was the commentator. The students modeled their own clothes to show the good standards of a college girl’s wardrobe and Mrs. Moore gave an interesting talk on the high lights of new spring fashions.

The Standards Committee is appointed by the President of the Student Government and the Dean of Women, with the approval of the Student Council. The chairman, with the aid of the Dean of Women and the President of the Student Government appoints the other members. A written report of the committee’s activities was sent each quarter to the Student Council, which had the authority to make any changes in the membership whenever it seemed best.

The Standards Committee also assisted the Social Committee in serving at teas, dances, and receptions.
SOCIAL COMMITTEE

Thursday afternoon in Alumnae Hall—with music, firelight, and tea and cookies; you dressed up with a hat and gloves. Fall, spring, Home-coming, and final dances—birthday dinners on the formal side—and the Saturday night movies in Wilson Hall, with a balcony full of dates—all of these very nice, and smoothly managed by the Social Committee.

Being responsible for the campus social life of over eleven hundred students was a large order for the year 1939-40; but each of this small, capable group of girls gave a good deal of time, thought, and talent each to her individual job. Weren't Ellen's place-cards attractive at the banquet tables? Didn't they all manage the teacups well, not to pour the scalding contents of one into the guest's lap while handing her another with a smile?

Late permissions the Friday night of a dance weekend, and the Social Committee having a big time decorating the gym. They never knew whether there'd be enough paper or tacks, and once there weren't—or did you notice?

How did you enjoy having to go back to the dorm in the rain for your Lyceum ticket? But once you got to the movie, if a bit homesick, you probably did a little raining on your own hook.

Y. W. C. A.

Beginning with a pre-school retreat at the college camp, Y. W. had a full and exciting year. All the old functions were carried on, and new ones added. None of us can ever forget the blue and white "Who-are-you?" triangles that we all wore at the beginning of the year—the worship services in the green out-of-doors at camp—the Big Sister-Little Sister party—the shuddering organ on Sunday afternoon worship programs in Wilson—the candle-light services, with their flickering quadrangle of lights—cabinet meetings on Wednesday evenings, which we always closed with "Blest Be the Tie That Binds"—our new blessing—the Christmas kid party—the thrill of visiting the little folks at the hospital and at the children's home—the firelit picnics in Mr. Dingledine's backyard—so many, many never-to-be-forgotten things.

As new projects we kept a bulletin board, sponsored discussion groups, gave exchange programs with other colleges, and organized clothing drives. In June we sent to Blue Ridge, North Carolina, our largest delegation to date. And, most of all, we grew closer to the ideals of our organization through working and playing, through thinking and worshiping, together.

ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION

Directing the activities of the Athletic Association were the members of the Athletic Council, which included association officers, sports leaders, and class representatives.

The council opened its season with a series of events for the newcomers at school. These consisted of a sports carnival, an old girl-new girl hockey game, the odd-even hockey games and later, an old girl-new girl basketball game.

After directing inter-class hockey, the council decided to vary its usual procedure in basketball and softball, so competition between the different dormitories was stimulated. Each dorm had a team and whether it rained, snowed, or “sunshone,” those desirous of playing were out on the field or court.

Other intra-mural sports were offered, according to the number who were interested. The Porpoise Club continued with its swimming, while the first real badminton tournament at Madison was inaugurated and completed.

New in sports was the fencing class, organized in the middle of the second quarter. More than fifty girls joined this group and formed a club under the sponsorship of the Athletic Council. At the end of the season all those who had participated in the fencing were given a picnic.

As spring sports—archery, golf, tennis, and softball—came into full swing, the main events of the athletic year were presented. Shortly after the traditional tapping ceremony, May Day was held. Assisting in dances and in the program were the newly organized Mercury Club, for physical education majors and minors and the Modern Dance Club, as well as the physical education classes.
THE BREEZE

As familiar as the family album, as vital as the New York Times, as full of news as Walter Winchell, was the Madison version of the metropolitan newspaper—the BREEZE.

Keeping up with the other cosmopolitan weeklies, the BREEZE this year sent its bosses—Taylor and Overton—to the Associated Collegiate Press Convention in Des Moines, Iowa, chalked up a first-class rating in the A. C. P. critical service for collegiate newspapers, conducted an assembly program on the side, and carried out its aim of a scoop a week!

Within its official headquarters—marked on the outside by the warning, “Quiet! Genius at Work,” and on the inside by the telephone minus its mouth-piece but displaying on the wall the call-numbers of possible news sources, two clicking typewriters, remembrances of past editors, the morgue of campus celebrities, wire baskets, yellow paper, Petty’s drawings, and the motto, “Be glad of life because it gives you the chance to laugh, to love, to live, and to look up at the stars”—the BREEZE gathers momentum for its big blow on Friday night. Here it is that banner headlines are strung, scoops are dug up, the news is stretched to fill four blank pages, and finally—replete with columns, features, cartoons, sports, society, and dog-ears—the BREEZE goes to press again.

Every member of the staff, whether she be a journalist of 1929 or of 1939, a future Dorothy Thompson or a prospective Ma Perkins, feels some part of her left behind forever in the cemented walls of the BREEZE room, where history is made at night.

THE SCHOOLMA’AM

The “big secrets” are all out, with the publication of this book. It was fun to work and to hope that the Schoolma’am would be well received, that the Seniors would like the white covers which adorn their copies as an exclusive honor and a total surprise to them, and that all the students would enjoy thumbing through the pages and remembering when they did those things and how Madison appeared in nineteen hundred and forty.

Opening the year, we had a chapel program to prepare the student body for the arrival of the photographer and to announce that all the girls would wear sweaters and skirts for their individual portraits, as this familiar attire gives a much more informal air.

A little later in October an excited editor and a no less excited business manager packed their suitcases and boarded a train for Des Moines, Iowa, as delegates to the Associated Collegiate Press Convention. They returned with new ideas for the yearbook, which they were eager to put into use.

The atmosphere of the editor’s office was not always serene, for there were deadlines to be met with the engraver, and there were headaches over the publisher’s demand for copy to fill blank spaces which seemed to fairly swallow the words.

The light in the annual room burned late many nights—with all due permission slips; otherwise there was at 10:15 a rush to make it back to our respective dormitories. Cooperation and the untiring efforts of all who assisted have made this thirty-first volume of the Schoolma’am possible.

 ALPHA LITERARY SOCIETY

Alpha exists as the only literary society on campus, an independent, significant organization. Bound together by ties of common interests in poetry, music, creative writing, drama, and hobbies, Alpha adopted group-study programs, which proved very satisfactory.

Each group, numbering not more than fifteen girls, set out to study the branch of literature in which its members were interested. They read and presented plays, reviewed worth-while books, encouraged creative writing, fostered an understanding of the best of past and contemporary poetry, and studied and learned the best ways in which to spend one's leisure time. At the end of each month all groups participated in a joint meeting, when the rest of the society had an opportunity to see and learn what developments along other lines of literary study were made.

Under the leadership of Nancy Bailey, president, Alpha made much progress this year. A complete re-organization was effected, with a new constitution which added some requirements for admission into the society and for the retention of membership in it. Alpha has not, however, lost her democratic spirit. This was merely a move forward toward a stronger and better future.

Alpha carried on many activities. In one of the joint meetings a musical contest was held on recognizing familiar tunes, singers, and musicians. Prizes were given. A Professor Quiz contest was held at another meeting, testing the members on literary questions of the day. The Alpha members did not confine their activities to the club only. They were in charge of a Sunday Y. W. program last fall. They also entertained at a tea given for the members of Lee, Lanier, and Page societies, and their sponsors.

The Alpha members had their fun, too. Last fall they rolled up their blankets and left campus cares behind to spend a week-end at the college camp. Besides that, they had two very enjoyable socials. Twice this year the Alpha goats came out, wearing white dresses, big green bows of ribbon, and the Alpha seal.

Jane Draper as vice-president, Mary Dryden Hodges as secretary, and Alice Griffith as treasurer, worked faithfully in their positions, and proved themselves real leaders. It is, however, to Nancy Bailey and her unflagging efforts during the past year that the society owes its present strong organization and position on campus.

Alpha members were not alone in their literary ventures and re-organization work, for they had the able assistance of their faculty sponsors, Mrs. Ruebush and Mr. Slaughter.

Alpha has had her "pioneer bumps," but the years have brought success, and she looks forward to a future full of new accomplishments.
HIKING CLUB A notice on the bulletin board: “Hiking Club meet at Sheldon Arch, 4:30”—and you knew that a group of girls would don their saddle shoes, or the most comfortable ones they had, and hurry so as not to get left. The walking had the purpose of showing the girls such nearby places as Dayton, Massanetta Springs, the “Frog Pond,” Pleasant Hill, the town reservoir, and Massanutten Peak—and the effects were also shown on the scales after these hikes.

In the fall on its annual climb up Massanutten Peak the Hiking Club invited any others in the student body who wanted to go along to do so. It took two Saturdays to accommodate all who wished to go, and they were ably led by Dr. Duke. How impatient everybody was in the eight o'clock classes those mornings when you heard the train tooting on the siding, and you had to make a last dash home for the laundry bag in which you had your day's rations! It was a long hike up, but the view was beautiful, so beautiful that you didn't mind those sore muscles at all.

RURAL LIFE CLUB  When you saw a girl absorbed in some phase of handiwork it was more than likely that she was a member of the Rural Life Club, for it was they who undertook the study of this type of work this year.

This club was formed on Madison campus to promote better understanding among those students who come from rural communities and those who are planning to teach in rural communities. Its members were taken mostly from former 4H Club members and it was organized in such a way as to carry on the work that this club had started in the high school.

One out of town speaker contributed a great deal to a meeting in the spring. He was Dr. Ellis Kirkpatrick, the field secretary of the American Youth Commission of the American Country Life Association, who spoke to them on the work which clubs of this type were doing all over the United States.

This club is a member of the National Rural Life Association.

Lights were dimmed, and the curtain slowly parted on another Stratford Dramatic Club presentation. In the house the audience ceased its murmuring and settled quietly as the play opened. Back-stage there was a different story as the time at last arrived for entrances. Last-minute make-up was applied, and a highly excited group gathered in the wings, the ones new at the game muttering lines, while the veterans sat calmly by and awaited their cues. Electrician Jeannette Furman stood at the switch and waited for the signal for the dimming of lights and the raising of an important spot on the scene of action. The stage crew, headed by Ann Batson, took charge of odd jobs and of sound-effects. They said that beans rolled about in a pasteboard box make wonderful rain, and that a sheet of tin is as realistic as thunder itself!

This year has added several successes to Stratford's credit. The mystery production, "Ladies in Waiting," brought quite a store of new material into the limelight. With screams in the dark and a woman detective solving the crime, it held the audience in suspense until the closing curtain.

Perhaps the presentation of Thornton Wilder's "Our Town" should be accredited as the greatest of the year, for it brought something new and entirely different to our stage. Presented by a cast composed of students, faculty members, and friends in town, this ranked exceedingly high because of its careful direction, clever pantomime, and talented acting. Dr. Argus Tresidder ably portrayed the part of stage manager; Dr. Leland Schubert as editor of the small town newspaper added whimsical humor to the play; Rita Holland, newcomer to Madison, gave a stellar performance not soon to be forgotten, while Sara Thomason, president of Stratford, added equal distinction. To each and every member of the cast of "Our Town," to all those who helped back stage to make for its success, goes credit for bringing forth the outstanding play of the year.

The Dramatic Club also presented the annual commencement play, "Wish Horses," at the close of the spring quarter.

Membership to Stratford was granted to those who actively assisted in acting, staging, lighting, or make-up. Certain requirements were set up as to the number of plays assisted in and the amount of work achieved. In addition to those requirements, the club voted on the candidates before membership was granted. Talent in the acting field and general interest in dramatic work were of prime importance in the selection of its members.
FRANCES SALE CLUB

The Frances Sale Club is among the most active of our campus organizations. The work done by its members has become a necessary and beneficial part of campus life.

Named in honor of the first teacher of home economics at Harrisonburg, it is composed of students of home economics; and the club activities are in this field.

This year the club established a Frances Sale Loan Fund, preferably for a needy student in their field. This fund will be a permanent benefit at the college, available each year.

Remember last fall when freshmen's fancies fondly turned to—Alumnae Hall, and just as inevitably to cozy Thursday afternoon teas? One of these teas was given by the Frances Sale group. Pleasant and chatty.

But speaking of teas in general, if you never went behind the scenes at one of those functions, you may not have known that it was the Frances Sale Club members who worked in the kitchen, making the tea, fixing the plates. This same service was rendered at the evening receptions.

When guests of the home economics department were on campus for demonstrations or for a fashion show, the Frances Sale members assisted in the entertainment by preparing and serving refreshments.

This spring the girls did a splendid piece of work by helping the local chapter of the American Red Cross in the making of clothes for the Finns.

Thus the fall, winter, and spring of another year at Madison have passed. To be able to look back at a year full of accomplishments and service is a satisfaction familiar to all members of this Frances Sale Club.

The members this year were ably led in their activities by Georgia Bywaters, president. She was assisted by Dorothy Moore, vice-president, who presided over the meetings when the president was absent. The club entrusted into the keeping of Judith McCue all the money when they elected her as their treasurer. Frances Warren was the secretary and Frances Cole the reporter, while Virginia Shreckhise as chairman of the program committee always had entertainment ready for the girls, and Edith Mae Fultz served as the provider for the social occasions, being chairman of the social committee.

FRESHMAN CHORUS

The Freshman Chorus, an organization for any first-year students interested in music, met every week for a half hour’s singing. The group is under the direction of Miss Edna T. Schaeffer and of music-majors appointed by her. Directors for this year include Louise Reynolds and Katherine Butler. Evelyn Kuhnert is the accompanist.

The chorus made its first public appearance at the Christmas vesper service, when it sang several carols. The group gave programs at assembly and at Y. W. C. A. and appeared with the Modern Dance Club during the spring quarter.

Together with the other music organizations on campus the Freshman Chorus took part in a concert presented during commencement week.

CHORAL CLUB

Did you notice how nice the Choral Club looked in their new vestments the last time they sang? It was really a struggle to get them, but under the guidance of Rosa Lee Scott, president, and Ruth McClain, vice-president, it was accomplished. Kathryn Frye, treasurer, came in for plenty of penny-counting on that, too.

Kathleen Rountree, secretary, had a lot of activity and attainment to write into the minutes. The Choral Club journeyed to Bridgewater to attend a musical recital, they gave programs at various churches in Harrisonburg, sang at Anne Kidd’s senior piano recital, ushered at the Glee Club’s Easter Cantata, and gave a chapel program of their own.

The lovely concert given in June by the music department had in the massed chorus the forty blended voices of the Choral Club’s members.

CURIE SCIENCE CLUB

The members of Curie Science Club were a versatile group. Their skills ran along various paths but always in science. Some preferred peering through a microscope at some specimen of the amoeba family in biology lab to making something artificially in chemistry lab. Others preferred to mix batters and doughs in the experimental cookery lab to developing pictures in the dark room. But whatever their main interest was it always came back to that fundamental of science which joined them together.

Membership in the organization was limited to science majors, who upon initiation automatically became members of the Virginia Academy of Science. Each candidate for membership was required to submit to the club some worthy paper or other contribution based on an individual research problem and at the meetings, which were held twice a month, these future scientists exchanged ideas on scientific problems of our world today.

GRANDDAUGHTERS CLUB

The Granddaughters Club was organized in the fall of nineteen hundred and thirty-nine of the daughters of any former students of the college. As their mothers were the daughters of the college they called themselves the granddaughters.

The club was formed to bring the students of years gone by into a closer fellowship through their own daughters and to strengthen the ties which bind them to their Alma Mater. Thus the traditions and memories are passed on from mother to daughter.

In the fall, the club presented to the Madison Memorial Library a penknife that boasted twenty blades when owned by President James Madison.

At Homecoming mothers of the members, together with the faculty, were entertained at an informal tea.

Miss Elizabeth Cleveland, Mrs. J. C. Johnston, and Dr. J. W. Wayland, who were on the original teaching staff, act as sponsors of this club.

ART CLUB  Did you ever see a goat wearing something that resembled a tam, smothered in a smock giving evidence of wear and tear, and carrying a palette? If so, that goat's probably a full-fledged member of the Art Club by now.

How? First of all, her artistic ability was recognized, and she was invited to try out. She tried out. If she was successful, the next step was her initiation. In addition to artistic ability one must, therefore, have shown some amount of endurance and stamina.

The artistic type—you never know how you'll find her room—probably had paint smudges on her hands, face, clothes, and other belongings, not to mention a mess of paper, cardboard, paint, brushes, rulers, stubby pencils, and other artistic paraphernalia lying around. She may have been sprawled on the floor trying to sketch a rhythmic curve on an immense sheet of paper, she may have been standing off and squinting through her eyelashes to get the effect of her latest creation, or she may have been chewing the end of an already well-masticated pencil, trying to get "an idea."

All this work and effort is usually of some service to the school, since it results in posters, class-day decorations, place cards, dance scenery, etc.

In the spring the members, their sponsors, Miss Aiken and Miss Palmer, and the honorary member, Dr. Pickett, had dinner in town; and then it was their time to admire the artistically arranged efforts of others.

GERMAN CLUB

To the strains of "Tales of the Vienna Woods" played in the sophisticated rhythms of Dean Hudson and his Florida Clubmen, Peggy came through the vine-covered arch with her brother, Taylor Weller, to lead the white-clad members and their escorts in the opening figure for the midwinter German formal. The members all carried small nosegays of talisman roses, the club flower, those of the leaders being larger. To carry out the waltz theme further, the gym was decorated to resemble a Viennese garden. It was delightful with lanterns, a green-and-white false ceiling, and window-drops on which were violinists. The music was wonderful, and the hours slipped by quickly while we looked about for partners with whom we had exchange-dances on our cards.

The tea dance was a big success, even if we didn’t get the decorations in the gymnasium finished until almost time for it to begin—aside from the fact that we had the help of some dates who offered their assistance at tacking things up on the high places.

The members enjoyed the dinner at the Kavanaugh Hotel in the spring, when they entertained their sponsors, Dr. and Mrs. M. A. Pittman and Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Slaughter.

On Wednesday evenings the German members assisted the social committee with dancing in the gym, and everyone polished up on the latest dance steps until they had them down to perfection.

The club’s activities this year were ably directed by Peggy Weller, president; Mildred Glass, vice-president; Barbara Haverty, secretary; Kitty White, treasurer; Winifred Rew, business manager; Clara Vawter, sergeant-at-arms, and Barbara Ford, reporter.

COTILLION CLUB

Wasn’t that Midwinter dance set a wow? The crowd set a new high and every one was In the Mood to the rhythms of Earl Mellon.

Red and white valentines on the windows—an old-fashioned girl and some of the old-fashioned “I love you” sentiment, with a red rose thrown in for good measure. They had stayed up in the gym till three o’clock the night before, putting up that false ceiling with the big cluster of red and white balloons. And the heart—didn’t Nellie look adorable breaking through it to open the figure? The red and white wrist corsages worn by club members gave this figure a new air of elegance—as did the fact that V. M. I. cadets had been granted the privilege of attending college dances if back at the post by two a.m.

Cotillion members enjoyed the club breakfast last fall and the dinner in the spring at the Kavanaugh. They had a chance to deck out in their then-new frills and to compare results. They also sponsored the Saturday night gym dance, where we brushed up on the Frisco, and cast envious eyes in the direction of that “Libby” pair. Cotillion, with German, sponsored the final dance, too, you know.

All that was so much silver lining for a certain cloud whose maiden name is “goating.” Brother Rat, you don’t know nothing! Come over and count all the steps on our campus sometime, then give one of our room-and-bath combinations a complete overhauling; and polish it off with—ugh, whatever that was we ate.
LANIER LITERARY SOCIETY

Another Friday night means another Lanier night, when sixty Madison belles religiously climb the winding stairway to the fourth floor of Wilson. With both eyes glued on the Breeze, everyone diligently strives to read the news of the week before the meeting is called to order. Only once, or occasionally twice, would our president, Judy Vinyard, have to request our undivided attention.

Lanier's traditional tea, given for all in-coming students, opened our social calendar. Towards the latter part of the year we entertained all our new members at a theatre party.

Inevitably when these words, "new members," are mentioned, a vivid picture of "goating days" is immediately visualized. A huge violet made from crepe paper, perched high on a head and tied with purple and white ribbons, is nothing other than a Lanier pledge. Besides this she has around her neck a flute; in her right hand she carries a satchel with a Lanier banner on the side; an egg plant occupies her left hand. The flute and satchel are required, since Sidney Lanier, for whom the society was named, carried these during his travels. As for the egg plant, it adds to our colors. Each old member wears a violet made by the pledges. Two days of spring dancing and of reciting the life and poems of Sidney Lanier is climaxed with a rather impressive initiation ceremony.

On down the calendar we find Lanier isscheduled to present a chapel program. Such an announcement automatically reveals everyone's sense of modesty. Apparently the group is one hundred per cent diffident; but when Friday rolls around, we see Virginia Ann Switzer putting her heart and soul into her singing, and Suzanne Smith, just one big smile, tap dancing with perfect rhythm. Thanks to these and to the cooperation of everyone for the success of this program.

Lanier, to show its spirit of altruism, purchased a bust of James Madison mounted on a bronze medal and presented it to the library.

Faint rumors were whispered of changing this organization into a purely social club; but such thoughts may be readily dismissed from your mind. Since 1909 it has been Lanier Literary Society, and for years to come it will remain the same.

Libby Martin, our newly-elected president, already making plans for our next year's activities, will indubitably have a boomerang of success from this year.
LEE LITERARY SOCIETY

“It’s always fair weather when good fellows get together,” and that goes double when the good fellows are members of Lee.

Meeting each Friday night, they hold organized bull-sessions concerning every subject toward which a young girl’s fancy might turn. At intervals these discussions are punctuated by variety programs, including talks by accommodating faculty members and quiz-contests with lollypops for the winners!

Lee united with Page and Lanier this year in welcoming the largest number of new girls in the history of the college. Hilarious dramatizations of Munro Leaf’s sketches furnished the entertainments; and cider and doughnuts the refreshments.

Then came the annual chapel program held each year on the birthday of Robert E. Lee, for whom the society is named. At this program Lee turned actor, director, and producer of a technicolor travelogue of the campus, followed by an old-fashioned blood-and-thunder melodrama where the villain was foiled again (“coises”) and the hero and Little Nell were happily wed. The casts of both productions were studded with stars from the Lee studios, and a commentator explained their somewhat peculiar performance.

Of course the customary herd of goats appeared each quarter, wearing the traditional white-and-gold and saluting old members with a replica of the Lee sword. The sister goats led a direful existence and, in spite of the club’s motto that each member is “wearing the white flower of a blameless life,” these poor creatures were blamed for everything.

And then Lee took its turn at Camp, and this turn came at a most opportune time—just after the installation of new equipment and the launching of two new boats. Lots of fun, food, and ghost stories were enjoyed by all.

From sweater and slacks to Sunday-best is a big jump, but the Lee members took it in their stride. In conjunction with Page, Lanier, Cotillion, and German, they sponsored a tea where members of those societies comprised kitchen crew, floating hostesses, receiving line, and guests of honor.

Three times a year there appear on the campus numerous little specimens, probably of the homo-sapiens variety, who flaunt red capes, red hats, and neon-ish signs. They are Page goats, who spend two days running helter-skelter to obey the commands of established and well-seasoned members of that society.

When this body was organized years ago at the college, it honored itself by taking the name of the writer, Thomas Nelson Page, that voice of Old Virginia. His birth-date, the twenty-third of April, is suitably observed every spring. This day has several other literary associations as well, since it is also the anniversary of the advent of Shakespeare and of Edwin Markham.

Each Friday evening at half-past six, the Page members assemble for a friendly gathering. After the business of the meeting is disposed of, several of the members present a program. In the spring-time the Pages sometimes go on a picnic back of the hill.

Every year this group gives some form of welcome to the new girls. Last fall Page joined with the Lee and Lanier in giving to these a tea.

Miss Hoffman and Miss Wilson are the honorary members of this society, and frequently attend its sessions.

Gwen Trueheart, who served as president during the first two quarters, yielded the gavel in the spring to Linda Padgett. Frances Alexander and Marion Lawrence as vice-president and treasurer gave place respectively to Maxine Calfee and Polly Maniates. The secretaryship passed from Ann Ireland to Ann Batson, in regular succession from Ann the First to Ann the Second. Catherine Ketron was reporter and Linda Padgett chairman of the program committee through the fall and winter, to be followed in these offices by Betty Sanford and Virginia Winfield. Dot Wilkinson bore the heavy responsibilities of sergeant-at-arms.

ALPHA RHO DELTA

Alpha Rho Delta was organized at Madison College in 1931. Its members are those students who have shown definite interest in Greek and Latin classics and have met certain scholastic requirements. The aim of the club is to help develop this interest and create a similar interest among the entire student body.

Alpha Rho Delta had two meetings each month, one of which was strictly for business purposes. The members attempted to develop among students a greater appreciation for the contributions of the ancient Greeks and Romans to our modern civilization. As a project last year, they attempted a reproduction, on a small scale, of a typical Roman house, which, when completed, was painted and furnished in a style comparable to that used by the ancient Romans. This was a material demonstration of the interest of the members of Alpha Rho Delta in classical art and architecture.

Dr. Sawhill, a faculty member and sponsor, showed the club the many colored slides in his collection, as well as Greek and Roman coins and other relics, which he has made available for his students in classical studies and for the members of Alpha Rho Delta.
Although comparatively new on the campus, the Clara Barton Club has already become well established with a rapidly increasing membership.

A few years ago, students interested in the various fields of medicine organized a club under the sponsorship of Dr. Weems and Miss Waples. They named it for Clara Barton, founder of the American Red Cross, who did so much work in this field.

Since then the group has met twice a month. These meetings offered to students in the pre-nursing courses the opportunity to learn more about the profession which they are planning to enter. Frequently people outstanding in medicine addressed the club and conducted these bi-monthly discussions. At other times forums were held on topics pertaining to their own interests and problems.

The members of the club made it a practice to visit hospitals, where they studied these institutions and observed the nurses in the performances of their duties. The activities of the club were directed by Katie Adams, president; Mildred Covington, vice-president; Betty Lester, secretary-treasurer, and Jean Smith, chairman of the program committee.
THE FRENCH CIRCLE

The French Circle attempts to arouse greater interest in and knowledge of French, France, and the French people.

On February twenty-eighth a motion picture entitled "Provence through the Ages" was given in assembly. This dealt with the Riviera, the Rhone Valley, and southeastern France, but stressed the terrain rather than the people—remember those beautiful trees and the water?

At the meetings, games which would include the use of French are played. Other programs consist of music rendered by club members, readings, and occasionally French songs. These have been sung for better or for worse— but sung.

Spring was a busy time for the French Circle. In April the club was a sponsor to a modern language tournament in which high school students competed for scholarships to various colleges.

In May, on Joan of Arc's anniversary, special honors were paid to her by placing flowers on her statue, recently moved into the foyer of the new Madison Memorial Library and decorated with a new coat of paint.
The Aeolian Club is an honorary musical organization whose members are chosen after a successful try-out. Throughout the year the members serve the campus in various ways, among them, in furnishing music for all the formal dinners and teas which are given.

The biggest event of the closing year was the sponsoring of a contest for words and music for a new school song. The contest will close next fall.

Aeolian members will remember many things: the “Rose Song” of initiation—meetings in the Music Room—waiting for the “other” girl who plays with you at a dinner—the shaky knees at try-outs—all the nameless hundred and one things which go to make up happy memories.
A. C. E.

The Association for Childhood Education is a branch of the national organization of that name, and membership in this organization is open to all students and instructors who are interested in study of children and their education.

At the meetings, which are held twice a month, programs were presented by students, faculty members, and prominent speakers from outside the college. The programs of this club were built around two themes, "The Betterment of the Virginia Educational System" and "The Importance of Kindergartens."

As entertainment, a Hallowe'en party was given in honor of the new members, and in the spring a trip to camp added to the festivities.

This year the association established a Memorial Foundation for deceased members. This takes the form of books given to the library, bearing the name of the club and that of the member in whose memory they were placed there.

The club has also conducted drives to get clothing and school supplies for the rural schools near the college.

The club's activities were in charge of Margaret Sheads, president; Dorothy Biker, vice-president; Vivian E. Johnson, secretary; Kathleen Rountree, treasurer; Florence French, reporter; and Kathryn Frye, chairman of the program committee.

SESAME CLUB

The one organization on campus that was for day students only was the Sesame Club. When it was decided to organize a club of this type, the founders chose the name Sesame, from The Arabian Nights, for do you remember Ali Baba, who used the words, "Open, Sesame" for admission to the treasure cave? It was in the same sense that it is used here, for through the club the members wished to gain admission to the other clubs of a cultural and social nature on campus.

When the post office was moved from Wilson to their room in Harrison Hall, the members wandered around for a while, until Dr. Duke made provision for them in new rooms still in the basement of Harrison but with the latest equipment, one for studying, and one for lounging, lockers and all other purposes.

Besides a regular monthly meeting throughout the year, the active members played hostess in the fall to a luncheon in the College Tea Room to which campus friends were invited. They also made merry at the Christmas party held in their room.

At their chapel program in the fall the club presented Mr. Ralph Meyers, baritone soloist.

A Valentine party was given, and a tea in Alumnae Hall to which their mothers and campus friends were invited, and for winding up the activities they journeyed to Riven Rock for their annual picnic.
BAPTIST STUDENT UNION

This organization was formed to make a connecting link between the college and local church, and to make the students feel more at home in the Baptist church while up here. Although never unmindful of the fact that religion is something infinitely greater than church membership, it also stressed the deep significance of such membership, and constantly magnified the local church as among Christ’s chief means and methods for winning the world.

Miss Sibyl Shover has served as the student worker, meeting with the group in their regular sessions and helping them. The union has organized a Baptist choir to take charge of the music for the Sunday night services, and made the initial steps toward the formation of an orchestra.

The Baptist Student Union was very fortunate in having Miss Mary Nance Daniel, the associate southern secretary from Nashville, Tennessee, here for the installation services for the new officers on April seventh. It was possible to send representatives to attend the fall and spring state Baptist conventions.

DOLLY MADISON GARDEN CLUB

They donned their overalls and grabbed their hoes, and off they went to plant another seed in the college garden. The club members were proud of their newly adopted title, Dolly Madison Garden Club, for the wife of James Madison, whose name the college bears.

The outstanding horticultural project of the club was set forth in its objectives as stated in the constitution: to encourage the fine art of gardening in all its aspects; to promote popular education in the value and beauty of plant life and animal life and, through this, the furtherance of the practical conservation of our natural resources.

The Garden Club helped to plant and care for the flowers that were used for the reception rooms and the dining halls on campus. This work was under the direction of Kathleen Rountree, vice-president.

Jane Short, secretary, and Frances Warren, treasurer, took time for digging in the dirt and did a little figuring to keep the club records straight.

Programs and lectures were arranged by the chairman of the program committee, Dorothy Rinker. The club sponsored a film, "Tulip Time," taken at the World's Fair at New York last spring.

This organization is in charge of a chapel program given each year during Virginia Garden Week; and members tour nearby gardens, for the club belongs to the Virginia Federation of Garden Clubs.

Everyone announced in a different way the coming of spring, but the Garden Club said it with flowers.

GLEE CLUB

In the fall the Glee Club presented a chapel program of popular music which left everyone singing “Wishing” for weeks. In December they gave to us their Christmas vesper service and in March another sacred program in which they joined the Bridgewater Men’s Glee Club in singing a cantata. With the coming of spring the members packed their suitcases, or their roommates’, and went to Richmond to sing at a concert sponsored by the Ars Music Guild and to Petersburg.

Glee Club means many things: rehearsals twice a week, and in between, in the Harrison Music Room—singing on the bus to and from trips—new red vestments—singing in the open air under green trees for May Day—the candles and carols of Christmas vespers—tryouts and initiation of new members—tri-weekly chapel services—and the sad moment of turning in vestments.

But more than these things, which will live long in the girls’ memories, they will always remember loyalty and devotion to an ideal, a high set of standards, cooperation and subordination of personal wishes, an endless effort to create beautiful music, and always an attempt to be of service to the college.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS CLUB

During the year the "wars and rumors of wars" turned the thoughts of many people to matters of international concern. We could no longer be interested merely in what went on in our own land, because each country was vitally influenced by what was happening in every other country. Each student tried to study seriously international relations so as to be able to think and act wisely in matters dealing with current problems.

The International Relations Club is an organization for social science students who are particularly interested in studying national and international affairs. At the semi-monthly meetings this year current topics of interest were taken up. The discussions were led by members of the club or by faculty members who were interested in topics of national importance. Members of the social science department, as well as other faculty members, have been very cooperative.

In February the Club sponsored Mr. Arnold Kean, correspondent for a Danish newspaper, who spoke to the students and faculty. Since he was well acquainted with conditions in Europe, his address was of special interest to the members of this organization.

The local club was represented at the Virginia Conference of International Relations Clubs held at Fredericksburg February ninth and tenth. The newly elected president was sent as a representative to the Southeastern Conference held at Chapel Hill, North Carolina, March twenty-first through March twenty-third. At this conference she gained many worthwhile ideas which were of great help to her in directing the activities of the club during the year.

The Carnegie Foundation, through an exchange book service, made many interesting and educational books available for members of the club. These were very valuable in the study of international relations.
The curtains slowly parted and the orchestra was heard softly playing its theme song. It was a most formal performance they presented in chapel during the spring quarter when they gave their annual concert, no tuning up as they had done when they accompanied chapel singing, and evening dresses rather than sweaters and skirts were the prevailing fashion. The absence of "sour" notes was also a pleasant thing to hear.

Organized at Madison in 1937 as a group of eight players, the orchestra now boasts of twenty-six pieces. Lillian Knight is the capable president, and Mr. C. T. Marshall is the able director.

The orchestra not only played at college functions, such as assisting the Stratford Dramatic Club and acting as a recording unit, but it also took trips to play at nearby schools. The schools at which it played are Bridgewater High School, North River High School, Timberville High School, Luray High School, and the Main Street School in Harrisonburg. Everywhere it went it received acclamation for its fine work.

The girls who devoted their energy and practice time twice a week, with the instruments they are playing are: violins, Louise McNair, Ruth Jobe, Geraldine Conger, Helen Avis Grimm, Marguerite Holland and Evelyn Najjum; cello, Louise Vaughan; string bass, Virginia Miles and Dorothy Thomas; saxophones, Ruth Lynch and Juanita Shaver; clarinets, Idajay Bruckner, Gershon Stover, Muriel Math, Virginia Dare Baker, Dorothy Savedge, and Ruth Longworth; trumpets, Shirley Harrison and Geraldine Spitze; alto horn, Anne Kidd and Mildred Rose; trombone, Lillian Knight; drums, Audrey Ott; piano, Edith Snidow; and organ, Evelyn Kuhnert.
DEBATING CLUB

The Debating Club debated the national question this year, which was—Resolved: That the United States Should Follow a Policy of Strict Economic and Military Isolation Toward All Nations Outside the Western Hemisphere Engaged in Armed International or Civil Conflict. In view of the world situation at that time this subject was most interesting and entertaining.

Not only were the debates held among the club members but they also went outside the college campus for opponents. Those colleges whose debate teams opposed ours were Lynchburg College, Hampden-Sydney College, Bridgewater College, and from outside of Virginia, Waynesburg College, of Waynesburg, Pennsylvania. After such a deep subject for discussion the club went social and entertained the team from Bridgewater at a reception in Alumnae Hall. No, indeed, the members did not argue all the time, but spoke at meetings of several Harrisonburg organizations.

At these inter-college debates there was always an interesting exchange of ideas. New members received helpful instructions, old members had experience in radio debating. The club really lived up to its motto: Syllables govern the world.

THE LOST CHORDS

The baton catches the up-beat, and it's music played the Lost Chords' way!

Starting with a few miscellaneous instruments and a wealth of big ideas, the eight founders of Madison's newest musical organization, under the supervision of Mrs. Clifford T. Marshall, wrought a swing band out of chaos. Initial practices were held in secluded spots out of earshot of the campus, and for long hard weeks sharps and flats were played with no discrimination.

Then a slightly limited repertoire of four numbers was perfected, and the Lost Chords made their debut at a basketball game. At this first appearance they immortalized the classic Baby Me and answered all requests from their fans, regardless of the number requested, with one of their four—and only—selections. From this humble beginning they rose to higher things, and at the next basketball game amazed their audience by playing a medley of college songs besides Baby Me.

By this time the Lost Chords had won a name for themselves—in fact, they were referred to by many names, not all of which were complimentary. But they were destined for greater things than an overture to a basketball game. Mortgaging everything in sight but the piano, they secured the price of eleven hit-parade numbers and made plans for an informal dance. As they learned the selections, they also learned to labor and to wait, and not until the first week in May did they give their professional performance, with tickets selling at a dime a dancer. With a repertoire of fifteen numbers well under control, and a first-rate floor show as an added attraction, they played to a capacity crowd of both dates and stags.

Fate was with the Lost Chords that evening, and the swing they played was both sweet and hot. The Off Keys, a trio including Margaret Moore, Eleanor Nolte, and Katchy Butler, gave out with a rhythm that kept things right in the groove. And the band's rendition of Little Brown Jug put even Baby Me into the background.

Now the Lost Chords have money in the bank and bigger ideas for next year. So start swinging, fans, and remember—Glen Millers from little Lost Chords grow.

From the frolicking Sports Carnival at the beginning of school to a beautiful and successful May Day, the Athletic Association worked with perfect coordination and cooperation under the able leadership of Jean VanLandingham.

The Mercury Club, whose membership was limited to physical education majors and minors, was organized with Helen Rector as president. This club denoted a stride forward in the development of athletics on Madison campus.

To the tune of “We’re Back of You Now, Madison,” with music by the Lost Chords and the cheerleaders’ cheering, we put pep and vitality into all of our games. Led by Ruth Jobe and her snappy assistants, the entire school put their souls and voices into vigorously singing “Killy, killy, killy, killy, wash, wash, etc.” and further displayed their lusty spirit by an impressive but tiring snake dance.

True Madison spirit was witnessed in no place more than in Reed when the rafters rang with song and cheers for the purple and gold!
A clash of sticks and the sound of running feet denoted that hockey practices were in full swing, with Miss Marbut on the side lines. Our hockey squad, led by Charlotte Beville, dribbled and drove their way through the season with true Madison spirit.

BASKETBALL

A sharp clear whistle and a thundering roar accompanied our purple and gold sextet as they completed an undefeated record for the year. This coordination and perfect teamwork came only after hours of endless practice and preparation under the watchful eye of Mrs. "J." our coach.

Sharp-shooting Midget Padgett was the capable leader of our successful team, which rolled up victories over Frostburg, the Freshmen, East Radford, East Stroudsburg, Westhampton, Farmville, and Blackstone. This was a record to be proud of and one which the Madison Varsity basketball team has not claimed for several years.

Not to be outdone by the Varsity, the Freshmen by defeating Dayton, Fairfax Hall, and Shenandoah, also compiled a perfect record, led by Carolyn Ray.

CLASS SPORTS

Living up to its slogan of "a sport for everyone," the Athletic Association changed class sports to dormitory sports this year, thus giving to everybody the opportunity to show her skill. Books were thrown down and gym suits were donned for brisk hockey games in the autumn air. A blanket of snow covered the hockey field before Jackson and Junior Halls could meet in that deciding game.
While snow reigned outside, basketball and badminton were vigorously played in the two gyms. With a few comrades to lustily cheer them on to victory, the freshmen in Jackson Hall won the dormitory championship.

The "little" gym was the scene of battles over a funny little shuttlecock. Led by Mary Balasca, a badminton tournament was held, Lona Kuntz receiving the medal.

As in spring "a young man's fancy turns," so do sports turn again to the great out-of-doors, which is always filled with enthusiastic athletes. While others patiently awaited their opportunity, the new tennis courts were initiated on our campus. Tennis is the sport most often pursued after leaving college, as it is a universal game.

Some Indian blood is still alive at Madison, for bows and arrows were taken out of hiding and the ancient sport of archery was begun on the back campus.

Our national sport of baseball also has its place here. A crackle cutting the air announced a clean hit, while the thud of the ball in the catcher's mit said, "You're out," as this true American sport under the leadership of Doris Ramsey took over for the afternoon.

Horseback riding has returned to this campus with renewed interest since the organization of a Bit and Bridle Club. Nothing could be more invigorating than a gallop through the woods on a calm spring afternoon.
En garde! Lunge! Thrust! These popular phrases were heard as the graceful sport of fencing invaded Madison campus.

King Arthur and his knights had nothing on Madison, except a few horses, when a bevy of modern fencers turned out in good old round-table style for the tournament. With foil whistling in the most frightening manner, Mike Lyne was finally declared the Sir Galahad of Madison after defeating Adele Grey.

This sport was brought to our campus through the efforts of Jean VanLandingham, Athletic Association president, with Mr. Ernest Sovereign as instructor. This was our first year at this gentlemen's sport, but there are hopes of a more advanced, but no more enthusiastic, group of knights next year. To strengthen and aid this sport a Fencing Club, with Mildred Edney as president, was organized.
PORPOISE CLUB

Sounds of happy voices and perfectly controlled strokes greeted our ears as we stepped into the lower part of Reed Hall, where our modern swimming pool is located. The Porpoise Club, whose purpose it was to further swimming on our campus, splashed to new heights under the able direction of Jeannette Donohue. Splendid aid was given her by the other officers: vice-president, Jane Pridham; secretary, Betty Sanford; treasurer, Katherine Coupar.

This year the club was divided into three classes, the first being the advanced class which could even cut the water with a perfect jackknife dive. Next came the advanced class which had not quite perfected this diving; while lastly were the beginners, who were taught by the first class the hows and whens of swimming.

Instead of the swimming pageant of former times, this year a meet was held. On February third a part of the club participated also in a meet at Fairfax Hall, in Waynesboro. Programs of figure swimming and diving were often held for members alone.

Another step forward in athletics has been the growth of this swimming club, whose adviser is Miss Dorothy Savage of the physical education department.

MODERN DANCE CLUB

Modern Dance Club, which was organized only last year, made great progress during its first actual year of being on this campus.

The members studied modern dance forms under the direction of Miss Louise Covington, of the physical education department, and presented a chapel program in which we saw their work exhibited. When Hanya Holm and her group of modern dancers presented a recital here in February the members of the club entertained them at a reception in Alumnae Hall after the program. The club also helped in preparing and presenting the dances for the May Day festival.

The members of the club and the officers are: Doris Radskin, president; Betty Sanford, secretary; Ann Akers, reporter; Mary Berger, Adeline Blackwell, Katherine Butler, Mary Conson, Nora Fowlkes, Ann Gough, Shirley Harrison, Marilee Henkel, Lona Kunz, Janet Largent, Ruth Longworth, Alice Monroe, Margaret Montgomery, Tommie Moore, Helen Richardson, Corinne Riley, Sibyl Rosenbloom, Suzanne Smith, Mary Lee Utley, and Marion Wilkinson.

KAPPA DELTA PI

Kappa Delta Pi, an honor society in education, has this year, as usual, encouraged high standards, both intellectual and scholastic, and recognized worthy educational contributions. Its members have been persons having outstanding scholarship and leadership abilities and desirable personal qualities.

The local chapter, Alpha Chi, was installed at Madison College January thirtieth, nineteen hundred and twenty-eight. Membership in Kappa Delta Pi is open only to juniors and seniors who are preparing to teach.

The society occupied one of the recently completed rooms on the fourth floor of Wilson Hall. Formerly a room in the basement of Reed Hall was used. The new room, having many advantages over the old one, has been greatly appreciated by the members of the society. It provided a much more desirable atmosphere for meetings and eliminated the great number of interruptions which were endured when meetings were held in Reed.

To help encourage high scholarship on the Madison campus, the society sponsored coaching lessons. By this plan, students who desired help in any field of work were coached by members of Kappa Delta Pi. Both faculty and students felt that this was a worthy contribution on the part of the members. Improvement shown by the students coached proved the usefulness of the project.

This year Kappa Delta Pi financed a survey of the honor system and student government associations of colleges all over the United States. The society selected a committee which worked up a questionnaire. A copy of this was sent to about five hundred colleges, and the answers were used as a basis of recommendations for the revision of our constitution and campus practices.
The newly elected president was sent as a representative to the national convention held at the Broadview Hotel in St. Louis, Missouri, from February twenty-sixth to February twenty-eighth. At this convention she received many ideas which will be a real inspiration to her in her work.

On Monday, March fourth, Kappa Delta Pi sponsored an "Information Please" contest in chapel. The questions, taken from various fields of work, were submitted by faculty members and students. They were asked by the president of the chapter, and the board of experts, who knew most of the correct answers, was made up of five faculty members.

At the meetings during the first quarter instructors from various departments were asked to speak to the society on topics of interest. During the second and third quarter, group discussions, led by the members, were held. Matters of vital importance and interest on the Madison campus were taken up at these meetings. Each person was given a chance to voice her ideas and ask any questions she had on the subject of the discussion. Members of the society selected the topics, and everyone took part on the programs.

SIGMA PHI LAMBDA

This group of freshmen and sophomores ably met the organization standards of scholarship, fellowship, and leadership. The scholarship requirement was a B average on all past work or an A average for first-quarter freshmen. A surprising number of girls attained this requirement through hard work or intelligence.

Informality and fellowship have been the key-notes of the club's activities and meetings. On the week-end of October fourteenth Sigma Phi Lambda went to camp and really strengthened this feeling of comradeship around a table full of steak and onions. The members had a wonderful time. These girls were leaders on campus, too, if you noticed.

Informal discussions have constituted the main part of their programs. At one meeting Mrs. Frederikson held with the young women present a round-table on "Women." On another occasion Mrs. Stanley, of Harrisonburg, spoke on the European situation. Miss Kay Keiger once made a talk on "Personality." Dr. Pickett later spoke on drugs, narcotics, and new scientific developments—expressing himself in a branch of the English language typical of him and which only A-students understand.

Margaret Moore, president, fulfilled her duties, and obliged with a song now and then.

The meetings, because of their informality and opportunity for discussion, tended to inspire and encourage the members and to add to their store of knowledge.
PANHELLENIC COUNCIL

Organized this year to govern the three national sororities on campus was the Panhellenic Council. Three representatives from each sorority made up the board, of which Margaret Clark of Sigma Sigma Sigma was president.

Soft lights and the tinkle of china, flowers and a receiving line formed the background for the tea given in the fall for all new students. This was the one large social occasion that the council sponsored this year.

Panhellenic’s main function was to govern the rules of procedure for the three sororities at their two rushing seasons, fall and winter.
For every member of the Beta Epsilon chapter of Alpha Sigma Alpha the date May 13, 1940, will long be a cherished one. True enough, the A. S. A.'s are not exceptions when it comes to remembering dates, but who could be oblivious of the day which commemorates their first year of existence? At the eve of this day a year filled with thrills too numerous to mention had ended.

In reminiscing over our past moments of rejoicing, it is quite natural to begin with rush week. To open the season, a joint tea was given with Tri Sigma. Then as our formal rush party a buffet supper was given; for our informal entertainment a "Barn Shindig" was held, with everyone dressed as typical mountaineers. Inasmuch as Hallowe'en was not far away, the gym was decorated with corn shocks and pumpkins.

A peek into this party would first reveal "Meda" Grey-ard bobbing in vain for an apple; and next we cast our eyes upon the sensation of the evening, Winnie Rew wearing a red-and-white checked dress and long black stockings. To top things off, each one of her freckles was reinforced with an eyebrow pencil and her hair was a mass of pigtails. Exhausted from square dancing and gormandized with apple cider, pop corn, and marshmallows, "all hands" drawled fare-thee-well to get a wink of sleep. It was heaps of fun being a mountaineer for a night. So ends our first rush season.

Before going home Christmas, Beta Epsilon filled stockings and stuffed oielcloth animals. To make this an even more philanthropic occasion, the admission to this party was some treasured possession which would make someone happy on Christmas day.

Soon came the time for our second and last rush season. This time an "at home" was given, with our theme centered on "Sweethearts Through the Ages." Skippy Warden standing in a huge heart and serenaded by Ellen Fairlamb to the appropriate melody of "You're as Pretty as a Picture," was the most breath-taking episode of the evening. Our second party featured an A. S. A. carnival arranged in booths, from that of the fortune-teller on down to those dispensing pink lemonade and hot dogs. The paramount success of this party may be attributed to Ann Cowling, who originated the whole idea. After the pledging services of the accepted rushees, Miss Marie Louise Boje and Miss Edythe Schneider, our sponsors, entertained us at a bridge party held in the Dolly Madison Tea Room.

It was our good fortune to be so near the place of an A. S. A. Regional Convention, Washington, D. C. Here Beta Epsilon presented a model initiation; the inspiration of this convention is far beyond verbal interpretation.

A Mother-Patroness ceremony held on Mother's Day closed our social functions with a lasting impression.

Hats off to Frances Barnard, our retiring president, and to every member who helped make our first year a valuable one in every possible manner.

How excited the members-to-be of Alpha Omicron Chapter of Pi Kappa Sigma were on November 18, 1939, as they went about in their white dresses waiting for the arrival of Mrs. Charles Gibson, of Buffalo, New York, national First Vice-President, and Miss Ilen and a group of Pi Kaps from Farmville, to install the baby chapter of the national sorority. At this time thirty-one active members and one alumna member were initiated. Mrs. J. C. Johnston and Miss Nellie Walker were installed as sponsors of the local chapter. After the initiation service, a banquet was given Saturday evening, followed by a breakfast on Sunday morning.

In February, rush week was a new experience to the youngest sorority on campus. They went at it like old hands in the rushing game and had a perfectly wonderful time. The first party was a tri-sorority reception in Alumnae Hall with everyone on her party manners. An “at home” was next, where the rushees dropped in to chat and eat with the old members. The last rush party was in the form of a scavenger hunt. Here the girls raked the campus for everything from a Duke pennant to one of Dr. Weems’s pink pills. When the Panhellenic box was opened it was found that eighteen girls had accepted Pi Kap bids. Remember how we rushed out in our pajamas, with a coat over top of course, to welcome them into our bonds? Our first rush season was a big success.

Among the new officers of Alpha Omicron are Kathleen Dawson, president; Eleanor Hart, vice-president; Kathryn Moltz, corresponding secretary; Janet Largent, recording secretary; Lorena Dobyns, treasurer; Mildred Alley, recorder of points; Lucille Farley, chaplain; Jean Andrews, press agent.

These were installed on April ninth, and it will not be long before they’ll be reminiscing and bringing back new ideas from their National Convention in South Dakota in the summer of nineteen hundred and forty.

This year saw at Madison the three national sororities obtain for themselves a new and firm footing. The Tri Sigmas are proud of their accomplishments throughout their first twelve months. They are the youngest chapter of the oldest national education sorority.

Last fall we were quite excited at the prospect of our first "rushing." We didn't know exactly what was cricket in the way of rush rules, but it is true that we did abide by Pan Hellenic. And it's more than true that that first rushing was fun. There was the formal reception in Alumnae Hall—remember? Wonderful eats and music! Everybody happy. And the informal at the Dinglehines'—we sprawled on the floor, made quick work of those hot dogs, that potato salad, and all (you know what). Singing the songs, our songs, was best of all. Can you ever forget how the whole campus was singing the one that Judy brought back from the National Convention?—Judy was a splendid president; we couldn't have got along without her and her Tri Sigma spirit.

Having our National President with us that memorable day in November was a real treat—as was the party Miss Hoffman gave us, and the convention movie that went with it, Judy and Mac stole that show—right?

We were always out of breath when we finally climbed the last step to the fourth floor of Wilson and to our new sparkling-white room. It was in that room that we held our weekly Monday-night meetings. (Sites was invariably late, but we loved her just the same). There we had our beautifully impressive installation and pledge services. That room holds silently many memories.

Our second rush season, in February, was a big success.

The thing that stands out as we look back over our first full year is the Founder's Day banquet on April 20 in Senior Dining Hall. It was our big affair, and we put it over with all the trimmings. Polly Maniates was responsible for the super-attractive place cards. We were all responsible for its great success.

Yes, it was a good year in Tri Sigma, wasn't it?

With the snowman as a referee, they merrily fought along... Registration in the gym, with all those cards to fill out... The Wilson Cloud Chamber. Get the point, Dunst?... In the caverns... Physics lab... What can you expect to see in the daytime, Jean and Carolyn?
Who wants a boat ride with us? ... A pause to refresh at the top of the peak ... Fancy performance out of gym class ... It's still too cold for wading ... Off to camp ... In the college bus bound for camp, no doubt ... You’ll never get your face clean in that way ... Another minute and a man will be overboard.
Chapel over again? Oh, yes, we had it three times a week . . . Back of the library . . . Home Ec. projects . . . Chapel . . . Projects again . . . Last call for lunch . . . Biology lab . . . Physics lab . . . Table service class . . . Meal time—we ate three times a day too.

Creating

YEAR BOOKS

of Distinction

It takes more than “good printing” to create outstanding Year Books.

The J. P. Bell Company specializes in Year Books. First, by maintaining a Department of trained and experienced personnel that devotes its entire time to the planning and servicing of Year Books. Secondly, by maintaining a plant equipped with the most modern machinery, manned by skilled, efficient workmen.

There is a certain mark of Distinction on all J. P. Bell publications.
